Welcome to the September Network News. Fem’s cover celebrates Greta’s voyage across the Atlantic, taking her uncompromising message to the UN Climate Change Conference in New York on September 23rd. Can one person arriving on that vast continent really make a world-changing difference? History says: YES!

In 1774, Tom Paine made the crossing. As a tax collector in England he had called for better wages to reduce corruption. He was branded a trouble-maker so headed off for a new life in America. He found a job on a magazine (no doubt the local Network News...) and began to develop a powerful and witty style of writing that made the most complex subjects absorbing and engaging. Just a year after landing, he took on the most radical cause of the day: was it time for the American colonists to break away from the greedy and war-mongering British Empire? His argument quickly grew from an article into a pamphlet, and on January 10th, 1776 his soon-to-be bestseller Common Sense was published.

How absurd, Tom argued, that all 3 million colonists had to effectively rush to the shoreline every time a British ship appeared just to find out how much liberty they may or may not have been granted! “Society in every state is a blessing, but government, even in its best state, is but a necessary evil...”. Especially if it is headed by a hereditary king, because “it is impossible to make wisdom hereditary”. Most historians agree that Tom’s pamphlet was the key to bringing about American independence. Sadly, they didn’t heed his later advice to abolish slavery, embrace Native Americans, introduce a welfare state etc., but it did set the whole world on a new course. Now it is time for an urgent course correction. Tell ‘em, Greta!

Blessings to all beings
Everywhere the killer clowns are taking over: Boris Johnson, Nigel Farage, Donald Trump, Narendra Modi, Jair Bolsonaro, Scott Morrison, Rodrigo Duterte, Matteo Salvini, Recep Erdogan, Viktor Orban and a host of other ludicrous strongmen – or weakmen as they so often turn out to be – dominate nations that would once have laughed them off stage. The question is why? Why are the deathly technocrats who held sway almost everywhere a few years ago giving way to extravagant buffoons?

Social media, which is an incubator of absurdity, is certainly part of the story. But while there has been plenty of good work investigating the means, there has been surprisingly little thinking about the ends. Why are the ultra-rich, who until recently used their money and newspapers to promote charisma-free politicians, now funding this circus? Why would capital wish to be represented by middle managers one moment and jesters the next?

The reason, I believe, is that the nature of capitalism has changed. The dominant force of the 1990s and early 2000s – corporate power – demanded technocratic government. It wanted people who could simultaneously run a competent, secure state and protect profits from democratic change. By 2012, power was already shifting to a different place, but politics had not caught up.

The policies that were supposed to promote enterprise – slashing taxes for the rich, ripping down public protections, destroying trade unions – instead stimulated a powerful spiral of patrimonial wealth accumulation. The largest fortunes are now made not through entrepreneurial brilliance but through inheritance, monopoly and rent-seeking: securing exclusive control of crucial assets, such as land and buildings, privatised utilities and intellectual property, and assembling service monopolies such as trading hubs, software and social media platforms, then charging user fees far higher than the costs of production and delivery. In Russia, people who enrich themselves this way are called oligarchs. But this is not a Russian phenomenon, it is a global one. Corporate power still exists, but today it is overlain by – and is mutating into – oligarchic power.

What the oligarchs want is not the same as what the old corporations wanted. In the words of their favoured theorist Stephen Bannon, they seek the “deconstruction of the administrative state.” Chaos is the profit multiplier for the disaster capitalism on which the new billionaires thrive. Every rupture is used to seize more of the assets on which our lives depend. The chaos of an undeliverable Brexit, the repeated meltdowns and shutdowns of government under Trump: these are the kind of deconstructions Bannon foresaw. As institutions, rules and democratic oversight implode, the oligarchs extend their wealth and power at our expense.

