Welcome to the September Network News. Fem’s cover celebrates the red kites that are soaring above our office as we prepare this issue. A “bird’s eye view” of North Wales is essential if we are serious about a sustainable future. Why are we still looking down upon acres of grazing and barren hills instead of woodlands, forest gardens, wild meadows, permaculture settlements? We urgently need less livestock and more pollinators and photosynthesizers.

Every good-hearted farmer in Wales would prefer to be in the organically-growing business instead of the industrially-killing and methane-producing business. So it is you and I - with our personal tastes and choices - that will bring us either a sane and humane future, or a perpetual unfolding of environmental disasters.

We always try to highlight local initiatives that aspire towards the new ethos of planetary stewardship: Bangor Forest Garden, Moelyci, Ecobro, Trigonos, CAT, Felin Uchaf, Cae Mabon, Henbant, Eternal Forest… but as well as these “ground-up” projects, we must not forget some unique “top-down” initiatives in Wales...

The visionary Well-being of Future Generations (Wales) Act 2015, puts “a legal responsibility on the Welsh Government to consider sustainability in all of its actions”. Wow. We even have our very own Future Generations Commissioner for Wales, Sophie Howe - but it is up to all of us to make her role powerful and not just symbolic.

Another worthy but little-known Welsh initiative is the One Planet Development scheme, under which low impact dwellings can be built in places that would not normally be granted planning permission. There are now 34 One Planet developments, but so far only one in North Wales, so we clearly need the briefing on Page 6!

Blessings to all beings
For me personally, storytelling has always been about delivering a message through song and words. In Welsh you’d say plethyn – weaving – a natural ability to weave words with song and to deliver a story or a message. Storytelling has its own feel, it’s a different feel to a stage show. Whilst it is performance there is no script. I always prepare, I know the story, but how I tell it depends on the vibe, on the audience. My story might change depending on who’s watching and listening. I work with their reactions and see where that takes the story.

Especially as a bilingual person, it’s a natural way of learning and listening. I’m very lucky I’ve been able to have that bilingual element from a baby up until now, in my early twenties.

Storytelling has its differences in both languages. Some Welsh words might not translate into English. They will have a slightly different meaning. Maybe there’ll be a certain word in Welsh that is grounded in a personal experience, say a word that reminds me of my childhood years between the age of 5 and 7. But the English word might not carry the same meaning.

Because of growing up and being surrounded not just by Welsh only stories but being fully immersed into Eisteddfods, school plays and the Welsh, it’s very natural to me that this is my world.

Stories about Môn (the island of Anglesey) are the ones that come naturally. I’ve been raised on them, by my grandparents and my mum and my dad. These stories are ingrained in me, even if they are not always fully formed, structured stories. For example the Welsh folk song ‘Ar y bryn roedd pren, ar y pren roedd bryn’. It’s a riddle. It’s about a hill and what lies beneath the hill and who’s there on the hill.

Place names also hold stories. Barclodiad Y Gawres on the coast near Cable Bay holds one of my favourite tales. It’s all about the giantess’s apron and her sense of belonging and finding herself living on Anglesey. I live and breathe these areas that hold the folk memory.

As an emerging storyteller sometimes I’m working on my own. For example this week I’m going round libraries by myself telling stories to little ones. But I also really enjoy collaborations and I’m looking forward to some that are coming up, that collaboration element is so worthwhile.

My friends in Chwedl, which is a network of women storytellers, are organising a great gig on Saturday 29th September at Llangefni Theatr Fach on the theme of ‘Afallon’. It will be different to a typical stage performance because it’s all unknown: all about the buzz of the audience, all about the audience reaction. We’ve got three top storytellers from Wales coming to visit: Helen East, Tamar Eluned Williams and Christine Watkins. Expect to hear tales about the apples of immortality, Avalon by moonlight, magical talking apple trees and more. Oh, and there will be apple cake too.
We’re also holding an open meetup for women interested in storytelling on Sunday 30th September in Llanfachraeth, also on the island.

