Welcome to the October Network News. On October 2nd, a full two year celebration begins to mark the 150th anniversary of Mahatma Gandhi’s birth. History tells us that Gandhi’s crowning achievement was the de-crowning of India - but we also honour his commitment to non-violence (which would later inspire Martin Luther King and Nelson Mandela), his work developing a vegan diet (before the word existed), and even the mark he left on the Indian flag... The Ashoka Chakra in the heart of the flag began as a spinning wheel.

On more than one occasion, Gandhi left politics to spin - as a personal, practical discipline and as a contribution to sustainable community. He always believed that the village was the only effective unit for true democracy - where all citizens can meet and talk and plan, eyeball-to-eyeball. The world took the opposite turn.

One of the few who took note was E F Schumacher, whose book Small Is Beautiful launched a thousand beautiful and sustainable projects including Resurgence Magazine and Schumacher College.

One of Schumacher’s fertile ideas was “Appropriate Technology”. He understood the revolution of Gandhi’s spinning wheel and proposed we seek out a “middle way” between, for example, a hand sickle and a combine harvester: human-scale and people-powered technology that is ecological, efficient and autonomous.

We are just entering a new era of Appropriate Technology. A bunch of young creatives are learning to combine networking, digital technology, community building and creative anarchy to develop new tools for sustainable agriculture. They call it “farm hacking” and it is heading to our neighbourhood: Farm Hack Wales is at Tyddyn Teg, Bethel, on October 6th & 7th. (See Page 6)

Blessings to all beings
Harlech Tourism Association were successful in gaining funding from Visit Wales to develop tourism in Harlech. The funds are granted to help extend the Tourist season.

HTA approached me to shape the project into something innovative and exciting. I am already involved in playing Welsh traditional music so I proposed that the music would be an ideal platform to reach across language barriers, while allowing people to hear the language in action. Experiencing some of Wales’s best musicians play and sing is inspiring, exciting and offers an insight into Wales’s living tradition.

Many of our players are making a big impact on the national and international folk scene. Welsh traditional music has gone from being something almost no one knew about to becoming well known and respected. In 2018 Calan were invited to the Shetland Folk Festival, and Vrï and Elfen both performed at Festival Interceltique de Lorient. Wales was the featured country this year. Despite this recognition for the quality of music we have in Wales, there are no festivals to celebrate this fact.

We commissioned Andrew Coomber, one of Wales’s top silversmiths to craft us a contemporary Torc. He used five meters of gilded silver. The Torc is on display in the visitor’s centre at Harlech Castle where everyone can view it. If you are very lucky, you may be allowed to try it on…

We know that not everyone loves folk music and dance, but that is mostly because they have not experienced it first hand. Come along, give it a chance and you may surprise yourself. At the heart of traditional music making is community, storytelling and connection. That is what we have tried to put at the heart of our festival.

We have created a story – Meirion and the Morfeirch - based on some facts. Meirion is said to have existed and the county’s name Meirionydd honours him. An ancient golden Torc was found in Harlech in 1694 and it turned out to be 3000 years old. It is currently on display at St Fagans, Cardiff. We know our seas are in trouble and that pollution is the cause – we also know that seahorses live in Cardigan Bay and their existence signals the sea’s health. We took these elements and crafted a story relevant to the 21st century and we have told it over three events. The final event in October brings everything together and the whole story is revealed for the first time.

Peter Stevenson, a well-known illustrator and storyteller, will be inviting you to contribute to making a Crankie – an ancient form of animation. He will then tell the story.

So come to the festival - surprise yourself, join in, listen, learn, be excited, be joyful and be welcomed into the heart of Welsh culture.

New entrants to farming in Britain are often faced with a long list of challenges before they even put their wellies on. Defra’s 2013 report, Future of Farming Review, details a vast array of barriers faced by new entrants to farming, and highlights the shocking figure that only 8% of British farmers are first generation.

