Welcome to the November Network News. It was striking to see Banksy shredding his artwork by remote control at the moment it sold for £1 million: “going, going, gone”! It was a perfectly timed reminder of an act in 1994, when Bill Drummond & Jimmy Cauty took £1 million of the cash they earned from their “Mu Mu Land” songs, and burnt it in an abandoned boathouse of the Isle Of Jura. They knew it had to be done, but they were not sure exactly why! They showed footage of the burning around the country and challenged audiences to explain it. They faced so much ridicule and anger that they signed a contract at Cape Wrath not to discuss the matter for 23 years... which brings us to November 5th 2018...

We can now reveal at least one of the reasons for their act!

1994 was the year the National Lottery was launched. To those Beings who guard the soul of the nation, this “stealth tax on the poor” was the culminating act of the unchained capitalism that had reduced everything sacred to a “product” and everything human to a “consumer”. We would begin to hear that sad mantra: “If I won the lottery, I could...”. Whereas all true artists and activists know they work despite their lack of wealth and comfort! Worse, the Lottery Fund promised to finance peoples’ dreams, but applicants had to adjust and reduce their plans to fit the criteria, leading to countless half-hearted visions and half-baked projects.

The lottery contract was signed on May 25th and the first lottery draw was on November 19th. Bill & Jimmy initiated their “burnt offering” at the exact midpoint of these dates: Midnight, August 22nd, 1994. It could not stop the Lottery, but it stands as an affirmation of all who cannot be bought or motivated by the myth of comfort.

Blessings to all beings
“It’s too early to start thinking about Christmas!” I hear lots of people saying. The problem is that most of us confuse the festivities of Christmas Day with the celebration of Midwinter and the season of winter generally. Furthermore, if we follow the natural cycles of the seasons as our Celtic ancestors did, Winter starts around the end of October. Many of our customs, such as decorating our homes with evergreens, reflect a historic human response to this season of storms, darkness and a ‘dying back’ into the earth.

Which is why the Solstice at Midwinter on the 21st December has always been of such key importance to all life globally throughout the ages. As winter progresses, light warmth and natural life diminishes and the focus is firmly fixed on the return or ‘rebirth’ of the Sun. Despite the 21st December officially being the Solstice (the name being derived from the Latin for ‘Sun stands still’) and the shortest day when the hours of darkness far outnumber those of daylight, it is actually only on the morning of the 25th December that the increase in daylight can be perceptibly measured and the Sun/Son is said to be born/reborn. Jesus is only the last in a long list of spiritual icons, deities and gods to have their birth date attributed to this beloved and popular date which has always been seen as the most important day of the year when light and life is annually reborn and returns to ensure the continuance of all life upon the planet. Apollo, Isis, Mithras and Sol Invictus are just four among many others who have featured at this sacred time of the year.

By the beginning of November the harvest was well and truly gathered, a tangible insurance against the months of frost and darkness when sources of food were otherwise temporarily unobtainable. Even the pasture withered away to nothing; it wasn’t possible to feed all the herds of animals throughout the lean times and many were culled before the scarcity of winter really began to bite. This was traditionally done around the 11th November at Martinmas or Saint Martin’s Day. As the weather deteriorated work out on the land became difficult, if not impossible. There was little to do at this time anyway; in the hunter/gatherer and then the agrarian society, which predominated, the focus shifted from outside activity to the comfort of hearth and home.

Winter has always been a time for people to come together, to spend time catching up with each other after the busy year, enjoying each other’s company and, yes, also indulging in the fruits of their labours and feasting, drinking and celebration. But this period often lasted most of the winter, not just for one day. The days, weeks and months would roll by in a round of homemade entertainment, singing, story-telling and eating. Here in Wales it was common for the festivities to carry on till near the end of January. Today we are expected to accomplish and be satisfied with a single day. Little wonder we so often feel cheated and dissatisfied.