Then on October 27th I’ll be in Harlech for the third and final part of the Sea and Fire festival. I was commissioned to write a piece which is part fact, part fiction, in collaboration with fire dancers, musicians and a puppeteer. It’s for everybody, it’s a family piece, for visitors and for locals. I tell bilingually, there’s music, dancing and the folk band Calan are playing.

It’s the story of Meirion and Meirionnydd and his rule, his love of Harlech, and the people’s love for Meirion. Meirion gets captured by the seven wave and the sea horses. They are capturing him because he’s got the birth right, the golden torc around his neck and they are desperate to have it.

It plays with lots of ideas: animals versus humans, underwater versus life on land, the political place we are at the moment, the idea of and animals biting back, the idea of nature biting back.

Part one happened last May, part two before Christmas, with a great fire on the beach. The third part will be October and that will be the crux of the story… I won’t divulge what happens next, you’ll have to come!

Fighting climate change is much more than a day job for Chris Vernon and Erica Thompson. It is their entire way of life.

They are part of a groundbreaking Welsh government scheme under which people get to circumvent tight planning rules so long as they build an eco-home in the countryside and go back to working the land on which it sits.

The ‘One Planet Development Policy’ was adopted by the Welsh government in 2011 and so far, 34 households have signed up.

The aim is ambitious: in a small country where people on average use three times their fair share of the world’s resources, Wales wants its One Planet people to use only the resources they are due. Which means a simpler smallholding life, spending and traveling less, growing and making more.

A spokesman for the Welsh government said the scheme was an important niche initiative, rather than a model to scale up. “It is intended to provide an opportunity for those wishing to live a highly sustainable lifestyle, project a light touch on the environment, and who will be largely self-sufficient in terms of income, food and energy,” said Matthew Morris, a communications officer with the Welsh government.

“Numbers of such developments are likely to remain small.”

The scheme has mostly attracted digital-era smallholders with a stubborn determination to return to a subsistence lifestyle in the rolling hills and valleys of rural Wales. And not to ruin the planet with a consumerist, throwaway lifestyle.

“We’ve known for 20 or 30 years now what we need to do to address the problem of climate change,” Vernon said from his half-built home.

“We don’t need more data. Whilst I was sitting in my office working on the computer I got the feeling I could be doing something that demonstrates how we can address the problems.”

Vernon and his partner Thompson know more about “the problems” than most. She holds a PhD in climate science, he has one in glaciology and is a climate modeler at Britain’s national weather service, the Met Office.

They decided it was time for action, not academia.

Eight months pregnant and elbow-deep in local clay plaster, Thompson said their home had to be zero carbon in construction and use to win government go-ahead.

It sits deep in bucolic Pembrokeshire, a lush, coastal county in the southwest of Wales that pioneered the green approach before it was adopted countrywide.

Just up the road lies the Lammas community, a pioneering and collective eco-venture where nine smallholdings nestle in the landscape around a central community hub.
The Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change, the leading international group that assesses climate change, estimates that global temperatures could rise 3.4 degrees Celsius by the end of the century.

Amid a European heatwave running from North Africa up to the Arctic Circle, the Welsh initiative is taking root on the Western fringe of the continent in a bid to redress some of the damage.

The policy also aims to address a myriad of problems beyond rising temperatures, from soil degradation to rural de-population, a housing crisis to wasteful global supply chains.

It offers people with little money, but plenty of determination, a way out of the rat race and back to the land.

With property prices out of reach for many rural workers and tight regulations restricting new builds, the scheme is the only way for many locals to own a home and work nearby, said another One Planet home builder, Cathryn Wyatt.

Housing figures across Wales tell the same story.

In the 1980s, it would have taken a typical 20-something household about three years to save for an average deposit, according to the Resolution Trust think tank. The research shows it would now take 19 years.

Like many of her fellow One Planet builders, Jacqui Banks wanted to jettison her old life and be true to her principles.

“It’s a lot of work, in the early years, but what we’re building is hopefully a resilient system that is going to help us have a positive impact on the world,” she told the Thomson Reuters Foundation.

“Living in the city I found it extremely difficult - the consumerist lifestyle and the waste involved.”