The killer clowns offer the oligarchs something else too: distraction and deflection. While the kleptocrats fleece us, we are urged to look elsewhere. We are mesmerised by buffoons, who encourage us to channel the anger that should be reserved for billionaires towards immigrants, women, Jews, Muslims, people of colour and other imaginary enemies and customary scapegoats. Just as it was in the 1930s, the new demagoguery is a con, a revolt against the impacts of capital, financed by capitalists. The oligarch’s interests always lie offshore: in tax havens and secrecy regimes. Paradoxically, these interests are best promoted by nationalists and nativists. The politicians who most loudly proclaim their patriotism and defence of sovereignty are always the first to sell their nations down the river. It is no coincidence that most of the newspapers promoting the nativist agenda, whipping up hatred against immigrants and thundering about sovereignty, are owned by billionaire tax exiles, living offshore.

As economic life has been offshored, so has political life. The political rules that are supposed to prevent foreign money from funding domestic politics have collapsed. The main beneficiaries are the self-proclaimed defenders of sovereignty, who rise to power with the help of social media ads bought by persons unknown, and thinktanks and lobbyists that refuse to reveal their funders. A recent essay by the academics Reijer Hendrikse and Rodrigo Fernandez argues that offshore finance involves “the rampant unbundling and commercialisation of state sovereignty” and the shifting of power into a secretive, extraterritorial legal space, beyond the control of any state. In this offshore world, they contend, “financialised and hypermobile global capital effectively is the state.”

Today’s billionaires are the real citizens of nowhere. They fantasise, like the plutocrats in Ayn Rand’s terrible novel Atlas Shrugged, about further escape. Look at the “seasteading” venture funded by Paypal’s founder Peter Thiel, that sought to build artificial islands in the middle of the ocean, whose citizens could enact a libertarian fantasy of escape from the state, its laws, regulations and taxes, and from organised labour. Scarcely a month goes by without a billionaire raising the prospect of leaving the Earth altogether, and colonising space pods or other planets.

Those whose identity is offshore seek only to travel further offshore. To them, the nation state is both facilitator and encumbrance, source of wealth and imposer of tax, pool of cheap labour and seething mass of ungrateful plebs, from whom they must flee, leaving the wretched earthlings to their well-deserved fate.

Defending ourselves from these disasters means taxing oligarchy to oblivion. It’s easy to get hooked up on discussions about what tax level maximises the generation of revenue. There are endless arguments about the Laffer curve, that purports to show where this level lies. But these discussions overlook something crucial: raising revenue is only one of the purposes of tax. Another is breaking the spiral of patrimonial wealth accumulation.

Breaking this spiral is a democratic necessity: otherwise the oligarchs, as we have seen, come to dominate national and international life. The spiral does not stop by itself: only government action can do it. This is one of the reasons why, during the 1940s, the top rate of income tax in the US rose to 94%, and in the UK to 98%. A fair society requires periodic corrections on this scale. But these days the steapest taxes would be better aimed at accumulated unearned wealth.

Of course, the offshore world the billionaires have created makes such bold policies extremely difficult: this, after all, is one of its purposes. But at least we know what the aim should be, and can begin to see the scale of the challenge. To fight something, first we need to understand it.

What makes the World Future Council unique is that it spreads solutions. Namely, policy solutions working towards our goal to pass a healthy planet and fair societies on to our children and grandchildren. Today we need to remake every part of society to stop climate chaos, malnutrition, degradation of fertile land, and inequality, or we face devastation unparalleled in human history. Best practices can inspire but, unless they become legally binding, they risk remaining islands of hope in oceans of policy failure. This is why we needed the World Future Council – and we still need it today.

What is your vision for the future of our world?

Sometimes it feels like there is very little hope. But I am confident that, if we work together, we can achieve sustainable development and climate justice. The threats facing us cannot be solved in isolation.

The World Future Council considers itself the voice of future generations. Why is it so important to promote it today?

“You say you love your children above all else and yet you are stealing their future in front of their very eyes” said Greta Thunberg, the Swedish teenager who initiated the climate school strikes – I couldn’t have put this better. Never before have adults thoughtlessly threatened the very survival of their children and grandchildren. Future generations need all the support they can get. This is why our work is so important!

