Welcome to the December Network News. Fem’s cover picture celebrates the free movement of birds across borders. In the human kingdom, natural freedom of movement is hampered by fear and it was, of course, fear of migration (and losing an election) that provoked the ill-starred referendum on June 23rd 2016.

Coincidentally, on the very same day, a group of pioneering thinkers were gathering in Vienna for a 3-day conference to share new principles and practices for decision-making at a local or global level. Their subject has various names: deep democracy, dynamic governance, calling a circle, the way of council, and in this case: “sociocracy”. The focus is to find practical, non-utopian ways to make agreements in which all voices are genuinely heard.

The UK Referendum became the unexpected focus for much of their conference, and on the last day the participants drafted an “Open Letter” to all decision makers in the EU. A brief quote:

Deciding based on a majority vote and framing the consultation as a bi-polar question on such a complex and important issue, is very problematic. It leads to a win / lose competition, a polarised debate, where there is no room for truly sharing and evaluating all relevant perspectives and arguments. Majority votes lead to a (significant) minority that “loses” and does not feel heard and represented. It does not have to be that way. Sociocracy provides an alternative way of cooperating and decision taking based on equivalence. One of the key principles is that decisions are taken based on informed consent. This can turn a Yes or No competition into a constructive dialogue, where all perspectives and arguments are heard and taken into account in the decision. Tension from differences in opinion fuel creativity to come to a shared decision…” sociocratie.nl

A Yes/No “peoples’ vote” would simply repeat the same error. And in a party system, even a General Election can do little to help. Let us hope this sorry mess leads us to evaluate and adopt the mature decision-making approaches our planet now so desperately needs.

Blessings to all beings
‘You will find as you look back …. that the moments when you really lived are the moments when you have done things in the spirit of love’

Henry Drummond 1851-1897

This is a story of transitions – some of them happening through choice, most imposed by circumstance. Transitions are often painful. However, looking back over this time, I feel fortunate to have been associated with the work of the CMRP.

‘By seeking and blundering, we learn.’

Johann Wolfgang von Goethe (1749-1832)

I was one of those on the first UK mindfulness retreat in 1999 on Bardsey Island. The Mindfulness-based Cognitive Therapy (MBCT) for depression trial was due to be published the following year. The research results were ground breaking. I remember a group musing that mindfulness-based approaches might prove as significant to mental health as Freud had been to psychology. I was impressed.

In 2000, Jon Kabat-Zinn came to Bangor and taught over 100 people in a grand university room that was almost Harry Potter-esque. These were heady days! Clearly something significant was happening.

A Mindfulness-based Stress Reduction (MBSR) teacher training process followed, held at lovely Trigonos. We were being fast tracked as mindfulness teachers – not how we do things now.

Mark Williams departed for Oxford in 2002, leaving us to develop mindfulness-based teacher training in the UK. This practice community enabled us to develop sound ways of working.

Remarkably, a first postgraduate programme started in autumn 2003 at Bangor University was the first of its kind in the world.

‘There is a river flowing now …. so great and swift that there are those who will be afraid …. Know the river has its destination…. we must let go, keep our eyes open and our heads above water…. See who is there with you and celebrate’.

Attributed to an unnamed Hopi elder

What followed was a period of rapid growth. The world was hungry for mindfulness and we had waiting lists for all our trainings. People travelled far and wide to be trained by CMRP.

We needed to expand our pool of teachers as we were stretched quite thin. We recruited team members from outside North Wales. This opened our eyes to fresh horizons.

Extraordinarily, over the years, CMRP has trained more than half the mindfulness-based teachers in the UK. Our trainings found their own character and integrity.

‘All improvement begins with the identification of a problem.’ Mazaaki Imai (b. 1930)

While the team was growing, Mark Williams in Oxford was launching his research trial that was to be known as SWAD (Staying Well after Depression). Our two most experienced teachers, and several others, formed his Bangor team. At a stroke, our team composition changed and a major transition was underway.

However, it proved to be an important opportunity. A part-time director was appointed and CMRP moved into the School of Psychology. Some key appointments were made. We moved into a stage of consolidating, which was much needed after such rapid growth.
Widening the Context:
Interdependence (2012 – 2017)

‘In the long history of humankind, those who learned to collaborate and improve most effectively have prevailed.’
Charles Darwin (1809 - 1882)

When our SWAD colleagues returned, it was natural for us to move into even closer collaboration with Oxford and Exeter mindfulness teams. A gathering of UK mindfulness-based teachers and trainers produced Good Practice Guidelines for Mindfulness-Based Teachers. Several versions later, it influences good practice in many parts of the world.