To get permission to build a One Planet Development, three requirements must first be satisfied:

First is the overall ecological footprint. As Vernon explained, each household must only use their global fair share of land: “If you take the entire global resource … you divide it by the population of the planet, you get a number: 1.88 hectares, it’s a fairly arbitrary number, but that’s the number that is your fair share.”

Each applicant must also show that within five years, 65 percent of their basic needs are covered by their patch of land, including food, water, energy and waste.

Hence the hodge podge of greenhouses and polytunnels that dot the land, often cobbled together from reclaimed materials and designed to make the most of a grass incline, woodland shelter or power-generating stream.

Applicants must also come up with a zero-carbon house design using locally-sourced and sustainable materials.

The result: a magical landscape dotted with “hobbit houses” straight out of JRR Tolkien’s “Lord of the Rings”, with mesmerizing wooden beams, grass roofs and hemp walls.

Thirdly, everyone must set up a rural business to pay the sort of bills - internet, clothes, council tax – that cannot be met with a subsistence-only lifestyle.

Enterprises range from fruit wine to bees, an exotic tree nursery to sculpture - anything that brings in a small income.

Green Party leader Jonathan Bartley makes a whistlestop visit to Ynys Mon on Thursday September 6th and will work with local, North West Wales Greens to spotlight two major issues we all have to address in the near future.

Arriving by train in Holyhead for midday Jonathan will at once hold a brief rally to focus on the looming prospect of a hard Brexit negatively impacting on the port. The current connection to Dublin Ports via Holyhead runs quite smoothly, although the volume of traffic means loading ferries still takes time.

Alarmingly, if the results of “external port” status were to be added to the process, with the inevitable extra delays resulting from the new "hard border" controls, tailbacks could become unworkable and business could, as a result, simply dry up.

This major catastrophe for Holyhead must not be allowed to happen.

At the other end of Ynys Mon’s north coast, the proposed replacement of aging and ailing Wylfa nuclear power station with new build Wylfa B should similarly not be allowed to happen. This outmoded and strategically unsafe approach to energy generation has no place in the sustainable, clean future we must develop for both our country and the World, as no-one can act in isolation in this matter. To press this home, Jonathan will address a group at the proposed site of Wylfa B at 1.00pm, highlighting the positive alternative routes we can take compared to the dangerous and unrealistically expensive folly of new build nuclear.

Before catching his train home from Bangor railway station at 4.30 Jonathan will attend an informal meeting of the newly established “Young Greens” group there at 3.00pm to discuss moving to a Greener, fairer and far more secure future as core to our beliefs.

CARER WANTED

My partner Ra has Alzheimers, and is immobilised by knee problems. We are lucky to have some help from family and friends, but I'm looking for someone who can come sometimes (to Llanystumdwy) to spend time with him and do a small amount of care. Occasionally this may include sleeping over - when I'm away working. Ra has been a musician, acupuncturist, teacher and rugby player in his time, and is an ageing hippie! So he's had a rich and varied life so far, and now his big challenge is with memory loss and confusion, and loss of mobility. If you think it might suit you to be part of supporting him, please email, call or text me to meet and find out more about details including payment.

Darlith Glyndwr: Dafydd Wigley
Wales, in terms of language and culture and in terms of tradition and religion - is part of Europe. This was the realisation and one of the inspirations for the vision of so many Welsh leaders - from Emrys ap Iwan to Saunders Lewis. Owain Glyndwr's vision was also based on the Welsh connection with the continent of which we are a part. As we face a very uncertain future, is it possible for the modern Wales to survive without the European dimension - or is it an essential part of our national existence? Welsh with simultaneous English translation. 5pm, £8, £6 concs., Galeri, Caernarfon 01286 685222, galéricaernarfon.com

Exhibitions

Insight 15 ~ Helfa Gelf Artists Until 30th September. A new collection of work by artists from North Wales - Sue Arney, Phil Green, Janet Roberts, Dorothy Taylor in MOSTYN Gallery Café, MOSTYN, in partnership with Helfa Gelf Art Trail. Vaughan St., Llandudno LL30 1AB, 01492 879201, mostyn.org