Across the pond in the United States, a different phenomenon is occurring: the arrival of the Greenhorns. In farming terms, a greenhorn is a novice or new entrant into agriculture, and this grass-roots group aims to help them. The Greenhorns have been making waves with their 2014 documentary on young farmers, and they are helping to change the landscape of field-to-fork farming by using technology to organise and up-skill new farmers. Recently, the Greenhorns have developed a specific tool to help connect the diaspora of new farmers spread across the United States – it’s called the ‘Farm Hack’, and it has now arrived in the UK.

What’s a ‘Farm Hack’?

‘Farm Hack’ is a concept coined by the Greenhorns. Think ‘i-fixit’ combined with Wikipedia. Lots of problems – and lots of solutions – all on an open-source, easily accessible platform that allows members to interact, debate and build on each other’s ideas. Although the term ‘hack’ evokes images of computers with Matrix-style numbers flashing across the screen and a virus eating your computer from the inside out, it actually has myriad meanings. These range from the ability to cope well with something to breaking up the surface of soil. In recent years hack has also come to mean a congregation of people (online or offline) aiming to take action or work together to solve a problem.

Taking action and problem solving is exactly what occurred on a sunny spring day in 2015 at Ruskin Mill at an event organised by the Landworkers’ Alliance. A group of farmers – some new entrants, some old hands – gathered together to share their knowledge and see how they could help one another address a wide range of issues faced on the farm.

This first UK Farm Hack was launched by Severine von Tscharner Flemming, the founder of the Greenhorns, with guests of honour L’Atelier Paysan, an innovative group of French farmers, that are reclaiming farming knowledge. It got off to a flying start, with the attentive attendees ready to soak in the energetic atmosphere.

The highlight of the morning’s demonstrations was a bicycle-powered mill from Fergus Walker and the Fife Diet. Coined the ‘People Powered Flour Mill’, it was an ingenious box that looked like a red rocket, and it ground wheat into flour at the turn of a pedal. The afternoon saw a host of inspiring workshops, covering compost tea preparation, 3D printing and how to set up food hubs with the Open Food Network. Alongside all this were welding, blacksmithing and green woodworking drop-in sessions.
The second day culminated in an extremely productive Open Space session that identified projects for collaboration, with a short period devoted to the development of these projects. The Open Space session allowed attendees to get stuck into what they really came for – exploring their ideas, finding solutions and offering help to others. Suggestions were made for regional working groups to skill share and to create training and barter systems, as well as tapping into expertise outside of farming from engineers, CAD experts, coders, academics and architects.

These other networks provided an alternative perspective on solving farming problems by framing the issues differently. For example, a blacksmith may have the expertise to fix a broken tool, but an engineer may suggest a different tool with a new shape or a different attachment to do the job better. It was a team effort – and if you didn’t know the answer, there was almost always someone in the room who did!

Is technology the solution?
Technology is often seen as the golden ticket to problem solving. But driverless tractors, drones and robots are not necessarily the answer (despite what the Daily Mail may want you to think). Instead, we need problem-solving tools that can make a real difference in the hour you have at the end of the day when you choose either to sit at the computer or water the tomatoes. The introduction of organisational tools such as Farm at Hand, Trello and the Farmhack wiki could potentially change the face of farming.

Farmbrite is designed for record keeping and is mobile enabled so it is accessible out in the field. The Open Food Network and Farmdrop support small-scale farmers by connecting customers directly with producers in their local area. And there is Buckybox, an organisational platform designed specifically for community-supported agriculture (CSA) projects.

One of the best ideas of the day was to invite older and more established farmers to share their expertise to help find better working systems. Meeting in real life rather than by email meant ideas could flow more freely, connections could be made and interests shared. Farmers need support through shared best practice as well as from new developments in the field. The wisdom imparted from established farmers who have seen it all before is incredibly valuable. Once this group of farmers got going, the ideas were flowing faster than Severine could note them down – a sign that a network of farmers, old and new, focused on solutions and assisted by technological tools is just what the future of farming might look like.