I feel that we can definitely learn from our forebears. Why not spread the celebrations out and have several lovely occasions throughout the three month period from the beginning of November till the end of January? There are lots of lesser known days which once used to be popular to choose from. Hallowe’en and Guy Fawkes get us off to a good start, but there is also Saint Cecelia’s Day whose focus is music; Saint Clement’s day – smithcraft, metalwork and citrus fruits; Saint Catherine – books; Thanksgiving Day; Saint Andrew’s day and all things Scottish; Advent celebrations; Saint Nicholas’s Day – balancing good and bad, light and dark with gift-giving as a reward; and Saint Lucy’s Day which falls on old Solstice day and who represents Light. After Midwinter and Christmas Day, there are also occasions such as Wassailing, Distaff Day, Plough Monday and Saint Dwynwen’s Day. Bear in mind that although many of these feast days now have saints attached to them, they all have much more ancient origins rooted in our sacred relationship with the land and our older archetypal pantheon of goddesses and gods. Otherwise, where do you suppose Father Christmas fits into our modern-day Christmas celebrations? Look much further back than the Santa Claus of 19th Century America – peer into the Boreal Forest which cloaked much of the Northern Hemisphere 10,000 years ago and you will be getting nearer the truth! Spreading the celebrations throughout the whole of winter also spreads some of the excitement which can otherwise reach hysterical proportions in children and adults alike if it is only focused on a single day. One of the key words here is community. Don’t groan at the thought of providing yet more entertainment for your family and friends – get them all to contribute or take responsibility for a particular occasion. Another key word is teamwork! What greater gift might you give someone than the opportunity to be included, to possibly shine on occasion, to feel satisfaction and receive the approbation of others?

The other important thing to remember is time. Lower your expectations. Plan more realistically. Make time to spend with your friends and loved ones. Move away from all the ‘have to’ expectations which our consumer world pressurises us with. A simple meal or a shared hot festive drink and cake will mean so much more if it is served with love and laughter in a relaxed and happy atmosphere. You also need time to substitute bought meals and gifts for more genuine and authentic ones which you have prepared or made yourself. Spend less – give of yourself.

Lastly, remember to make time for yourself. Winter is the season for looking within, re-evaluating who and what we are and planning for the year ahead; nurturing ourselves and gathering our physical and emotional as well as our spiritual resources.

Move away from the glitz and glamour. Christmas – or any celebration – does not solely emanate from a retail experience. Think outside the box and ask what is authentic to YOU.

Very merry Winter celebrations to you all!

I want to take you on a journey that you might not enjoy, well, emotionally. I hope you do intellectually. You will definitely benefit physically, but for now let’s just remember how nice it is to walk the front at Llandudno, or Newborough Beach and out to Llandwyn, or to cycle the backlanes now that the tourists are thinning out. Whatever your fancy, this is a lovely part of the world and getting around it can be great fun.

History
So where does our ease of access come from?
There have been many great revolutions in the way we move. When did the wheel first roll onto the scene? Thousands of years ago without changing the pace of anything. Then in the Middle Ages, harness, stirrup and horseshoe brought distance to the few and the plough to many. One of the next great steps was when sailing ships and empire became steam ships and trade.

Then finally the greatest revolution of all enabled revolution like none other. A little piece of metal 1/4 inch across. The Ball Bearing.

You may not know this - you probably weren’t around 150 years ago to notice - but the ball bearing improved both car and bike at the same moment. The wheel finally became more useful because it was more efficient.

The car has gone on to give greater access, speed, convenience, comfort; to work, to school, to the countryside. So did the bicycle to begin with - until we all decided that the car was a better deal.

Choice
With it the car has brought bigger roads, car parks, factories and environmental damage. It has carved cities into sub-blocks and taken shopping out of town. We now know more about the level of pollution caused and the danger to life and limb.

Ivan Illich wrote an amazing book in 1974 called Energy and Equity, in which he establishes the far greater damage caused by cars when they achieve “Radical Monopoly” - the state in which one solution deprives us of alternatives.

The bicycle hasn’t made any demands of space or the countryside. It has improved our access and mobility. It causes no pollution whilst improving our health. It is truly equitable.

So why was it that we fell for the car?? Oh yes. Speed.