She Sees The Shadows Until 4th November. We are pleased to present the first off-site collaboration by DRAF (David Roberts Art Foundation). “She Sees The Shadows” is a group exhibition of works from the David Roberts Collection that resonate with the ideas found in Space and Sight. Each artist has re-conceived day-to-day objects and materials in unexpected ways – a bench, plug socket, grate, section of railing or broom – inviting viewers to see alternative qualities and narratives therein. Mostyn, Llandudno LL30 1AB, 01492 879201, mostyn.org

Art For All Until 4th September. A wide range of work exhibited in Ucheldre’s 27th annual Art for All Competition. Many paintings are for sale. A variety of mixed media work. Free entry, Ucheldre Centre, Holyhead 01407 763363, ucheldre.org

Nexus 29th September - 18th November. This exhibition looks at some of the ways in which 21st Century artists and makers are changing preconceptions about their art forms. The exhibitors in Nexus are linked by great technical skill, a capacity for free thinking and confidence in their ideas. Ruthin Craft Centre 01824 704774, ruthincraftcentre.org.uk

Lasting Impressions Until 23rd September. A closer look at what craftspeople make and the processes they use to produce a lasting object. Ruthin Craft Centre 01824 704774, ruthincraftcentre.org.uk

Huw Gareth Jones: Ar yr Ymylon–On the Edge 11th August - 23rd September. Open daily 10am – 5pm, free. Oriel Môn, Rhosneirch, Llanegfni, Ynys Môn LL77 7TQ, 01248 724444 oriel@ynysmon.gov.uk

Michael Sandle: Monumental Rage Until 7th October. In direct response to the horrors of our age, his work presents a passionate critique of the abuse of power in global conflict, politics and culture, and the accompanying cynicism and hypocrisy. Grosvenor Museum, Chester CH1 2DD. 01244 972197.

Iwan Gwyn Parry 17th September - 6th October. New paintings by the Anglesey-born painter. Theatr Clwyd, Mold 01352 701521, theatrclwyd.com

Jocelyn Roberts ~ Sea Changes 28th August - 15th September. An entire year of daily paintings of the North Wales Coast exploring the ever changing sea and sky. Theatr Clwyd, Mold 01352 701521, theatrclwyd.com

Matthew Wood Until 12th September. Matthew has made nearly 90 paintings, a mixture if interiors and landscapes. There is sunshine and haze, freedom and fresh air. A striking expression of contented wonder, caught with simplicity and grace. Ffin y Parc, Llanrwst LL26 6PT, 01492 642070, welshart.net

Wayne Clarke 29th September - 18th November. A graduate of the prestigious ceramic BA at Harrow, Prestatyn based Wayne Clark makes large sculptural pieces and smaller functional wares, generally from a stoneware body with additives of Ruabon red clay and coarse sand. He uses various ash and shino glazes, as well as vitreous slips to create fascinating surface effects. Ruthin Craft Centre 01824 704774, ruthincraftcentre.org.uk

Criw Celf 29th September - 11th November. An exhibition combining the work of Gwynedd and Mon children and young people aged 9 - 18 who have worked with Criw Celf, Portfolio and Raising the Bar art groups. Oriel Kyffin Williams, Llangefni, Anglesey 01248 724444, kyffinwilliams.info

Poor Taff – Golwg Llundain ar y Cymry / A London View of the Welsh People Until 4th November. This exhibition will show how the Welsh people were portrayed in the popular press in the 17th & 18th centuries. Some Welsh people adopted the images as acceptable representations of national identity. The exhibition explores how stereotypes of Welshness and Welsh identity evolved over time. Oriel Môn, Llangefni 01248 724444, oriel@ynysmon.gov.uk

Audrey Walker ~ Observations: A Retrospective Until 23rd September. Audrey Walker is celebrated as she reaches the age of ninety. Momentary glances, encounters, inward smiles, the simple pleasures of life have long fascinated the artist, as has the ability of her art to cross generations. The exhibition combines the work of Gwynedd and Mon children and young people aged 9 - 18 who have worked with Criw Celf, Portfolio and Raising the Bar art groups. Oriel Kyffin Williams, Llangefni, Anglesey 01248 724444, kyffinwilliams.info