Every year, you award the best policy solutions with the Future Policy Award, the so-called “Policy Oscar”. How do you define a sustainable legislation? How would you define a future just solution?

Decisions taken by politicians today will have a major influence on the world of tomorrow. Everyone who is young (or unborn) will be affected by these decisions, but has no influence whatsoever – this is where our responsibility starts! A future-just policy is a law which does not just diminish a problem but reverses negative trends and creates a world that is worth living in. For instance, the Ethiopian law to stop desertification, honoured with the Future Policy Award 2017, did not just end but reversed the degradation of land, turned man-made desert into green, fertile land, strengthened the community and created sustainable jobs for young people. The world needs more of these solutions.

What has the World Future Council Foundation achieved so far? And what’s your hope for the future?

I believe in the transformative force of solutions. To give you an example: Maryland became the first US State to make environmental education obligatory for high-school students, and we honoured their policy with the Future Policy Award. From an early age, learners become environmentally literate – what an impact on society as a whole! We shared this policy on various occasions with decision-makers from more than 15 countries. Just recently, a Chinese delegation visited Maryland to learn more. Peru, one of the world’s mega-diverse countries, introduced outdoor education, inspired by our work. And in early 2019, we published a Policy Handbook on Education for Sustainable Development that digs even deeper, presenting positive examples from policy and practice. There is no more effective nor faster way to accelerate change than to spread solutions that work well, and help people to learn from each other.

_The World Future Council is funded by donations. What can I do to support the Foundation?_

Tell friends about our work, share our stories online or help us to raise funds, there are numerous ways. There were people collecting donations for us on their birthday, for example. This work is complex and needs all the support it can get. As Martin Luther King said, “laws may not move the heart but they restrain the heartless”. I think there is a deep truth in this quote, and I hope that together we can spark more people with our approach.

Those two, they settled down on the path and walked. They nudged, they touched, they strutted and cooed. They billed and preened. They moved sideways and then ran forward for a while. One skipped to one side and the other followed. They looked down on the path and inspected what they saw, turned it over and explored it. They flapped their wings and landed on a branch above the path.

A wicked boy came along with a sling and took a pot-shot at them both, and they flew away together to find a safer place.

That place happened to be plentiful with food and so they spent some time pecking and scratching and looking in the grass to find the best morsels. Wherever they went, they went together; they had the same purpose in mind and they seemed instinctively to know what each other needed and wanted. They accommodated each other, each patiently waiting for the other. Whatever they encountered, they explored it or dealt with it together and there was no stopping them from their aim in life.

They made their home on the flat roof above the shops, safe from the wind and the rain. They managed to squeeze themselves alongside the spikes that were placed there to stop them from nesting, for they knew that this would truly be the safest place for them to raise their young! They were in agreement about what they had to do, taking it in turns to sit on the eggs.

Each knew their role, and, although they flapped and squabbled, they soon settled to their task together, of nurturing their young and taking turns to keep them protected and fed.

Those two hardly ever walk together these days; they were too consumed in the daily business of providing for their progeny; but each knew what they had to do. It was as if they were involved in a kind of dance, of taking turns, of coming and going, of moving together and then apart. It seemed to follow a pattern, too, which comforted them both, as well as the little ones. They both nursed the young ones; feeding them special milk from their crops and watching them grow.

It was not long before they started all over again, with a new nest and a new baby. And so, in this way, life went on, day in, day out, each honouring each other’s presence, accepting and accommodating.

When the harsh weather came they huddled together for warmth. Finding food was harder and so they would flock with the other birds in the park by the lake and scavenge for scraps thrown to them by passers-by.

Their beliefs and tasks united them and they moved forward through their world, year after year, successfully keeping each other company, remaining faithful and caring for their family. They were content. It was a hard life, just surviving, but it was a pleasant one. They were in it together and they were in it for the duration. There was no question.