A UK listing of approved mindfulness-based teachers was established.

Our graduates and trainees started their own training organisations moving us into grandparenting. A good place to be, admiring of their achievements, but not responsible for all the hard work involved.

Several books and many articles have been written by team members.

New training programmes were spawned. A Teacher Training Pathway (TTP) bringing together all our training, for those wishing to be accredited outside university programmes.

It is extraordinary to realise that mindfulness is now ‘mainstream’. Yet our reach into diverse and marginalised populations is poor. We need to find ways to support and train teachers from these communities. This is important, reflected in the next International Conference on Mindfulness (ICM) to be held in Denmark in 2020: “Diversity & Oneness ~ for the sake of all beings”.

Joined-Up Complexity: Endings and Beginnings (2018 and beyond)

‘The main thing is to keep the main thing, the main thing’
Stephen Covey (1932 – 2012)

Who are we? Are we CMRP or Bangor?
When our valued alumni association was formed, they took on the name of Friends of Bangor (FoB).

This is very relevant now. An overhaul of university finances required us to find a new home for much of our training. A few people working behind the scenes, have made possible Bangor’s Teacher Training Pathway to be housed within The Mindfulness Network (MN) charity, retaining the experience of our trainers and the quality of our training, yet still validated by Bangor University.

We have a new young team working hard to bring this transition together.
CMRP lives on in the Bangor Master’s in Mindfulness programme within the University’s School of Psychology and in the Teacher Training Pathway within The Mindfulness Network charity. CMRP spans the two, as a University in partnership with The Mindfulness Network charity.

So what of the future? I am left with: It is not so much what or how much we do that matters - but how we do it - keeping the main thing (mindfulness), the main thing.

So, whatever the future brings for CMRP – may we continue to do this work in the service of all who might benefit.

The Planet

One third of the planet is devoted to agricultural production. One third of the world’s population derives its livelihood from agriculture. The land area on Earth is 14.9 billion hectares; of which one third is ice and desert, and one third is forest and wilderness. One third we can’t use, one third we shouldn’t use, perhaps, and one third we use very intensively. That is about 5 billion hectares of each.

The Internet, the World Bank, the State of the World Atlas - and many other sources - have given us some curious and complex subdivisions. The World Bank completely confuses the issue by leaving out the 1.8 billion hectares of ice. So beware if you try to check these figures! All we need to know for now is that there are 5 billion hectares of agriculture of which one third is crop land and two-thirds pasture for livestock.

Land Pressure

The UN is very clear that the acreage of agriculture will remain the same. It will not increase. We have tried to fell rain forest for cattle, and tried to irrigate desert. The former, we should never have started and the latter is right up against growing water shortage. Yet in both cases the issue boils down to soil or the lack of it. Unfortunately however this is the problem even where we think the land is good. We lose worldwide on average 3 1/2 tonnes of soil for every tonne of food we produce. That is pretty much the same as saying that we lose 3 1/2 tonnes of soil every year for every person on Earth.

What Now?

So the question is:
As population rises through this century from 7.7 billion now to 11.2 billion... a] Do we have the land? and b] Do we have the soil?

The answer? With current practice, on both accounts, it is a categoric NO,
Yet - with a few changes - an easy and resounding YES

The Good News

Let’s look at the solution first so that you don’t get too depressed to read to the end!

In 1920 a man named Alan Chadwick left Britain for California where he set up home on the edge of the desert. He decided to grow his own food and set about making soil because basically, he had none. He borrowed ideas from French Intensive - the technique that fed Paris a century earlier - and he borrowed from BioDynamics.

This combination is very soil friendly. Close planting stops erosion and evaporation. Both soil and water stay in place. Companion planting aids productivity and pest control. Yet the greatest success was in growing extra crops to make compost.

Living Soil

Soil is only, well largely, vegetable matter decomposing. By adding layers on top and never digging, three things happen:
First, the soil does not breakup. Second, the life in it grows. Third, carbon is retained. Digging and ploughing destroy all three. To understand this we have to look through a microscope. There is more microbial life in a handful of good humus than there are people on Earth. They are alive and kicking in the ‘top soil’ of 2 to 6 inches, literally billions of them all working to ‘farm’ plants for us. The rye plant for instance may have 6000 miles of root hairs which are in constant conversation with the microbes. Fungi have special symbiotic plant relationships and their root system may be 2 miles across. Plants grow because of living soil. Soil grows because we leave it alone and feed it from the top.