Rhych Until 23rd September. Simon Gallery & Stefan Gant in collaboration with School of Archaeology, University of Oxford. Artworks and field drawings from the excavation of Moel-y-Gaer, Bodfari, 2013-17. Plas Glyn Y Weddw, Llanbedrog, nr Pwllheli 01758 740763, oriel@ynysmon.gov.uk

Maurice Cockrill RA Until 12th September. Restless, lyrical and challenging paintings of landscapes. Ffin y Parc, Llanrwst LL26 6PT, 01492 642070, welshart.net

Helfa Gelf Members Exhibition 9th September - 7th October. 1 Plas Brondanw Cottages, Llanfrothen LL48 6SW, orielbrondanw.org
Judith Samuel  Until 22nd October. Judith paints the seabirds of North Wales in oil and gesso on linen canvases. Oriel Ynys Mon, Llangefni, Anglesey 01248 724444, kyffinwilliams.info

With Other Eyes  29th September - 18th November. Brings together a diverse range of international artists and makers, who include photography as an element in their work and who, through this engagement, contribute to the on-going discourse on photographic representation in the applied arts. Ruthin Craft Centre 01824 704774, ruthincraftcentre.org.uk

James Green ~ Entering Donkey World  Until 30th September. “I felt compelled to celebrate donkeys (who I don’t consider are represented very well in the history of art, or sometimes appreciated generally) and create these compositions showing them having adventures in a mysterious world, free from any human control or servitude”. Mostyn, Vaughan St., Llandudno LL30 1AB, 01492 879201, mostyn.org

NW Potters Gallery  1 High St., Conwy LL32 8DB. 01492 593590, pottersgallery.co.uk

Tunnicliffe’s Measured Drawings  Until 2nd September. The artist's personal visual reference library, which he used for commercial illustrations and finished paintings. Oriel Ynys Mon, Llangefni 01248 724444, kyffinwilliams.info

Pensychnant Wildlife Art  Until 30th September. Originals, prints and photographs in various styles and media. 11am - 5pm, £2.50. Pensychnant, Conwy LL32. 01492 592595, pensychnant.co.uk (Contact us if you want to exhibit)

Eli Acheson-Elmassry  1st September - 13th October. Artworks ranging across sculptural, digital and painted media including latex to create coloured flexible ‘Supple-Body’ sculptures and installations which are a kind of meta-object. Using familiar items, Eli Acheson-Elmassry takes impressions and re-forms them in order to recondition their role, suggest new alignments of meaning and lays out alternative psyches of shape. This creative activity probes social issues and the wider political domains, including the complex strata of the realisation of personality. Theatr Clywd, Mold CH7 1YA, 01352 701521, theatrclywd.com

Gilly Thomas RCA ~ Celebrating her 70th birthday. Until 12th September. These paintings, structured and lit dramatically like a scene from a play, or a frame from a film, or a snatched still from a dream, or nightmare perhaps, come straight from a strange internal world that’s both unsettling and absurd. Ffin y Parc, Llanrwst LL26 0PT, 01492 642070, welshart.net

In Black and White ~ Mewn Du a Gwyn  8th September - 17th February 2019. This exhibition represents examples of his wood engravings and etchings, showing fine art prints alongside works intended for publication and commercial purposes. Oriel Ynys Mon, Llangefni 01248 724444, kyffinwilliams.info

Land of Legends: Wales, Arthur and the Tales of Mabinogion  3rd - 22nd September. Set off on a quest this summer to rediscover the magic of the Mabinogion, King Arthur and the Knights of the Round Table. Open daily 10am - 5pm, Sat 11am - 4pm. Contact Wrexham Museum 01978 297460, museum@wrexham.gov.uk

Tom Pryce  Until 5th November. An exhibition on the life and career of Tom Pryce, the Formula 1 driver from the Vale of Clwyd. Denbigh Museum, Grove Road, Denbigh, LL16 3UU. Open Mon & Thurs 2 - 4pm, free. 07792 315723, gwyneth.kensler@denbighshire.gov.uk

Jon George ~ Paintings and Drawings  4th - 29th September. In this exhibition he will be showing some paintings made on a ground gesso surface, with the preparatory sketches for the pieces and additional drawings. Open daily 11am - 4.30pm. There will be a musical preview on 3rd Sept 7.30 - 10pm, free, all welcome; plus a workshop 4th - 8th. St John’s Hall Gallery, St John’s Hill, Barmouth, LL42 1AF. Contact 01341 280261.