You can find us between 1 - 4pm during LLAWN festival in Llandudno. This will show the most popular colour. You are encouraged to join the pre-fun online and of course come and join the live game by wearing one of the three colours to support the team you would like to win. Next Regular Groups Listing: January 2020 but always at www.network-news.org Recently I went to Fire in the Mountain festival outside of Aberystwyth. Fab! The weekend before I’d been to How the Light Gets In in Hay on Wye. Another fine festival, very different. And it occurred to me there must be a dozen festivals going on up and down the land every weekend from April to October.

I’ve heard it said that worldwide there are a million and a half festivals happening every year! It’s not just us.

The festivals are diverse in location, theme and style. The focus may be different – literature, music, green living, storytelling, beer and cider, landrovers – but most have certain things in common. Often people are camping so roughing it, getting out of their comfort zone. It’s a chance to check in with a larger community of interest, to deepen contact with old friends and to make new ones. At many – ‘Fire in the Mountain’ is a good example – there are people of all ages, grandparents following toddlers, fathers carrying babies, older children roaming around. Festivals often achieve extreme beauty in the construction of gates, paths, sets, stalls, venues, sculpture, signs and decoration. They are always creative places with music, poetry, storytelling, comedy, art and craft. They often try out cutting-edge methods of being low impact, of recycling and using renewable energy. They are good places to hang out, discuss ideas, take part in debates and workshops, learn new skills. They are, in short, experiments in Utopia. They have been described as petri dishes where the new culture is cultured.

The festival arises from the ancient practise of dividing time into the sacred and the profane. There is a timeless rhythm of alternating mundane and holy days. Our profane days are when we work, engage in business as usual, suffer the daily grind. But on our sacred days we step into the sublime.

Writing about the Mayans in Sons of the Shaking Earth Eric Wolf describes the fiesta as ‘a work of art, the creation of a magical moment in mythological time in which men and women transcend realities of everyday life in their procession through the vaulted, incense filled church, let their souls soar on the temporary trajectory of a rocket, or wash away the pain of life in holy day drunkenness…

The festival is the descendent of some of that. It carries the genetic thread of transcendence, of going from ordinary to extraordinary, of touching the sacred. It’s the child of the saint’s day and the church fete, the cricket game and the am dram show. And it is the child that ‘growed and growed’. Whereas town fairs and agricultural shows may be declining in Britain, festivals are booming. They are bursting out everywhere. With vigour, originality, and a wild, elegant creativity, festivals are pushing back the boundaries of the profane and everyday, expanding utopian practise into more and more spheres of life. Soon, perhaps, the balance will tip in favour of us living a more festival-like life. Festivals are changing the world from the grass roots up and the inspired visions down.

Eric Maddern is a storyteller, writer, singer-songwriter, author of “Snowdonia Folk Tales” and founder of the beloved Cae Mabon Retreat.

Affairs are now soul size.
The enterprise is exploration into God.
Where are you making for? It takes
So many thousand years to wake,
But will you wake for pity’s sake!”

Christopher Fry

Crisis ~ never without Opportunity Thousands of years? Can we put some flesh on this wonderful verse by Christopher Fry? It is a story about you and where you are going. It begins at least 12,000 years ago, perhaps with the birth of agriculture. A moment of great abundance when the planting and herding begins to replace hunting and gathering and food becomes more readily available. The beginning of the end of ‘survival motivation’ for humans.

Agriculture enabled settlement, buildings and tools and all manner of new industry to evolve. Very slowly survival becomes a less dominant human force, yet so slowly that it could be said to be the norm through the Roman Empire, even up to the British Empire. Then all of a sudden in the Industrial Revolution and the age of mass production, survival is left behind.
Consumerism and the age of ‘outer motivation’ are in full swing.

The Rope ~ re combines Imagine a large woven rope. Hold it in both hands and start to twist against the grain so that the rope opens its strands.
Keep doing it until you can see daylight between each element. Your hands are still level but one higher than the other.

Your lower hand is 12,000 years ago and the other is now. The first strand to separate is agriculture, the second, settlement and so on. Throughout history every discipline has had its moment of development and has surged forward regardless of every other subject. This is the nature of our history. We have specialised and encouraged all things to be seen separately. Now look again at the rope. All the strands are beautifully entwined to the left of your left hand - and again to the right of your right hand.
That is our destiny. Everything comes back together. Very soon!