Bio Intensive Mini Farming

John Jeavons took over from Alan Chadwick, collecting data and writing the book How To Grow More Vegetables. They consistently grew 1” of soil every 8½ years. Nature takes 500 years in good locations and would have taken 1000 in the area Jeavons was living. For every bed of vegetables they grew two beds of compost: one bed to effectively replace the crop they had removed, and the other to grow the soil. And they also produced all the food for one person for one year in 4000 square feet - using their method. That is to say 1300 ft² of food and 2600 ft² of compost. Farmer and planet living in constant harmony at less than 1/10 of an acre per person.

Ecological Footprint

Let us return to current practice and see where the world is going. We have been looking at agriculture which uses ⅓ of the land yet ⅔ of the planet contains biomass. To do an ecological footprint we include the forest area that we fell and the land area used as carbon sink to offset our cars and heating. The EF for the western world is about 5 hectares per person. That is the annual use of biomass per person. 5 hectares or 12½ acres, and in Wales 4.41 hectares or just under 11 acres each.

Ethical Footprint

And how much are we entitled to? For this we take the 10 billion hectares of ‘Habitable Land’ as the World Bank, UN and others call it - that is, everything that grows, rain forests included - and divide it by the population. Currently 10 ÷ 7.7 = 1.3 hectares or 3.21 acres per person. Or if we just look at farming: 5 ÷ 7.7= .65 hectares or 1.6 acres.

In 2050 with a population of 9.8 billion this is 2.52 acres, and 1.26 acres. In 2100 with 11.2 bn people this would be 2.2 acres and 1.1 acres.

So, we are heading towards having 1 or 2 acres each and how you view this depends on whether you wish to live in a world that pushes to the brink and “uses” the whole Earth... or whether you feel we should start curbing our excesses and reign-in to the land we know has been productive.

Put another way: Do you have what it takes to start living on 1/10 of what you have been used to or are you going to settle for ⅜ and keep your fingers crossed? Either way, right now we are living on between 4 and 8 times of the land we are each entitled to.

Continued over
What Needs To Change?

Jeavons and others find their food sustainably on 4000 ft², and obviously they can do it on less once soil is restored. They are already down to ⅒ of an acre with a strong healthy biodynamic vegetarian diet.

The average American vegetarian diet requires 2 acres per person but a meat diet will take 4 or more acres. Cattle produce 1 gram of protein for 1 square metre of land. That is 10 times the area consumed by any other form of food: pigs, chickens, maize, rice etc.

Livestock use 80% of all agricultural land because crop land also produces animal fodder. Yet only 20% of our calories come from meat. Rethinking how much meat we eat will have the greatest single impact on area consumed. Individually we cannot presume to have ‘acres’ of meat when we only have one acre each - for everything.

Stop Soil Loss

The average 3½ tonnes of soil lost per person per year seems just unbelievable. That is 24 billion tonnes of erosion each year. This happens more on crop lands where soil is exposed. It has nothing to do with depletion due to growing. The combined effect appears to be that soil is lost 18 times faster than it is replaced. Regardless of how much land can be saved by switching away from beef, we also need to set aside half our farmed area for growing compost.

The UN says that 24% of the world’s soils are ‘degraded’ which means ‘showing signs of reduced ability to crop’. Possibly the biggest single cause of soil destruction is mechanisation, both ploughing and the use of petro-chemical fertilisers and pesticides.

A Sense of Humus

Biointensive farming would easily feed a world of 11 billion people. It would restore soil at the same time. It would reduce water consumption by 80%. It would sequester carbon. Good soil holds 4000 billion tonnes of carbon, that is 4 times the atmosphere and all the trees combined.

But most significantly it would bring our rampant Western land consumption back down to levels acceptable to all whilst providing us with a better diet than we have now.

The Age Of Equity

Let us live in a world that does not threaten the rain forests, does not create more desert, nor blindly consume land beyond our fair share. Nor may we choose to live ‘right on the edge’ when it is clear that we have pushed soil beyond its capacity and the world’s poor beyond theirs. 72% of the world’s farms are less than 1 Hectare!

Let’s get our ridiculous consumption down from as much as ten acres to something nearer ⅒ acre because there are people out there who have shown us how to do it.

Let’s find the moral gumption to follow suit and both farm and eat less extravagantly.

TOGETHER FIRST
A Global System that Works For All
Shared problems
From climate change to nuclear weapons, cybercrime to terrorism, the risks we face cross national borders. Our solutions must be global. How do we build a global system that works for us all? And how can we ensure that everyone is part of that conversation?