Speed
To really look at car culture we need to look to America (a merry car...?!)
The average American spends 1600 hours earning his car to achieve his annual average 7,500 miles.*

That is about 4.5 mph. Most people walk that fast. But a walker would spend only 5% of the ‘time-budget’ on walking. The car owner spends 28% of his. You have not only achieved nothing faster than walking - but you have spent 1/4 of your time doing it. The walker has 300-400 more hours of free time; or would have done if anyone in America could still walk. How far did you say it was to Wal-Mart?!

Just as an aside, people in America now walk further to find their cars than nomads do to meet all their needs.
Meanwhile the bike, a far less destructive machine. [Note: “bike” here for the purposes of ethical comparison is neither the Penny Farthing - which undoubtedly hurt a number of people - nor is it any kind of racing bike - certainly not the £15,000 machines used in Le Tour de France. The Humber Safety Bike is the ultimate ethical machine - the one mum had with the basket on the front and which any Dutch person would happily ride.]

Where was I? Oh yes, speed. This bike combines a triangulated tubular frame with flared front forks; tensile spoked wheels; pneumatic tyres and of course a few ball bearings. Thus making it the most efficient tool known to man. Moving merely 3-4 times faster than the walker at 16-24 mph, covering 1 km in 1/4 the time but only using 1/5 of the calories to do so (.15 cal per gram of bodyweight as opposed to .75 for the walker). 20 times more thermodynamically efficient. A person walking will compare well with the energy conversion of most animals and achieve the same speed as a car, while the bicycle outstrips all animals including the buoyant, slipstreamed, 60 million year perfection of the shark.

Planet Earth

After all this time that the planet has been evolving, what does it think about our transport, in fact, everything? The Planetary land area is 15 billion hectares. 35% is desert. Another 30% is ice, mountain, city and so forth. If we remove that 65% from a hectare curiously we get an acre. So, 15 billion acres. The current world population is 7.5 billion - so now you know: we have 2 acres each.

With current population doubling time at 40 - 50 years and upper projections in the region of 12-15 billion, expect to be down to 1 acre quite soon.

In the USA every single person has 1 acre of tarmac. Yes we only have 1 acre each and they have buried theirs! Does it make you wonder where they are going to grow their food? It’s 1 acre for everything.

We are little better at home. The Welsh Government calculates our average figure of consumption at 4.41 hectares, more than 10 acres per person per annum!

Equity

Cars are great consumers. What we didn’t look at in our American comparison was total product time. The 1600 hours invested by the owner earning his car may be devastating to his life’s time budget, but what about everyone else’s? That car was mined, designed, prototyped, tested, and nowadays, deconstructed and recycled. Petrol was drilled elsewhere, serviced by others and so it goes on. We may illustrate how he only achieves 4.5 mph (and less the ‘faster’ his car claims to go!) but when we factor in all other issues, no car can go faster than 2 mph. If we do the same analysis for a bike it achieves a total life speed of about 9 mph.

Walking 4 mph, cycling 9, driving 2.

That is just speed. We have already looked at spacial claims, time wasted, financial costs. There is nothing about a car that will ever be acceptable in an ethical world. We talk a lot about the ecological issues without ever facing the fact that some of the causes should never have been here in the first place. Switching from diesel, going electric, car sharing - all miss the point: Our planet cannot accommodate a single private car. Nor should we.

Equals

All are born similarly mobile. We all walk, and cycling gives most of us an improvement on basic mobility which is non-detrimental to anyone. All western solutions are ‘professionalised’. Housing, education, transport are all dealt with by educated people. The solution to equity, and to mobility, are decidedly below their radar. Yet that Radical Monopoly ensures that all of us have fallen for it.

Illich came up with the idea and he gave us a solution as well. A world speed limit. Just suppose that no one anywhere had personal transport that went faster than a bicycle - say 15 mph. He suggests 25 for distant travel. At such a speed Phileas Fogg would have gone around the world in 40 days!

His point is that basic mobility, and access, and ease of movement must never be denied to anyone. Transport is supposed to ‘improve’ and yet judged against walking it does badly.

Transport must be subservient to basic human ability. The day that one person goes faster than another they do it at the expense of another. The day that we are told this is how it has to be is the day that the Radical Monopoly has begun and equity sidelined.