The Precession ~ window of opportunity We all know that the Earth leans on its axis at 23° and it also wobbles against the heavens. This gives us the dual aspects of astrology - the annual cycle of twelve months - but also the much larger cycle of the twelve astrological ages. This is known as the Precession of the Equinoxes and an astrological year lasts 25,920 years. Hence our recent leaving the Age of Pisces after 2,100 years and entering the Age of Aquarius for a similar period.

Let’s take a closer look at the transition...
because we are in the middle of it!

Pisces to Aquarius ~ one small step Pisces has the symbol of two fish, one above the other and swimming in opposite directions.

Aquarius is the water bringer, pouring for all in equal measure.

The former hierarchical, dualistic and opposing whilst the latter brings the same for everyone and no one goes without.
Notice the state of the world - and which you would choose for it.

Pisces is a vertical plane where the ones at the top do alright and the rest fight to hang on. Aquarius is a horizontal plane in which all life is equal. We sit at the point where these two rub up against each other. Aquarius is waiting ...

You are choosing.

The Preparation ~ still separation

Look at what has changed as we navigate the transition. Biology - dealing with separate elements - evolved into ecology, dealing with integrated networks. Newtonian physics describing everything as matter became Quantum physics describing everything as energy.

The primaries of the painter - red, yellow & blue which make black - have been swept aside by colour screens in red, blue and green which make white light.

The dam ~ the denial

So why haven’t we stepped across into the beautiful light world that is our rightful Eden?

Because we don’t stand back and view the world like this. Leaders and citizens alike are engrossed in ‘their world’. Enormous effort is being expended to keep ‘the world as we know it’ shored up for ‘business as usual’. Economics, consumption, even our undemocratic ‘democracy’ (as we like to call it) are completely lost in solving day to day problems that don’t apply any more. They are all solved - but somewhere else and it is not where we are heading. As ‘progress’ goes on ‘up’ our real potential is waiting off to the side.

The current disaster ~ for as long as you like

If I was to say “crisis” you could justifiably say “which crisis?”. Economic, social, ecological? Even those things seen as crises which in fact are very good news: the end of oil, the end of the motor car, the end of central banking; all are creating fear and a sense of entrenchment. All these crises are man-made and all because we are unaware of the better life sitting next to us. Every day we drag society back into ‘survival mode’ inappropriately making life harder for everyone. Let go! Let the phoenix rise from its ashes.

So there you have it. We will have disaster after disaster for as long as we try and shore up a dying civilisation that should have ended... before long the dam will break.
The Potential ~ to reintegrate
The hippies caught a glimpse in the Sixties. This was a perfect time to walk straight out of the old world into the new. They knew that survival was over just as they knew that outer motivation had also had its day. You are an energy. You are light. You are able to live by inner motivation, to believe and achieve.

If we revisit the rope we find Survival at the low level, Outer motivation during the climb and Inner motivation generating the reintegration.

Civilisation has worked for 12,000 years to rise to an empathy between all creatures in a harmony with all life. Outer motivation, consumption, greed, must stop. We have an abundance of everything. Yet behind the climate crisis lies a consumption resource crisis behind which is a banking debt crisis and so on. All trying to build a vast bridge to nowhere. Alternatively we might celebrate because we have arrived exactly where we had intended.

Let the future be fun - for every being - and the Earth. The choice is yours.

The Glider lets go ~ Let’s Go!

To get a glider into the air it has to be towed by cable. Imagine that cable attached to a car racing down the aerodrome right to the end. As the glider rises it travels more and more steeply relative to the car. The tension increases. The turbulence increases. The noise against the wing is deafening as you fight for altitude. Then you have to act fast. Releasing that cable under stress will catapult it straight at the car. You want to go up. You have suffered to go up but for the sake of the driver below you have to do the the last thing that suits you. You dip the nose and dive straight down, release the tension release the cable and flip the controls to level . . . into the most beautiful world you will ever know. Silence beyond the imagination, peace, sunlight, clouds and a god’s eye view of all. The freedom you sought now allows you to soar with ease.