Shared solutions
Together First will launch a multi-stakeholder agenda for dealing with the risks that humanity faces. Countdown to 2020 – our opportunity to act. The UN’s 75th anniversary in 2020 must be the starting point of a global governance transformation. Together First is campaigning for a multi-stakeholder summit to mark this occasion – to discuss, adopt and initiate the reforms we urgently need, and to unite around a shared vision for the future.

This issue is dedicated to our friend Genny Bove who died in November. Genny was a tireless peace and justice campaigner, activist, disability rights campaigner, artist and anarchist, who befriended Chelsea Manning’s family and worked hard to secure her release. Genny’s energy, commitment and love for people will be greatly missed.

Art, Aesthetics, Architecture and Algae A talk by Professor David Thomas - School of Ocean Sciences at Bangor University. Part of The Year of the Sea Lecture Series. Science can be perceived as sterile, routine, complicated and impenetrable except to a select few. Seaweeds (algae) are frequently viewed as being a smelly nuisance. In contrast the world of art and design is a hive of creativity that entices an audience through appealing to our emotions and senses. David Thomas will illustrate how these apparently different fields are underpinned by similar inspiration – often just expressed in different words. 7pm, Mostyn, Llandudno 01492 879201, mostyn.org

Deborah Butler ~ Gwaith Newydd Until 24th December. Featuring new work capturing the character of urban environments and the tranquility of Wales’ coastline through layers of paint expressing the effect of light, weather, movement and buildings on the landscape. Oriel Plas Glyn y Weddw, Llanbedrog, Pwllheli LL53 7TT. 01758 740763, oriel.org.uk

Ruth Thomas ~ Printmaking, Stencil & Collagraph Until 27th January 2019. Ruth uses her late mother’s notebooks which documented her daily walks in the countryside, writing about the passing of the seasons, the sky, the weather, plants and all the wildlife she saw. Ruth has used fragments of her mother’s tiny handwriting blown up very large to produce an abstract gesture. Mostyn, Llandudno LL30 1AB, 01492 879201, mostyn.org

Criw Celf Until 11th November. An exhibition combining the work of Gwynedd and Môn children and young people aged 9 - 18 who have worked with Criw Celf, Portfolio and Raising the Bar art groups. Oriel Kyffin Williams, Llangefni, Anglesey 01248 724444, kyffinwilliams.info

The 2018 Wrexham Open Exhibition Until 16th December. Hosted by Tŷ Pawb and Undegun, Wrexham with the support of Wrexham County Borough Council, THIS Project, East Street Arts and the Arts Council of Wales. 6 - 8pm. Undegun, Regent St., Wrexham LL11 1SG. Contact Anders Pleass, Coordinator: anders@wrexhamopen.com

Josephine Meckseper Until 3rd March. One of the foremost female artists of her generation working today, Meckseper melds the aesthetic language of modernism with the formal language of commercial display, combining them with her own images and film footage of historical undercurrents and political protest movements. Mostyn, Llandudno 01492 879201, mostyn.org

Rhodri Owen ~ To The Quick / I'r Byw Until 6th January 2019. Rhodri contrasts his own hand-crafted furniture with transfigured pieces in visually unexpected ways. Oriel Môn, Llanefyn 01248 724444, oriel@ynysmon.gov.uk

James Naughton ~ Copr, Llechi a Cherrig Until 24th December. Inspired by the industrial remnants found in Northwest Wales. Oriel Plas Glyn y Weddw, Llanbedrog, Pwllheli LL53 7TT. 01758 740763, oriel.org.uk

NW Potters A selection of work by members, November - December. Mostyn Art Gallery, Llandudno LL30 1AB, 01492 879201, mostyn.org, northwalespotters.wales

Louisa Gagliardi ~ Under the Weather Until 3rd March. Gagliardi’s work pulls apart the construction of an image, and of our society, in a digital age, while appearing to explore the codes and history of painting. Her works pose questions around ideas of figure and ground, flatness and depth. Mostyn, Llandudno 01492 879201, mostyn.org

Katie Allen Until 5th December. Combining elements from Art Nouveau and Art Deco, as well as Eastern and Japanese traditions, she constructs landscapes that are both flowing and formal. Using repeated motifs which evolve and develop, she creates shimmering works full of rhythm, balance and precision. Ffin y Parc, Llanrwst LL26 0PT, 01492 642070, welshart.net

Pierrot's Exhibition Until 31st December. An interactive exhibition showcasing an era of traditional seaside fun about Pierrots in Wales, Will Caitlin and concert parties. 10am - 5pm, Venue Cymru, Llandudno LL30 1BB, 01492 872000, venuecymru.co.uk