Manchester Airport, 6am, late September. Where do these people think they are going? They can’t all be trekking in the Himalayas or jogging across the Gobi Desert. Don’t they realise you can buy liquids, gels, and creams just about everywhere in the world? And how can they afford to take a six month holiday? What, they’re just going for a fortnight? My goodness, what unit do these folk measure their luggage allowance in, the Wardrobe? No wonder they thought our hold luggage was hand luggage at check-in!

Do you people dress like this normally? Flip flops, and beach wear at sunrise on a wet day in Manchester? Really? And are you and your missus bound for the same destination, because she seems to think she’s going to a reception at the embassy, and you are dressed for a teenage beach party. The rate the two of you are necking those vodka and limes says to me you won’t be very steady on your surf board by the time you arrive in paradise, and her line in witty repartee is going to be very limited.

Yes, I know they’ve announced we can board now, but if everyone gets up at once, we all just stand in a queue, and what’s the point of that? The plane won’t be leaving until we’re all onboard. You’ve already been allocated your seat. Oh and by the way, the pilot and co-pilot have first dibs on the front seats, so what’s your hurry?

Yes, travelling makes most of us anxious and irritable alright. Some years ago, I attended a lecture on obsessive-compulsive disorder at a UK conference. The American lecturer confessed that he had checked his passport several more times than strictly necessary during his journey from the States. For myself, I can never quite meet the baggage checkers gaze without flushing slightly, and I’m as prone as the next person to frantic bag rummaging as I run over, and over, the packing checklist in my head.

What can the airport experience teach us, about travelling, and about life?

- Authenticity plays well the world over. Wherever you go, there you are, so you may as well be comfortable and be yourself everywhere.
- Take things as they come. Over-preparing will make you anxious and awkward. It’s no bad thing to cast your eye over the guidebook, and to have a rough idea where you are going, but you only need inform yourself of the territory, not the precise route. If your expectations are too elaborate, you will only see what you expect is there, and miss what there is.
- Travel light. Have faith in the generosity of the World to supply what you need when you need it.
- Have confidence in yourself to work out how you need to act in any new situation as it occurs. Pause, breathe out slowly, relax your face and hands, drop your shoulders. Be open to new learning. All will be well.

HIRAETH ARTS FESTIVAL 18th October in Llandudno.

CROESO MENAI is part of a nationwide scheme which gives community groups the opportunity to play the lead role in resettling a Syrian refugee family in their neighbourhood. Wales is at the forefront of Community Sponsorship with families already settled in Fishguard, Haverfordwest, Narberth, Cardigan and Aberystwyth. Croeso Menai would be the first group in North Wales to receive a refugee family, entirely supported by the local communities of Anglesey and Gwynedd. The project has the full backing of Citizens Cymru (citizensuk.org/cymru) who have already guided other communities through the maze of bringing families to live in their community. The first stage is to raise £9000, find a suitable private house to rent and engage the community.

House Dowser

Geopathic Stress Affects Everyone!
Could your home be responsible for your illness?
Is your relationship being stressed by your house?
Is the earth giving off rays that are affecting you?

Could this be the answer you’ve been looking for?

Does your house need healing?
You could be being affected by the earth’s magnetic field. Fault lines and water veins deep under the ground concentrate this field, and they could very possibly be coming up through your house.

The Problem
The effect of Geopathic Stress is to depress the body’s immune system, particularly when you are sleeping over a negative place, causing illness, depression and stress.

The Solution
• Your house is dowsered for all negative influences.
• A report is drawn up.
• The house is cleansed and all stress removed.
• House Dowser brings back harmony, health and peace of mind.

Boduan Sanctuary Wood, owned by The Eternal Forest Trust, is the only place in Wales where you can be buried in established woodland.

This has already been such an eventful month that I just have to tell you all about it! The most exciting event from the Trust's point of view was Rikki Lomas's funeral in the wood. I don't normally write about funerals because they are very personal affairs - apart from Colin's, last year, of course - but as he was the co-founder and inspiration of the whole project and my partner (see Newsletter 100) I felt entitled to share that one with you.