To perceive that there is an energy crisis requires that you think unequally. Walkers and cyclists cannot have energy crises unless they run out of bananas. Cars run out of energy, not drivers. Is our language subscribing to our submission.

Your Own Acre

I am asking you to think positively about a transition that is about to happen. If you only have one acre what will you spend it on? Do you want to give it to Mercedes to make 1/50th of a car? Or do you want freedom, fresh air, community and belief in a world that loves its planet, its people and its progress?

What Next ~ What Now

On the one hand, we have an ecological footprint that heads towards 1 acre each for everything we ever want to do. On the other a lifestyle that consumes 10 acres per annum.

1 acre is a vast amount of space for food, clothing, housing and bicycles. It is a tiny piece of land to support a car. Even if you haven’t walked in Dubrovnic or Portofino, you have probably been through the Shambles in York or the Lanes in Brighton. All pre-motorcar spaces are beautiful. There are days when the centre of Conwy rings out the joy of convivial space. Let’s rebuild our markets, grow local and throw our backs into the real peace that comes from understanding and living a new Ethic, a new World Equity.

In summary, transport (motorised) as opposed to transit (self-powered) deprives us of our own time and effort. It also deprives others of space and resources. Vans, disabled vehicles and buses have a place - but the personal car has had its day.

PATAGONIA ADVENTURE ACTIVIST TOUR 1st November. Patagonia founder, Yvon Chouinard, realised that our world is at a tipping point; without urgent environmental action, we are on a path to destroying our planet’s ability to repair itself. Businesses and individuals are critical to this; both as part of the problem, and the solution. We all have the ability to make economic life more socially just and environmentally responsible, and less destructive to the natural world that sustains us. Kate Rawles and Sian Sykes share their stories of their passion. Held in Betws y Coed. See Calendar.

Local author Gillian Monks has a new bookout called “Merry Midwinter: How to Rediscover the Magic of the Christmas Season” “… a gentle and warm investigation of winter, which explains why it is important to celebrate the whole season, not just one or two days. It puts into practical terms the physical and spiritual relevance that the solar activity around the Winter Solstice holds for every living thing, and tells us how our most well-known and best-loved Christmas traditions have little or nothing to do with any one religion, but everything to do with the continuation of life and the importance of family and community.”

Available in all good local bookshops and Amazon.

Exhibitions

Ruth Thomas ~ Printmaking, Stencil & Collagraph
Until 27th January 2019. Ruth uses her late mother’s notebooks which documented her daily walks in the countryside, writing about the passing of the seasons, the sky, the weather, plants and all the wildlife she saw. Ruth has used fragments of her mother’s tiny handwriting blown up very large to produce an abstract gesture. Mostyn, Llandudno LL30 1AB, 01492 879201, mostyn.org

Anne Aspinall & Pete Monaghan
Until 7th November. A variety of mediums. Ffin y Parc, Llanrwst LL26 0PT, 01492 642070, welshart.net

Michael Swire
Until 10th November. Zimbabwe portraits and beyond. A former sculptor, Michael has worked primarily in soft pastel since 1987. He recently won The 2017 North Wales Open. Theatr Clwyd, Mold CH7 1YA. 01352 701521, theatrclwyd.com

Nexus
Until 18th November. This exhibition looks at some of the ways in which 21st Century artists and makers are changing preconceptions about their art forms. The exhibitors in Nexus are linked by great technical skill, a capacity for free thinking and confidence in their ideas. Ruthin Craft Centre 01824 704774, ruthincraftcentre.org.uk

Beth Fletcher
Until 7th November. For this new collection of work Beth sends our eyes searching for the mountains, sky and sea. And she rewards us with glimpses of the sun, strands of trees possibly, or reeds floating at the water’s edge. Ffin y Parc, Llanrwst 01492 642070, welshart.net

Wayne Clarke
Until 18th November. Prestatyn-based Wayne makes large sculptural pieces and smaller functional wares, generally from a stoneware body with additives of Ruabon red clay and coarse sand. He uses various ash and shino glazes, as well as vitreous slips to create fascinating surface effects. Ruthin Craft Centre 01824 704774, ruthincraftcentre.org.uk