NW Open  Until 24th August. This large annual art exhibition features the diversity of artistic talent in North Wales, and includes painting, drawing, printmaking, photography and mixed media works. It is open to submissions from artists living in Anglesey, Gwynedd, Conwy, Denbighshire, Flintshire and Wrexham with £1750 in prize money. Theatr Clwyd, Mold 01352 701521, theatrclywd.com

Summer Exhibition  Until 30th September. Off-the-wall selling exhibition with works by gallery artists and a selection of newcomers. Plas Glyn Y Weddwy, Llanbedrog, nr Pwllheli 01758 740763, oriel.org.uk

Forest + Found ~ Walking the Line  29th September - 18th November. Booth’s large, abstract textile pieces are rooted in the conceptual language and materiality of painting, while Bainbridge’s sculptural forms hewn from wood, reflect a need to create a tangible, physical presence in space. Ruthin Craft Centre 01824 704774, ruthincraftcentre.org.uk

Our empowerment is our capacity to be in choice, moment by moment. Are you present, longing to connect with love and respect, or do you want to be heard for your pain? Pain, as with our every emotion, carries a life enriching message. The intensity of pain indicates the value of what is alive, while the sensation itself speaks to the sensitivity and care that is required in the looking.

However, if the intensity distracts attention from what is deeper and more vulnerable, it may result in ‘life-alienating’ words, thoughts or actions. Beneath this emotional protective barrier is our shadow world, memories of unprocessed frightening or overwhelming events which we carry as burdens of tension.

Tensions that are perpetually alive, yet only brought to our attention at a moment when circumstance arises which ‘trigger’ our emotional memory. These moments can be gifts, precious doorways into our deeper selves, opportunities to access these disconnected parts, to bring them to the present moment, offer them compassion and allow the natural process of healing.

Taking responsibility as an adult requires taking responsibility for feelings. This is the ability to hold any feeling in awareness, regardless on whether it is deemed unpleasant or not, and hold it simply as a source of intuitive information. That is to remain capable of action and not to blindly react habitually.

This journey of taking responsibility is about welcoming pain with empathic acceptance, and an open curiosity for the valuable protective role it plays. It is about sensing the underlying meaning from a place of compassion and empowerment, transforming the energy of the unmet needs to the beauty of the life-enriching needs.

Rik is offering a series of 3 stand alone workshops this Autumn in Bethesda in the art of Compassionate or Nonviolent Communication (NVC), the first of which is on Saturday 8th September, 10am - 5pm. They draw heavily on the process of Nonviolent Communication as well as other awareness processes and may involve some physical activity. Rik is an internationally certified NVC trainer and has been practising Vipassana Meditation and Qigong since 1990. Places on the workshops are limited to maintain a sense of intimacy, and booking is essential. There is a sliding scale for the day of £10 - £80, please choose an amount which is sweet for you, in the understanding that I am trying to make a sustainable living in offering these workshops. Please bring a vegetarian pot luck lunch to share, and arrive by 10 am so that we can start promptly. For more details and to book, please email Rik@LiveNonviolence.uk.

Wales is a country bursting with ancient culture and beautiful landscapes. It is home to a vibrant people, who are intensely proud of their heritage. It sounds like the perfect place for many a traveller to visit – so why then, has it long struggled to attract foreign tourism?

In 2017, more than one million trips were taken to Wales by overseas visitors. This very modest 0.5% increase on 2016 was accompanied by a steep drop in international tourists’ spending – down by 17% from £444m to £369m. These figures were in sharp contrast to London (up 14% to £13,546m) and Scotland (up 23% to £2,276m).

Dwelling too much on this disparity – when both London and Scotland are better connected and internationally more visible – would be a self-flagellating enterprise. But Wales may have expected better after a £5m Welsh government spend on a “Year of Legends” marketing campaign. Putting the heritage of Wales – its legends, landscapes and castles – at the fore was meant to highlight some of its unique selling points.