Rikki was a very unusual individual. During the last three years of his life, he spent a lot of time talking about his death, particularly with his celebrant, Alexandra Wilson, who became his trusted friend. One thing he said repeatedly was that he wanted his death to be filmed and made into a BBC documentary. He believed it was important to talk about death, and we agreed with him. His death, however, came more quickly than anyone had anticipated and it wasn't possible to film it.

But by coincidence (or was it?), the timing fitted precisely with a long-planned visit by the TV presenter Kate Humble and her delightful dog Teg, who was to be filmed in the wood for her BBC series, Off the Beaten Track. Kate had said she wanted to be involved in digging a grave so it was Rikki's she helped to finish, hacking at the hard clay with a pickaxe. He would have been so pleased, he was one of her many fans. When she and the production team heard about Rikki's wishes, they were delighted to come back to film his funeral celebration and burial.

Every burial in the wood is unique - there's no sense of the production line here! - but Rikki's was particularly unusual. Alex created a beautiful ceremony, complete with coffee and chocolates, and after the burial, invited everybody present to help fill in the grave, all in accordance with Rikki's wishes. Then, again as Rikki had instructed, we danced on his grave to Bob Marley's One Love. I don't think any of us had ever actually danced on a grave before - not in public view, anyway! It was lovely, though slightly surreal.

It was lovely, too, having Kate and Teg in the wood; they are quite as delightful in the flesh as they are on TV. Such a privilege! The program will be shown some time next year, we don't yet know the date but we shall inform you.

We finished lots of jobs in the wood to prepare for filming - naturally, we wanted everything to be as perfect as we could make it. So there's a proper notice board at the wildflower nursery and plenty of plants for people to put on graves, including hundreds of wild daffodils. There's no excuse now for getting the wrong variety!

The fungus foray, held just over a week earlier, was a success too. We found scores of different varieties of fungi, ranging from Poison Pie, False Chantarelles and Brown Rolltops (all poisonous) to the delicious cep and grisettes that I took home for my supper. The weather was good, the fungi were plentiful, and everybody had a great time while learning about woodland fungi. We are grateful to Charles Aron for leading the foray and we look forward to doing it all over again next September.

Before that, we look forward to Green Woodworking with Billy Bodger. He'll be in the wood from 10 o'clock on 7th October. If the weather's not too bad, I'll be working there on 30th September from about 1.30. Volunteers welcome! Bella:

Progressive International
DiEM25

Senator Bernie Sanders, the former US presidential candidate, and Yanis Varoufakis, co-founder of DiEM25, are calling on progressives worldwide to form an international movement to combat the rise of authoritarianism.

They called for a 'Progressive International' that can bring together people across the globe with a vision of shared prosperity, security and dignity for all.

"While the very rich get much richer, people all over the globe are working longer hours for stagnating wages, and fear for their children’s future," said Sanders. “Authoritarians exploit these economic anxieties, creating scapegoats which pit one group against another.”

Varoufakis said: “Our era will be remembered for the triumphant march of a Nationalist International that sprang out of the cesspool of financialised capitalism. Whether it will also be remembered for a successful humanist challenge to this menace depends on the willingness of progressives in the US, the EU, the UK as well as countries like Mexico, India and South Africa, to forge a coherent Progressive International.”

As a first step, Varoufakis called for the creation of a common council that draws out a blueprint for an International New Deal, a “progressive New Bretton Woods”.

“Yanis Varoufakis is exactly right,” said Sanders. “At a time of massive global wealth and income inequality, oligarchy, rising authoritarianism and militarism, we need a progressive international movement to counter these threats.”

Sanders went on to argue that, “the solution, as Varoufakis points out, is an international progressive agenda that brings working people together around a vision of shared prosperity, security and dignity for all people. The fate of the world is at stake. Let us go forward together!”

At DiEM25 we have been working hard since 2016 to make our stand as the first pan-European grassroots movement, powered and funded by people like you. We come together around a humanist, progressive agenda that can take the fight to the failing Establishment and repair and rebuild our common European project. We are now assembling European Spring, a coalition of progressive political parties from across the continent to compete in the May 2019 European elections to stage a citizen take-over of the EU.