Criw Celf
Until 11th November. An exhibition combining the work of Gwynedd and Môn children and young people aged 9 - 18 who have worked with Criw Celf, Portfolio and Raising the Bar art groups. Oriel Kyffin Williams, Llangefni, Anglesey 01248 724444, kyffinwilliams.info

James Naughton Copr, Llechi a Cherrig and Deborah Butler Gwaith Newydd

Until 24th November. Photography exhibition featuring some of the Welsh language pioneers of pop, rock and folk entertainment from the 60’s and 70’s. Oriel Plas Glyn y Wedd, Llanbedrog, Pwllheli LL53 7TT. 01758 740763, oriel.org.uk

Poor Taff - Golwg Llundain ar y Cymry / A London View of the Welsh People
Until 4th November. This exhibition will show how the Welsh people were portrayed in the popular press in the 17th & 18th centuries. Some Welsh people adopted the images as acceptable representations of national identity. The exhibition explores how stereotypes of Welshness and Welsh identity evolved over time. Oriel Môn, Llangefni 01248 724444, orielynosmon.gov.uk

Tim Williams ~ Irrespective
Until 17th November. Photographs from Derby, London and New York. Oriel Colwyn, Upstairs at Theatr Colwyn, Colwy Bay LL29 7RU. 01492 577888, orielcolwyn.org

Will Teather
Until 24th November. Contemporary images that reveal an adventurous imagination combined with a mastery of traditional skills. The artist’s paintings and drawings are diverse in both subject and methodology, but bound together by an interest in escapism, allegory, the uncanny and a sense of spectacle. Theatr Clwyd, Mold CH7 1YA. 01352 701521, theatrclwyd.com

With Other Eyes
Until 18th November. A diverse range of international artists and makers; who include photography as an element in their work and who, through this engagement, contribute to the on-going discourse on photographic representation in the applied arts. Ruthin Craft Centre 01824 704774, ruthincraftcentre.org.uk
Rhodri Owen ~ To The Quick / I'r Byw

Forest + Found ~ Walking the Line
Until 18th November. Booth’s large, abstract textile pieces are rooted in the conceptual language and materiality of painting, while Bainbridge’s sculptural forms hewn from wood, reflect a need to create a tangible, physical presence in space. Ruthin Craft Centre 01824 704774, ruthincraftcentre.org.uk

Pierrots Exhibition
Until 31st December. An interactive exhibition showcasing an era of traditional seaside fun about Pierrots in Wales, Will Caitlin and concert parties. 10am - 5pm, Venue Cymru, Llandudno LL30 1BB, 01492 872000, venuecymru.co.uk

House Dowser

Geopathic Stress Affects Everyone!

Could your home be responsible for your illness?
Is your relationship being stressed by your house?
Is the earth giving off rays that are affecting you?

The Problem
The effect of Geopathic Stress is to depress the body’s immune system, particularly when you are sleeping over a negative place, causing illness, depression and stress.

The Solution
- Your house is dowsered for all negative influences.
- A report is drawn up.
- The house is cleansed and all stress removed.
- House Dowser brings back harmony, health and peace of mind.

Could this be the answer you’ve been looking for?

Compassionate or Nonviolent Communication is an awareness process. It differs from other awareness processes, such as yoga and meditation, in that it is relational, its focus is in our use of language, both in our thoughts and in our communication. I have heard estimates that words amount to around only 10% of our actual communication, yet they are windows into seeing our deeper intentions and understanding what is of underlying value to us.

Our older ‘reptilian’ part of the brain is in constant connection with the body and its sensations, both consciously felt and unconsciously present. This is where our responses to our perceptions are formulated and our intuitions are awakened, it signals these parts of the body that incite and drive our words, and it is this ‘energy’ that we are clumsily trying to express in words.

So, how can we more effectively express ourselves in alignment with our ‘bodily held’ intentions, and how do we recognise when we have not achieved this and take responsibility to create clarity? How do we achieve that sense of calmness and integrity which comes from using words which are in alignment with our intention and underlying values? When other people speak to us with words of criticism or blame, what will support us to hear where they are coming from in a non-judgmental way, to hear what it is they are really asking for behind their pain soaked words? And then how can we respond in a way that brings the conversation in the direction that we want, perhaps creating connection, mutual trust and friendship?