Now look again at the diagram of the dam - (exactly the same profile) - and do the one thing that contradicts your progress - head back to ground... and fly .. towards the horizon.

Awake awake for pity’s sake!

The Great Invocation
From the point of Light within the Mind of God
Let light stream forth into the minds of men.
Let Light descend on Earth.

From the point of Love within the Heart of God
Let love stream forth into the hearts of men.
May Christ return to Earth.

From the centre where the Will of God is known
Let purpose guide the little wills of men –
The purpose which the Masters know and serve.

From the centre which we call the race of men
Let the Plan of Love and Light work out
And may it seal the door where evil dwells.

Let Light and Love and Power restore the Plan on Earth.

Edward Snowden’s memoir Permanent Record will be published globally by Macmillan Publishers on 17 September 2019. The book will tell the story of his time working as a CIA agent and NSA contractor, and the disillusionment he felt with the American intelligence establishment that led him to give up his future to share the truth about the US government’s pursuit of a mass surveillance system.

In 2013, Edward Snowden, a former CIA agent and NSA contractor, shocked the world when he broke with the American intelligence establishment and revealed that the U.S. government was secretly pursuing the means to collect every phone call, text message, and email ever sent. The result would be an unprecedented system of mass surveillance with the ability to pry into the private lives of every person on earth. In Permanent Record, he tells his story for the very first time, bringing the reader along as he helps to create this system of mass surveillance, and then experiences the crisis of conscience that led him to try to bring it down. A Network of Goodwill

In every neighbourhood we can find kindred spirits who share a vision of a beautiful and humane world, and who share a commitment to making it a reality.

They might be found planting organically - food, herbs, flowers, forests; or simplifying their lives, using less fossil fuels, recycling and repairing, going by bus and by bicycle, pouring less poison down the sink and less waste into the landfill. They might be working to restore the soul in science; or creating artefacts that are sustainable and beautiful; or sharing their craft in sound, colour or form.

Others are reaching out to those that society has abandoned; or reminding big organisations to respect life at human scale; or challenging “expert” opinions. They may be choosing a more compassionate diet, moving their money to a more ethical bank or credit union, raising their children without force or fear. They may be pioneering new ways to exchange ideas, skills and resources; experimenting with different kinds of household or community; or simply remembering how to play, sing and dance together without dependence on drugs or alcohol.

Some are learning to heal - bringing together wisdom and skills from different ages, cultures and dimensions. Then there are those who are advocates for the voiceless kingdoms - animal, vegetable and mineral - that depend on human beings for their welfare and survival.

Others are struggling to uproot violence - in the nation, the community, the home and the heart - learning to think, to speak and to act without cruelty.

Most are politically engaged, but each with their own unique mix of causes and ideals. Many prefer to "follow the money" rather than a party line - aware that every donation and purchase they make every day is a powerful vote for good or ill.

Most are spiritually active, but without a conventional creed. They may practice meditation or mindfulness, and use the insights and strength from their inner work to inform their service in the world.

Some are reclaiming the great seasonal rituals, aligning themselves with the cycles of Earth, Sun, Moon and Stars; or reinventing those essential rites of passage: the initiations of birth, coming of age, marriage, death and spiritual unfoldment.

Many sense that the world will need a vast outpouring of goodwill if it is to make it through the next few decades intact. Some found their deeper purpose through personal crisis - perhaps global crisis is humanity's great opportunity?

Do you recognise yourself here? Are you a member of this extraordinary group? Are you one of those resisting the great tide of materialism that would engulf our civilisation? Are you among those building little altars and centres and refuges of hope for a more compassionate world? If so, you need support! Network News exists to reach, encourage and support all members of this “network of goodwill”. A space where members can meet, share their gifts and celebrate their unity and their diversity. A place to vision, to collaborate, and to affirm that, truly, “another world is possible”.