And now, we are playing a key role in bringing together the global progressive alliance that Varoufakis and Sanders are calling for and that is so desperately needed to counter the rise of the hard right. We invite all like-minded political forces in every corner of Europe and beyond to join in!

Together we must send an unmistakable message that the way to beat the Nationalist International agenda of the likes of Donald Trump, Viktor Orbán, Matteo Salvini and the other xenophobes around the world is by running on progressive policies and electing candidates who will represent all of us – as Bernie Sanders says, “on every continent and in every country”.

Let’s end the war on wildlife.
‘Between 1970 and 2013, 56% of UK species declined. Of the nearly 8,000 species assessed using modern criteria, 15% are threatened with extinction. This suggests that we are among the most nature-depleted countries in the world.

Of the 218 countries assessed for ‘biodiversity intactness’, the UK is ranked 189, a consequence of centuries of industrialisation, urbanisation and overexploitation of our natural resources.’

It’s horrifying. Depressing. Disastrous. And yet somehow we have grown to accept this as part of our lives – we’ve normalised the drastic destruction of our wildlife.

To our shame, we are careless with our language. We say that ‘we’ve lost 97% of our flower rich meadows since the 1930s’ or that ‘we’ve lost 86% of the Corn Bunting population’. We speak of ‘a loss of 97% of our Hedgehogs’. Loss, lost... as if this habitat and these species have mysteriously disappeared into the ether, as if they’ve accidentally vanished. But they haven’t – they’ve been destroyed.

Our lazy, self-excusing terminology is representative of our chronic acceptance of such appalling catastrophes. We share these shocking statistics amongst ourselves like a vicious game of top trumps – to the extent that they have lost their meaning. We’ve forgotten that they are a death toll, that they are the dwindling voices of vanished millions, a tragic echo of a recent time of plentiful life.

It’s time to wake up. We must rouse ourselves from this complacent stupor, because we are presiding over an ecological apocalypse and precipitating a mass extinction in our own backyard. But – vitally – it is not too late. There is hope we can hold to, and there is action we can take.

In July this year I conducted a UK Bioblitz and with the help of 785 recorders and 13 recording centres our team clocked up a notable 4,828 different species. Lots of exciting plants, animals and fungi – but also lots of passionate, energetic, skilful, imaginative and creative conservationists. Some were in gardens, some in community wildlife areas, others on wildlife-friendly farms or big flashy nature reserves – all were making a difference in their own important and impressive ways.

We have plenty of tools in the conservation box – we can rebuild, restore, reinstate or reintroduce. But we have one collective handicap – we are shying away from seeing the bigger picture. Too often we distract ourselves with projects which work, but which are too small to stop the rot. Another successful dormouse re-introduction is great, but it’s not going to help redress the degradation of our landscape. We know the bigger issues we need to deal with, and we must summon the courage to face them and fight to fix them. Together.

So all you farmers, foresters, reserve wardens, teachers, students and children, all of you ‘ologists’, scientists, artists, writers and bloggers, you activists, gardeners, can everyone please see that this is not your last chance to make a difference – it’s ours. The UK’s conservation community cannot be selfish. We must let bygones be bygones, all put our egos back in the box and forget about corporate strategies or ‘our competitors’. We do not all have to agree about all the details – but we must agree on a shared agenda. We must stand shoulder-to-shoulder with all of those who care enough to take some action and be part of making a difference.

Our wildlife needs us – and it needs you more than ever.

If we see a person depressed, and we wish, with all our heart, to drive away the dark cloud and to see the light of happiness shine out in him once more, we may think first of courage and joy, invoking these qualities from within the sufferer. We may will very strongly that the dark cloud shall be removed and be replaced by joy. Then we may invoke the angels of light and power to charge him with their radiant energy until he is full of light and happiness; and to remain after we have ceased our prayers, sweeping away depression, and thereby enabling the light of his own divinity to shine through him once more. In this way the sufferer may be filled with courage, peace, and joy.