Nonviolent Communication holds the assumption that we do and say everything we do because we want to, and the things we want, as we break them down, come to things that are common to all human beings. We all want safety, comfort, friendship, acceptance… these are the roots of all our longings and it is here that we meet.

Rik Midgley will be offering a workshop on the art of Compassionate or Nonviolent Communication (NVC) at ‘Ty Lorne’, 82 High St, Bethesda, Saturday 17th November, 10am-5pm

This workshop is about welcoming our pain with empathic acceptance, and an open curiosity for the valuable protective role it plays. It is about sensing the underlying meaning from a place of compassion and empowerment, transforming the energy of the unmet needs to the beauty of the life enriching needs. It draws heavily on the process of Nonviolent Communication as well as other awareness processes. The day may involve some physical activity. Places on the workshops are limited to maintain a sense of intimacy, and booking is essential. A booking fee of £20 is asked to reserve a place. There is a sliding scale for the day of £10 - £80, please choose an amount which is sweet for you, in the understanding that I am trying to make a sustainable living in offering these workshops. Please bring a vegetarian potluck lunch to share, and arrive before 10am so that we can start promptly.

Rik is an internationally certified NVC trainer and has been practising Vipassana Meditation and Qigong since 1990. The day is open to both those new to NVC and those who wish to deepen their practice. For those that are new, you may get more from the day if you first check out some of the free resources on my website www.LiveNonviolence.uk.

Nowhere is the gulf between public and private interests more obvious than in governments’ response to the climate crisis. On October 15th, the UK’s energy secretary, Claire Perry, announced that she has asked her advisers to produce a roadmap to a zero carbon economy. On the same day, fracking commenced at Preston New Road in Lancashire, enabled by the permission Perry sneaked through parliament on the last day before the summer recess.

She has justified fracking on the grounds that it helps the country affect a “transition to a lower-carbon economy”. But fracked gas has net emissions similar to or worse than those released by burning coal. As we are already emerging from the coal era in the UK without its help, this is in reality a transition away from renewables and back into fossil fuels. The government has promoted the transition by effectively banning onshore wind farms, while overriding local decisions to impose fracking by central dictat. Now, to prevent people from taking back control, it intends to grant blanket planning permission for frackers to operate.

None of it makes sense, until you remember the intimate relationship between the fossil fuel industry, the City (where Perry made her fortune) and the Conservative party, oiled by the political donations flowing from both sectors into the party’s coffers. These people are not serving the nation. They are serving each other.

In Germany, the government that claimed to be undergoing a great green energy transition instead pours public money into the coal industry, and deploys an army of police to evict protesters from an ancient forest to clear it for a lignite mine. On behalf of both polluting power companies and the car industry, it has sabotaged the EU’s attempt to improve its carbon emissions target. Before she was re-elected, I argued that Angela Merkel was the world’s leading eco-vandal. She might also be the world’s most effective spin doctor: she can mislead, cheat and destroy, and people still call her Mutti. Since then, she has done all she can to retain her position as the leading planetary delinquent. That she has now slipped to third place shows only that the collapse of the public service ethos has become a global phenomenon.

Other governments shamelessly flaunt their service to private interests, as they evade censure by owning their corruption.

A report on fuel efficiency published by the US government in July concedes, unusually, that global temperatures are likely to rise by 4°C this century. It then uses this forecast to argue that there is no point in producing cleaner cars, because the disaster will happen anyway. Elsewhere, all talk of climate breakdown within government is censored. Any agency seeking to avert it is captured and redirected.

In Australia, the new Prime Minister, Scott Morrison, has turned coal burning into a sacred doctrine. I would not be surprised if the only lump of coal he has ever handled is the one he flourished in the Australian parliament. But he dirties his hands every day on behalf of the industry. These men with black hearts and clean fingernails wear their loyalties with pride.