But while the nation tried to market its “Welshness” abroad, at home it was confused as to what this even meant. Proposals including a giant “iron ring” sculpture at Flint Castle and a nostalgic flirtation with marketing Wales internationally as a “principality” were met with anger and accusations that the devolved government had forgotten the very history it was trying to sell. Sadly, however, none of this is a new problem – Wales has been struggling with foreign tourism for decades – and it is largely down to this disconnection.

During the 1970s and 1980s, Wales’s share of the total amount spent by international visitors to the UK never hovered much higher than about 2%. Then as now, focusing on heritage and culture was seen as a way of addressing the changing tastes and trends which had eaten away at the traditional rural and coastal resort market.

Much has been made of the series of themed years which began in 2016 with the “Year of Adventure”. But Wales has also done this before: 1976 was the “Welcome America Year” while 1983 was the “Year of the Castles”. What was intended as an unproblematic tourist promotion, the year of castles actually became a matter of some controversy in Wales – the castles were mainly built by invaders leading some to criticise it as a celebration of the 1282-3 conquest of the native principality of Wales, and its subjection to the crown of England.

Nevertheless, the plan went ahead, with a year-long festival – Cestyll ’83 (Castles ’83) – at its heart. Though directed and publicised from above, it largely relied on the action of local authorities and voluntary organisations. The only directive was that any activities – from charity pram pushes to medieval pageants – should.
“take place in or near a Welsh castle”. The Wales Tourist Board would eventually claim that some 200 events in Wales during 1983 were inspired by the festival.

Using a castle-shaped stand, the festival was launched at the World Travel Market in London in December 1982. This was followed, at the end of February 1983, with a domestic and royal launch attended by Charles and Diana, the Prince and Princess of Wales, at Caerphilly Castle. Like all commemoration it had a whiff of self-congratulation and a gratuitous swagger. It was also all too easy for the Wales Tourist Board to slip in that the festival was a celebration of the seventh centenary of the building of some of Wales’s most famous castles – such as Conwy, Caernarfon and Harlech – all of which were built by Edward I to secure his conquests.

As a result, the festival was dubbed a “festival of shame”. Modern grievances were transferred onto Edward’s castles. Weren’t these, questioned some, the first English holiday homes in Wales?

That’s not to say it wasn’t a success – on the commercial side, the increase in visitors and buzz it created played a key role in the establishment of the government’s historic environment service CADW to maximise the tourist potential of the country’s heritage. On the cultural side, it highlighted that the medieval heritage of Wales could not be treated as unproblematic. While making mistakes and forgetting its history might be an indicator that Welsh nationhood is alive and kicking – under French historian Ernest Renan’s famous definition of what makes a nation – the castles of Wales remain saddled, it would seem, with a heritage which is both a blessing and a curse. In the present as in the past, Welsh castles have been a source of conflict and cultural exchange.

Tourism may be about commodifying locations – but if Wales wants its own people on board it needs to ask itself what it wants from the country’s heritage beyond potential economic gain. Locals and long-distance travellers might pay more attention to the country if its public history was known for its debate and controversy – and not as a bland footnote to English and British history.

Either way, Wales needs to come up with a solution that both the Welsh agree with and foreign visitors can engage with. The ongoing disconnect is evidently doing nothing to sell the nation to the world.

Each September some of Wales’ most iconic buildings and unusual sites welcome thousands of visitors as part of the annual Open Doors programme.

The annual event sees hundreds of attractions, events and activities open to visitors free of charge (for some of the events you need to book in advance) throughout the month. Open Doors offers both local people and visitors the chance to explore new aspects of Wales’ culture and history.

Buildings and sites that are usually closed to the public will be among the many unseen gems opening.

The Open Doors Days is part of the European Heritage Days and offers a variety of unique opportunities.

A spiritual ‘vision’ led a mum and her daughter to travel over 4,000 miles to a graveside in North Wales.

It was the first time that Tlanghmingthangi Hnamte - Christian name ‘Jennie’ - and her daughter Lalthangliani Hnamte - also known as ‘Marie’ - had ever even been out of their home country of India.