Again, supposing we are aware that in a city, a district, a house, or a room, there are influences that we wish to drive away, an atmosphere to be made harmonious and pure. We can expel all evil influences and presences by the force of our own will, and, by the aid of the angels, charge the atmosphere with living light and power. Afterwards, by their presence, they will guard the place and maintain the purity and harmony which have been produced. The dark areas of vice, disease, and poverty which sully so many of our cities may be cleansed, and even permanently purified, by continuous endeavor along these lines.

Group meditation is always a most effective way of achieving these ends. Those who are one-pointed, and united in their aspiration to serve by these methods, may well form groups for this special purpose. Seated in a circle, they should direct their thoughts to harmony and unity, until they feel themselves and their angel co-workers to be one.

A prayer should be followed by a period of silence and meditation and, as the angelic power descends, the group should project it, with all the force and concentration of their united wills, upon the place or person chosen as the recipient of their aid. Then the angel members of the group may be directed to act as bearers and conservers of the power, and to labour in the cause for which it was invoked.

As the power available to those who know how to call it forth is boundless, and as the angels exist in countless hosts, there is no limit to the number of causes or of people who can be helped continually by this means. If our hearts are open to the sufferings of humanity, and we practice co-operation with each other and with the angel hosts, we shall soon become adepts at this work, thereby widely increasing the range of our activities and our usefulness in the world.

We may, for example, undertake to help all the patients in a hospital or nursing home, the inmates of a prison, or the staff and patients in an asylum. Daily we may pour the power of our prayers into these places, invoking a host of "shining ones" to enter them and drive away the atmosphere of suffering and depression, and to exorcise the powers of darkness and disease.
The angels will answer in their thousands, and, as we work regularly with them, as is already being done by certain groups, they will become an absolute reality to us; we shall discover, with growing joy and wonder, that a great power is in our hands, enabling us to become radiating centers of spiritual life and blessing in the world.

It is conceivable that the reform movements of the future will use the dual method of physical activity, legislation, and altruistic service, on the one hand, allied to spiritual endeavor along these or similar lines, on the other. If groups of people would meet together regularly to meditate upon, and work by the methods indicated for such ideals as international brotherhood, world peace, the women’s movement, prison reform, the abolition of poverty, slums, slave traffic, the vivisection of animals, very quickly these great evils would disappear and eventually war would be banished from the earth. Such groups would become sources of power to all movements working for these and other ideals, and the angel co-workers would take that power on its mission of quickening reform, of spreading happiness, tranquility, and peace upon earth. Each individual worker would become a center of force, a radiant messenger of peace, and a healer of humanity.

The time will surely come when it may be said, as of old, "angels walked with humanity," for the blending of angelic and human life and consciousness is part of the plan for the coming age. The children of the new race will see and recognize their fairy and angel companions and will play and work with them instinctively. Let no one seek to dull their clearer vision by denial of the fairer world and its inhabitants which their young eyes can see. Rather let the elders train themselves to see and feel with them the beauties and the joys that lie outside the range of vision of the older race.

A great and overwhelming flood of new life is already flowing over all the earth. Upon its bosom the pioneers of the coming age will ride, embodiments of its life and joy. Old forms will be swept away by this resistless tide; new forms, of surpassing loveliness, will then appear; for beauty will be the single standard of excellence and wisdom the only guide. Fair cities will arise, godlike races will appear, and angels will share with them the labours of the coming day.

The Great Invocation
From the point of Light within the Mind of God
Let light stream forth into the minds of men.
Let Light descend on Earth.

From the point of Love within the Heart of God
Let love stream forth into the hearts of men.
May Christ return to Earth.

From the centre where the Will of God is known
Let purpose guide the little wills of men –
The purpose which the Masters know and serve.

From the centre which we call the race of men
Let the Plan of Love and Light work out
And may it seal the door where evil dwells.

Let Light and Love and Power restore the Plan on Earth.