Cywrain ~ Form and Space Until 31st December. A project for applied arts and contemporary craft and design, celebrating makers and artists from the Celtic regions. Galeri, Caernarfon 01286 685222, galericaernarfon.com

In Black and White ~ Mewn Du a Gwyn Until 17th February 2019. This exhibition represents examples of Charles Tunnicliffe’s wood engravings and etchings, showing fine art prints alongside works intended for publication and commercial purposes. Oriel Charles Tunnicliffe, Llangefni 01248 724444, kyffinwilliams.info

Dorothy M Williams Until 18th February 2019. Dorothy is attracted to the man-made environment, often including figures; using sketches with a rich palette. Free entry, open 10am - 5pm. Oriel Hir, Kyffin Williams Gallery, Llangefni, Ynys Mon LL77 7TQ, 01248 72444, oriel@ynysmon.gov.uk
Indian Threads ~ Textile Inspirations Until 27th January. This exhibition is a celebration of a wider exchange project known as Threads. Artists from Wales and artisans from Kachchh in rural Gujarat have shared studio time and field trips, community traditions and personal experiences. Skills rooted in generations of textile practice and impressions forged by open minds and new horizons come together to give this exhibition heart and soul. New work being developed by Rajiben M. Vankar, Champa Siju, Julia Griffiths Jones, Eleri Mills, Laura Thomas and Louise Tucker promises to delight.

RCA Members Winter Exhibition Until 29th December. A selection of members work. Open 11am - 5pm, free. RCA Crown Lane, Conwy LL32 8AN, 01492 593413, rcaconwy.org

Ingrid Murphy ~ The Language of Clay Until 27th January. Connectivity is crucial to Ingrid Murphy, between people and places and across time. Her explorations provoke and surprise us as she marries traditional ceramic processes with creative technologies. Ruthin Craft Centre 01824 704774, ruthincraftcentre.org.uk

David Frith & Margaret Frith Until 27th January. This exhibition showcases their ceramic work in the year when they both celebrate their 75th birthdays: their enthusiasm for life and art is an inspiration to us all. Ruthin Craft Centre 01824 704774, ruthincraftcentre.org.uk

Anweledig ~ Unseen December & January. Courtyard spaces. Fleeting, transient moments, often missed by the casual observer of the Centre. Fascinating scenes, playing out in real life that are overlooked and often ignored, but that make up the moments of our daily lives. Ruthin Craft Centre 01824 704774, ruthincraftcentre.org.uk

Dewi Tudur ~ Chiaroscuro Until 5th December. These works are carefully composed and finely balanced; daring in their simplicity and economy. He leaves space. There is silence and stillness. The mood is contemplative and tender and yet there is considerable concentration and intensity. And something fierce also. Ffin y Parc, Llanrwst LL26 0PT, 01492 642070, welshart.net

Storiel ~ New Again Until 30th March. Examples of ‘recycling’ from Storiel’s museum collection. Some are beautiful pieces made from treasured fragments, others discarded broken objects used in a new way. Fford Gwynedd, Bangor LL57 1DT, 01248 353368, storiel.cymru.

Beca Rising ~ Peter and Paul Davies Until 5th January. The exhibition focuses on the practice and collaboration of the brothers, who often worked collaboratively through shared ideas. It celebrates the achievement of the late Bangor-based Paul Davies. Whilst it cannot cover the full range of his work, ideas and contribution, it does present an indication of his influence and relevance. Beca celebrates the fight for rural justice in South West Wales c1841. It helped to put Welsh issues of identity, language, culture and politics on the visual arts agenda. Storiel, Fford Gwynedd, Bangor LL57 1DT, 01248 353368, storiel.cymru.

House Dowser
Geopathic Stress Affects Everyone!
Could your home be responsible for your illness?
Is your relationship being stressed by your house?
Is the earth giving off rays that are affecting you?

Does your house need healing?
You could be being affected by the earth’s magnetic field. Fault lines and water veins deep under the ground concentrate this field, and they could very possibly be coming up through your house.

The Problem
The effect of Geopathic Stress is to depress the body’s immune system, particularly when you are sleeping over a negative place, causing illness, depression and stress.

The Solution
• Your house is dowsed for all negative influences.
• A report is drawn up.
• The house is cleansed and all stress removed.
• House Dowser brings back harmony, health and peace of mind.

Could this be the answer you’ve been looking for?

Paris, December 2015: Saving The Planet?