If Jair Bolsonaro takes office in Brazil, their gleeful annihilation on behalf of private interests will seem mild by comparison. He claims that climate breakdown is a fable invented by a “globalist conspiracy”, and seeks to withdraw from the Paris Agreement, abolish the environment ministry, put the congressional beef caucus (representing the murderous and destructive ranching industry) in charge of agriculture, open the Amazon Basin for clearance and dismantle almost all environmental and indigenous protections.

With the exception of Costa Rica’s, no government has the policies required to prevent more than 2°C of global warming, let alone 1.5°C. Most, like the UK, Germany, the US and Australia, push us towards the brink on behalf of their friends. So what do we do, when our own representatives have abandoned public service for private service?

On October 31, I will speak at the launch of Extinction Rebellion in Parliament Square. This is a movement devoted to disruptive, non-violent disobedience in protest against ecological collapse. The three heroes jailed for trying to stop fracking, whose outrageous sentences have just been overturned, are likely to be the first of hundreds. The intention is to turn this national rising into an international one in March.

This preparedness for sacrifice, a long history of political and religious revolt suggests, is essential to motivate and mobilise people to join an existential struggle. It is among such people that you find the public and civic sense now lacking in government. That we have to take such drastic action to defend the common realm shows how badly we have been abandoned.

“Learning to care for yourself as effectively as you care for everyone else”
Alice Domar ‘Self-Nurture’

What does it mean to nurture? By definition, it is to take care of; to attend to; to help progress, grow, cultivate; to encourage with compassion and kindness: to nourish, cherish, boost. How do we nurture ourselves? Do we truly nurture ourselves? Many of us are more in the practice of self-sabotage or self-sacrifice as opposed to self-care.

Self-nurture is a pre-requisite for self-care. We have to believe we are worthy to care for first! We may go through the motions of self-care, yet if we do this with a negative, self-critical mindset, then we aren’t nourishing ourselves. It would in fact be detrimental. Pointless booking a massage if you lay there for the session pre-occupied with how your body looks; how you wish it were other than it is; focussing on perceived faults; ruminating on what is happening in your life; being in the past or worrying about a future that hasn’t yet happened! Outwardly it may seem we are practising self-care, but it really needs to come from within to truly nurture us. We need to bring awareness to this self-sabotage so we can change it. Literally re-train ourselves, re-wire our brain via the wonder of neuroplasticity.

We may well have heard of our ‘inner child’. Well we also have an ‘inner parent’. This inner parent enables us to meet the needs of and care for our inner child here and now. This allows us to be fully who we really are, without the negative conditioning carried through from childhood. It is the aspect of ourselves that ensures we are well fed, that we go to bed on time etc. Up to the age of 6 our brains are predominantly theta brainwaves; receptive and therefore profoundly affected by our experiences. These immature ‘scripts’ get carried through into adulthood, influencing what we ‘should’ do or be. Excessively negative thoughts and emotions, self-doubt or even self-loathing are all signs our inner child has unmet needs. Our inner child wants to be seen, rescued and cared for; to feel loved and understood; safe and reassured. To be given the real care, attention and support she may once have lacked.

Ways in which we can nurture ourselves are by sending ourselves loving messages; talking to ourselves like we would do a loved one, a best friend, rather than like a worst enemy! Doing nice things for ourselves, like we do for those we care about. These can even be practical things like keeping on top of our laundry; paying bills; getting enough sleep etc.

Believing in ourselves using positive self-talk. Silencing the inner critic!

Healthy boundaries; saying no when we need to! Yes when we really want to….

Being compassionate; accepting what is, rather than getting frustrated, jealous, angry, or upset that it is so.
One vital thing I learnt on my Doula training was about support. Support with a capital ‘S’. What support do we have in our lives? This is essential to self-nurturing. Support can be inner support - our qualities, experience, skills etc. It is also our outer support - our friends, family, community. It is so important to look at the support we have and see how we can grow it to nurture ourselves further. We need to be supporting ourselves before we can give support to others.

Nurturing is something we can do by ourselves. We need to do some of this alone, sure. That is essential. We must also do it together, in Community. This way, we may well gain support from these other individuals and in turn we can offer support to others. It is valuable to be able to share our stories, our skills, our wisdom, our presence, wherever we are. To return to how we used to be, more connected and in community with each other, yet now with the advantage of technology enabling us to reach those even beyond our locality. To accept ourselves and feel accepted by others just. as. we. are. This is an important one. Authenticity. Letting go of our masks. Being able to shed our armour in safe space. We don't get to really truly do this in many areas of our lives, so let's start to make space for it.