The duo decided to travel to the town of Caernarfon after Jennie, 67, received what she described as a strange “vision” when she was left bed bound by a sudden bout of illness 10 years ago.

In the vision, Jennie said she was told to search for the grave of Peter Fraser - a devout Christian and qualified doctor who spent time in India in the early 1900s as a missionary.

Among Dr Fraser’s many achievements was to abolish the practice of selling some members of the Mizo tribe as slaves to the British in Mizoram state. (For this work, he has been remembered as “The Liberator”.)

He died in 1919 at the age of 59.

The mum and daughter’s visit to North Wales was the culmination of a 10 year “mission” by Jennie who had spent the best part of a decade planning the trip.

Speaking to the Daily Post, Marie, 33, said: “My mother first had the vision where she heard a voice telling her to visit the grave back in 2009.

“She didn’t know who Dr Peter Fraser was when she heard the voice speaking to her in the vision.

“But after speaking to her father, we found out that her grandfather was a tribal elder in Mizoram and had spent a lot of time with Dr Fraser and was a devout admirer of his work.”

After a lengthy flight and a two hour taxi ride from Manchester airport, Jennie and Marie arrived in Caernarfon.

“We hadn’t planned on what to do once we were here but my mother had another vision telling her she had to go to a local church and speak to a woman in red and that everything would be fine.”

The mother and daughter visited the town’s Llanbeblig Church last Sunday morning as part of their quest.

Once there, the first person they met was Caernarfon woman Sylvia James - who just so happened to be wearing red - and they told her of their search.

Sylvia along with other members of the congregation and local community then spent days trying to find the location of the grave by scouring the internet and historical records.

By coincidence, they discovered that Dr Fraser was buried in the graveyard at the back of the town’s Llanbeblig Church.

After locating it, Sylvia’s husband Idris along with Caernarfon councillors Jason Parry and Roy Owen spent hours clearing the graveside of brambles and weeds so that Jennie and her daughter could pay their final respects.
Yesterday (Wednesday) the community came together to hold a special service at the site.

The grave was draped with special ‘Puan’ - a type of colourful wrap-around traditional in parts of India and reserved for respected members of the community - while local Reverend Roger Donaldson said prayers and spread holy water at the site.

The mum and daughter also spent time cleaning and repainting Dr Fraser’s gravestone before today’s service.

Marie said: “This means so much to us as a family.

“We can’t thank all the volunteers enough for what they’ve done to help us - we’re just speechless.

“We phoned home earlier this week to tell the family we’d found the grave and everyone was elated.

“My mother lost her father back in January and he was like a father to everyone in the family really.

“My mother said she couldn’t go to the funeral until her mission to find Dr Fraser’s grave was complete.

“She’s happy now that she can go home and mourn my grandfather properly.”

Rev Roger Donaldson, who led the service, said: “The community really pulled together to make sure that Jennie and Marie would be able to pay their last respects at the grave before they flew home.

“I’d like to thank them for all their efforts, particularly Sylvia, Idris and Norah Davies.”

The Great Invocation
From the point of Light within the Mind of God
Let Light stream forth into the minds of men.
Let Light descend on Earth.

From the point of Love within the Heart of God
Let love stream forth into the hearts of men.
May Christ return to Earth.

From the centre where the Will of God is known
Let purpose guide the little wills of men –
The purpose which the Masters know and serve.

From the centre which we call the race of men
Let the Plan of Love and Light work out
And may it seal the door where evil dwells.

Let Light and Love and Power restore the Plan on Earth.

Geopathic Stress Affects Everyone!
Could your home be responsible for your illness?
Is your relationship being stressed by your house?
Is the earth giving off rays that are affecting you?

The Problem
The effect of Geopathic Stress is to depress the body’s immune system, particularly when you are sleeping over a negative place, causing illness, depression and stress.

The Solution
• Your house is dowsered for all negative influences.
• A report is drawn up.
• The house is cleansed and all stress removed.
• House Dowsering brings back harmony, health and peace of mind.

Could this be the answer you’ve been looking for?