It happened in big exhibition sheds, at Le Bourget, 8km north-east of central Paris. By 2015, then the hottest year on record, the clock was already ticking on virulent climate change. 21 years after the world signed up to UN's Framework Convention on Climate Change, triggering years of extensive annual meetings (ie. Conference of the Parties or COP), its long road had led to two weeks in Paris, in early December 2015. More than 40,000 delegates attended COP21, from national teams, UN agencies, NGOs, indigenous peoples, civil society, media and journalists.

Reminder of context: COP21, was preceded by thirty years of science denial by the 'merchants of doubt' corporate players had wrought mass impedance of public policy, largely perpetrated by the big oil companies, including Exxon and Shell both in denial of their own 1980s’ research, along with extensive funding of political lobbyists (aka. 'think-tanks'); not least from the multi-billionaire Koch brothers in the US. It is against this corporate antagonism to humanity’s future welfare, the achievement in Paris should be weighed.

And so the world’s 195 countries, all immersed for a common cause at Le Bourget, met to save humanity from run away climate change: to interact, tortuously argue into early hours and to compromise towards an agreement, orchestrated by their French hosts. In the closing days several versions of the agreement still circulated. For many years, a global warming target limit of 2°C had been the focus but now the small island states, and civil society especially, were having none of it. Canada too, in close-door session, came to champion the aspiration 1.5°C. It all fed into an increasing crescendo of hope.

Friday, 11th December came and went, negotiations stretched on, tension built at Le Bourget. So too in Paris it was, where tens of thousands of climate activists had come from across Europe and the world to rouse the delegates onwards. With the terrorist atrocities of a few weeks earlier, the Paris police edict on the Friday was any assembly of more than three people would face arrest. In defiance on Saturday, as the Agreement was still being worked on, a carnival of about 20,000 protesters, plus a few polar bears, assembled on the boulevard de la Grand Armée, just north of the Arc de Triumphe, all contained by thousands of armed police.

Finally, at 19:20hrs, Saturday evening, with a finished draft concluded and agreed by every country, President of the COP21, Laurent Fabius, declared the Agreement, which included the crucial 1.5°C limit aspiration. Even the cynical cried and celebrated. With hindsight, we can now see that if the Paris COP21 had failed to reach a tangible agreement, our tenuous window of opportunity for any effective global response to catastrophic climate change may have been lost completely.

The Paris Agreement is a unique testimony to human civilization. Ironically, it came into force a few days before the US elected one of the most obscene affronts to humanity. Now 184 countries have ratified the Agreement, representing 90% of global emissions, with a rapidity of adoption unlike any other UN treaty. The Paris Agreement was the bare bones. With follow on COPs; such as at COP24 in Poland this December; there is much to do on process and implementation. A UN report called for at Paris, to distinguish between a 1.5°C and a 2°C world, was delivered in October. With high confidence, it spells out the dire difference and underscores the urgency for action.

Since Paris, China has invested more than a third of a $ trillion in renewables; India is on track to exceed its ambitious 2022 target for solar energy; Costa Rica is set to be zero carbon by 2021 with a big shift towards renewables seen in many other countries. Since 2015, divestment from fossil fuels has almost doubled to over $6 trillion. Despite Trump, 40% of the US population is under cities subscribing to the Paris goals. Closer to home, Greater Manchester have set a zero-carbon target of 2040. As for the foot-dragging of the UK Government, and what individuals can do, perhaps that will have to await another article.

At Paris Bill McKibbern, of 350.org, tweeted: “This agreement won’t save the planet. It may have saved the chance to save the planet (if we all fight like hell in the years ahead)”.

Now, we’ve all heard about, ‘Scrooge, the Christmas Carol’, written in 1843 by Charles Dickens and considered one of the scariest and by far the most moralistic story of the Christmas season. An evil, bitter old man must change his ways before it’s too late and is visited by three ghosts who terrify him with the truth in order to help him live a better, happier life – LOVE IT!! My favourite is Patrick Stewart in the original story, but who can hate, Bill Murray’s ‘Scrooged’???

It is a yearly pilgrimage which I thoroughly enjoy to touch base with something so important, but never forgotten throughout the year – love and compassion, gratitude and kindness.

What yearly spirits wander the earth at Christmas?

There are other spirit’s that wander the earth during this season of good cheer. It is not only the three ghosts of past, present and future!

One of the most dramatic is that of the re-enactment of the English Civil war at Edge Hill Warwickshire in 1642. Following the bloody battle in October of which over 2000 men lay dead, shepherds became aware of loud noises in the vicinity and it built into what they described as ‘a full battle happening once again’. Thundering cavalry, smoke, cannons fired, men screaming, neighing of horses and beating drums. The shepherds ran for their lives, but instantly, the whole scene vanished. On Christmas Eve, the whole phantom battle appeared again, only this time it seemed to be above ground, hovering above the fields. Witnesses saw men they recognised and had died, but also, Prince Rupert, who was at that time, very much alive!