This month will see the first Nurture Circle take place. In the comfort of my own home near Bethesda, Gwynedd. I am opening my space for a small group, up to 8, to come together with the intention of Nurturing. Realising that they deserve this, they need this, they are making space for nurturing in their life. I am looking forward to seeing how this could organically grow, how it will be influenced by the individuals who attend; the stories they bring, the skills and wisdom shared, the very presence of each and every one of us. Hopefully, the planting of this seed will be nurtured and will grow and flourish and propagate!

Let's see how we can Nurture in our own lives; to spread the message of nurturing to others, to really put this into practice, starting within our own minds and spreading outwards amongst our community, through our choices, our actions and our lives. We are then in an ideal position to nurture others and to nurture the Earth which sustains us all: from which we come and to which we shall all return. We are of Her and She is our beloved Gaia, Mother Earth, Pacha Mama, Madre Tierre. Let’s return some of Her nurturing! She really deserves and needs it at this delicate time. Go forth and Nurture...

The Great Invocation

From the point of Light within the Mind of God

Let light stream forth into the minds of men.

Let Light descend on Earth.

From the point of Love within the Heart of God

Let love stream forth into the hearts of men.

May Christ return to Earth.

From the centre where the Will of God is known

Let purpose guide the little wills of men –

The purpose which the Masters know and serve.

From the centre which we call the race of men

Let the Plan of Love and Light work out

And may it seal the door where evil dwells.

Let Light and Love and Power restore the Plan on Earth.

A Network of Goodwill

In every neighbourhood we can find kindred spirits who share a vision of a beautiful and humane world, and who share a commitment to making it a reality.

They might be found planting organically - food, herbs, flowers, forests; or simplifying their lives, using less fossil fuels, recycling and repairing, going by bus and by bicycle, pouring less poison down the sink and less waste into the landfill. They might be working to restore the soul in science; or creating artefacts that are sustainable and beautiful; or sharing their craft in sound, colour or form.

Others are reaching out to those that society has abandoned; or reminding big organisations to respect life at human scale; or challenging “expert” opinions. They may be choosing a more compassionate diet, moving their money to a more ethical bank or credit union, raising their children without force or fear. They may be pioneering new ways to exchange ideas, skills and resources; experimenting with different kinds of household or community; or simply remembering how to play, sing and dance together without dependence on drugs or alcohol.

Some are learning to heal - bringing together wisdom and skills from different ages, cultures and dimensions. Then there are those who are advocates for the voiceless kingdoms - animal, vegetable and mineral - that depend on human beings for their welfare and survival.

Others are struggling to uproot violence - in the nation, the community, the home and the heart - learning to think, to speak and to act without cruelty.

Most are politically engaged, but each with their own unique mix of causes and ideals. Many prefer to "follow the money" rather than a party line - aware that every donation and purchase they make every day is a powerful vote for good or ill.

Most are spiritually active, but without a conventional creed. They may practice meditation or mindfulness, and use the insights and strength from their inner work to inform their service in the world.

Some are reclaiming the great seasonal rituals, aligning themselves with the cycles of Earth, Sun, Moon and Stars; or reinventing those essential rites of passage: the initiations of birth, coming of age, marriage, death and spiritual unfoldment.

Many sense that the world will need a vast outpouring of goodwill if it is to make it through the next few decades intact. Some found their deeper purpose through personal crisis - perhaps global crisis is humanity's great opportunity?

Do you recognise yourself here? Are you a member of this extraordinary group? Are you one of those resisting the great tide of materialism that would engulf our civilisation? Are you among those building little altars and centres and refuges of hope for a more compassionate world? If so, you need support! Network News exists to reach, encourage and support all members of this “network of goodwill”. A space where members can meet, share their gifts and celebrate their unity and their diversity. A place to vision, to collaborate, and to affirm that, truly, “another world is possible”.