Anne Boleyn’s ghost is said to appear each Christmas at Hever Castle, her childhood home. She is said to manifest beneath a great oak tree where Anne and Henry courted. Her ghost also walks across the bridge, which crosses over the River Eden on the castle grounds.

The black dog of Exmoor is a notorious legend but one of its most dramatic appearances is at the beginning of the Second World War. A bus travelling from Barnstable Station for the Devon coast left on time at 5.40am. It was Christmas Eve and there were two passengers onboard, the conductor and the driver. The moon was full and the road ahead was clear, when suddenly, two sheep and an enormous dog appeared right in front of him. He braked, but he was going to hit them and braced himself for the bump – it never came. He ran out onto the road and saw nothing.
the road and looked beneath his bus, nothing. Everyone got out and searched for the three animals, nothing. They simply vanished.

During the Christmas season another ghost haunts the Tower of London, that of a bear. Bear baiting was legal and performing bears were popular in the early 18th century. In 1816 a sentry on duty at the jewel House became aware of a dark shape coming through the door. He was so terrified, he thrust his bayonet at it, but it went straight through. He fell to the floor senseless. He never recovered properly.

And lastly, a favourite story of mine. A couple, married for five years lived in a country manor, near Barnstable, Devon in the 19th century. One autumn his beloved wife fell ill and died from pneumonia. Heartbroken, the husband was unable to attend the funeral, held two days before Christmas and shut himself away in his study. The vicar, annoyed to be leaving his own home during the festive season held a very quick service so that he could return to his home and fireplace. However, before the lid was placed on the ladies coffin, he’d noticed a gold sapphire ring on her finger and after many glasses of port; he decided to collect it himself. (In those days, most high class people were laid out in stone crypts)

Hurrying to the graveyard, he let himself into the crypt and attempted to pull off the ring, it wouldn’t budge, so he returned to his home to find a small saw and cut off the ring. Holding up in the air to admire it he smiled as it shone in the lanterns orange glow.

At this moment, the body of the woman rose and walked towards him. Horrified, the vicar dropped the ring and fled, out onto the cliffs and threw himself off. If only he’d waited. The lady wished to thank him.

He had cut her finger in the process of stealing her ring and it had brought her back from the coma she had been in.

Wearing nothing but her fine silk dress and shroud, the lady walks barefoot in the snow towards her home, half fainting from the cold. She bangs on the door to be let in, but no servant answers as they are all in bed, sleeping off Christmas celebration.

She throws gravel at her husband’s study window and screams to be let in before she dies. He comes to the window and declares that it is a terrible joke to play on his grief.

‘I am no joke. I am no ghost, for I bleed… See…’

Her husband hurries down and lets her in, reviving her with warm blankets, brandy and the fireplace. A year later, their first child is born.

Isn’t that sweet? So, remember, enjoy Christmas but remember to look out for ghosts, spirits (not those in a glass!!) and be safe, loving and kind. May I wish you all a very Merry Christmas and blessings of Yule.

Last month an old friend and I met up with our respective partners for a nostalgia fest in Dundee, the city where we both lived in the nineteen eighties. We first met when we fell into conversation waiting for our lectures in the Main Arts Building at the university there. I was a full time student and Caroline was taking a day release course.

That was in 1983. Caroline has lived most of her life since then in the North East of England, and I’ve lived most of mine in North West Wales. Given the distance, we haven’t seen each other often, but we have one of those friendships where we pick up the conversation just as if we had been apart for no time at all.

Through Caroline, I met Raymond, her husband. Caroline also introduced me to Shona, now another of my closest friends, who lives in London. Shona has in turn introduced me to half a dozen other people over the years. So much human connection from a chance conversation outside a lecture theatre in Dundee thirty-five years ago!

As Anais Nin is credited with observing, we see the world not as it is, but as we are. If we find the world unfriendly, it’s probably because we are. Making friends can be difficult, it’s true, but the difficulty is less that we don’t know where to meet interesting people, or that we can’t think what to say when we do, but rather that we close our hearts to the possibility of contact.

At the core of most loneliness lies what we Cognitive-Behavioural Therapists call Self or Other Downing: the tendency to be automatically and irrationally critical of oneself and/or other people. Lonely people either think other people will judge them, and find them wanting, or they judge other people and find them wanting. This is their mistake, probably born of one or two bad early life experiences, but a mistake nonetheless. When countenancing one’s fellow mortals, a fair-minded person would have to conclude that there is infinitely more cause for admiration than otherwise.

The BBC recently published the results of an online survey on loneliness. It found that many people who experience loneliness are not socially isolated. They have romantic partners, family, and friends, but being in close proximity, even sharing bonds of blood or marriage, doesn’t necessarily equate to intimacy. It turns out that loneliness is linked less with social isolation, and more with depression, paranoia, poor sleep, and having unrealistic, rigid expectations of others.
Every friendship starts with a gamble. Your welcoming smile might be met with a frosty frown. The confidence you share might be betrayed. You may be misunderstood and disliked. Worse still, you might be understood perfectly, and still disliked. Not everyone is going to be your friend, and, as we've agreed, making friends is difficult anyhow, but that's not an argument for taking a step back. Given that only a small proportion of the people you talk to will become friends, that's an argument for raising your game and talking to a whole lot more people. The proportions won’t improve, but the absolute numbers will.

Then there's always the upgrade option. Turn acquaintances into friends, and friends into best mates.

How to connect? Make eye contact. Really look at the other person. Relax your face. Say something. Anything. And be interested in the response. Make the other person the sole object of your attention, and maybe, just maybe, you will connect.

Some of those people who seem so banal and boring might be, but I have to say those people never consult me. The people I see who seem banal and boring act that way because they think so little of themselves, or so little of me, that they imagine I won't be that interested in them either.

Given enough benign attention, everyone becomes interesting. As the pioneering 18th Century novelist Maria Edgeworth wrote, "the human heart opens to the heart that opens in return".

What will you remember about this Christmas? Will it be the presents you receive, or the presence you give?

Energies of light and love and the will-to-good are always available to those who can contact them in meditation. But in all aspects of our planetary life there are cycles in the ebb and flow of spiritual energies with which groups, as well as individuals, can consciously cooperate.

One of the major energy cycles coincides with the phases of the moon, reaching its peak, its high tide, at the time of the full moon. This is a time, therefore, when the invocation and radiation of energy through group meditation can be uniquely effective.

The moon itself has no influence on the work; but the fully-lighted orb of the moon indicates a free and unimpeded alignment between our planet and the sun, the solar centre, the energy source for all life on Earth. At such times we can make a definite approach to God, the Creator, the centre of life and intelligence.

The Great Invocation
From the point of Light within the Mind of God
Let light stream forth into the minds of men.
Let Light descend on Earth.

From the point of Love within the Heart of God
Let love stream forth into the hearts of men.
May Christ return to Earth.

From the centre where the Will of God is known
Let purpose guide the little wills of men –
The purpose which the Masters know and serve.

From the centre which we call the race of men
Let the Plan of Love and Light work out
And may it seal the door where evil dwells.

Let Light and Love and Power restore the Plan on Earth.

The idea of harnessing the tidal power of the Menai Straits is not new - though more important now than ever before. Frank Harber, the Bangor Borough Electrical Engineer in the 1940s produced a fine plan which even reached the House of Commons - a copy of which may be found in Bangor University Library.

Energy conservation and investing in Alternative Renewable Energy is surely the way forward, and the proposed construction of a third Menai Bridge would be the perfect opportunity to design Tidal Turbines into the main Bridge Struts to harness the millions of tons of energy that goes back and forth along the Menai Straits twice a day, every day, all year round. A source of energy that doesn’t rely on the wind blowing, the rain falling or the sun shining. What a wonderful legacy to leave the next generation, to keep the lights and laptops on with electricity sourced in a process that is neither dirty nor dangerous, and is harnessing Nature’s energy in a harmless way.

The adjacent Pylon Power Grid is already in place to serve Anglesey and North Wales with the potential to transmit and sell off-peak supply to the rest of the UK. The hydrologists assure me the underwater infrastructure would be out of sight, minimal mechanical noise, and mesh grids across the in and outflow of the turbines to avoid harm to marine and avian life.

Of course, there would be maintenance costs to clear flotsam and jetsam and seabed debris but this would be nothing compared to the massive security costs and dangers of radioactive waste storage from Nuclear and the Earthquake vulnerability and water table pollution from Fracking.

The earthquakes caused by the Fracking in Lancashire made national news. Less reported have been the frequent quakes around Wylfa and Trawsfynydd in recent months.

It’s never too late to change energy policy, make your voice heard, campaign, be visionary and dream of the possibility of a bright clean safe secure future.
