Welcome to the January Network News. Fem’s cover celebrates the stars of 2019 - who will they be? We don’t mean “winners” - because that always implies “losers”; we just mean souls who are shining so brightly that those around are warmed and illuminated! At COP24 there was Greta Thunberg, who has transformed her Asperger’s syndrome diagnosis into a powerful tool to help release the inhabitants of this suffocating world from our addictions. “I see things in black and white”, she explained. As a result of her “way of seeing”, it felt as though Greta was simply telling the truth rather than preaching. That her family had travelled for 2 days to Poland in an electric car was not a lofty insult to flyers or SUV owners, just as her veganism was not an attack on meat-eaters. It was simply the necessary response to what she had learnt and observed. See p.4 Her approach was a lesson in nonviolence - which is so much more than avoiding physical aggression. It is also learning to avoid coercion of every kind. Exaggerating statistics, manipulating emotions and shaming others are all attempts to change people by force. It may be a quick fix, but it never works in the long term. Whatever enlightened ideas we now happen to hold probably did not arise in us because someone shouted slogans at us, or chained themselves to our front door, or taunted us on social media. They probably arose in us slowly and quietly, through a wise, caring friend, or from a book, or from witnessing suffering. As Martin Luther King put it: “Hate cannot drive out hate; only love can do that”. It is calm truthfulness, consistency, good humour and, above all, our mindful presence - even in the face of desperate circumstances - that will heal the difficult and destructive divisions between us. Blessings to all beings
AMY GOODMAN: Greta, how long have you studied the issue?

GRETA THUNBERG: I started reading about the climate crisis when I was maybe 9 years old. In school, my teachers, they told me about it. And I thought that it was very strange that humans, who are an animal species among others, could be capable of changing the Earth’s climate, because if that was the case and if it was really happening, we wouldn’t be talking about anything else, it would be our first priority. But no one ever even mentions it. So I started reading about it. And the more I read about it, the more I understood it. And once you fully understand what it means, you can never go back.

AMY: So, it’s interesting you are sitting in front of the Swedish parliament every day for three weeks, considering most people think of Sweden as one of the most progressive when it comes to climate change.

GRETA: Yeah. We have a reputation of being very, very green, but Sweden is one of the top 10 countries in the world with the highest ecological footprint per capita. And we have very high emissions per capita. And so, we are not a role model.

AMY: The emissions have actually gone up in the last year?

GRETA: Yeah. We have just moved them overseas. Our emissions in the country may have reduced, but we have moved our emissions overseas. We let other countries produce the stuff we consume.

AMY: Svante, how has your daughter changed you?

SVANTE THUNBERG: Oh, in every possible way, I’d say. It started maybe four years ago. She was very sort of—she got herself in a position where she was learning a lot about the climate change. And she was finding out that everyone was saying one thing and doing the exact other thing. And that, she could not cope with. So, she fell into a depression. She stopped eating, stopped talking. And she fell out of school and stayed at home for almost a year. And my wife and I sort of—we stayed at home with her, of course, and we did everything—I stopped working completely, and we spent, you know, all our time with her.

AMY: So, Greta, can you talk about that time—it sounds extremely painful—a few years ago when you stopped talking and stopped eating?

GRETA: Yes. I became very depressed. I didn’t see any point of living, because everything was just so wrong. And I kind of saw - because I have Asperger’s syndrome, so I work a bit different. I see things black and white. And so, I guess I saw the world from a different perspective. So I saw what was wrong with the world. And I—

AMY: What does it mean to have Asperger’s syndrome?

GRETA: That my brain works a bit different. And I usually don’t enjoy participating in the social game that the rest of you seem so fond of. And I don’t like lying. And I see things black or white.

AMY: Svante, what did this mean for you?

SVANTE: She made us realise that we were these parents standing up for human rights and refugees and right and wrong and all these things. And we were really fighting for that. And then she said, you know, “Whose human rights are you standing up for?” My wife, for instance, went to Japan to perform but when she got home Greta worked out how many tons of carbon dioxide she had spent on that, and how many people’s carbon budget - living in West Africa, for instance. So, she basically confronted us with that. You know, “Whose human rights are you standing up for, when you are draining the world’s resources, the functioning atmosphere, for instance?” And so we realised, in the end, after a couple of years of her going on about it, that we had to change. You know, we had to stop doing these things. And that had an enormous effect. It made Greta much more happy.

AMY: So, what made you decide to start eating again and start talking, Greta?
GRETA: I guess I thought that I could do so much with my life. What is the point of feeling like this when I could actually do something good?

AMY: And how has it changed the way you parent, Svante?
SVANTE: My wife gave up her international opera career. She’s working out of Sweden now instead. And that was a big change for us. And obviously it’s changed a great many other sort of things. I had to go vegan. First vegetarian, then I had to go vegan. And I do miss the cheese, I must confess.

AMY: So what did it mean to you to give up meat? And then—
SVANTE: Nothing.

AMY: And then cheese and dairy?
SVANTE: Nothing. It meant nothing. I mean, in the end, you know, we’re facing a dire catastrophe. But I just didn’t realise.

AMY: What did it mean to you that your parents became vegan? Is your mother also a vegan, Greta?
GRETA: Yeah, she tries!

AMY: So what did that mean to you, how you changed your parents?
GRETA: It meant that they were actually listening to what I was saying. And that was good to feel that someone is listening.

AMY: I’d like to ask you that question, this whole issue of climate equity.
GRETA: Since we have higher emissions per capita, we must reduce emissions more. And since we already have all of the infrastructure and everything that we need, we need to reduce our emissions much more, so that the developing countries can have a chance to build some of that infrastructure and so that the people there can have a chance to heighten their standard of living.

AMY: You are both the descendants of Svante Arrhenius, the Nobel Prize-winning scientist, who first calculated the greenhouse effect caused by carbon dioxide emissions in 1896, known to some as the “father of climate change science.” Svante, you were named after him?
SVANTE: Yes, I was. My family named me after him because they thought that was very important. But the fact is, they didn’t have a clue why he got the Nobel Prize! You know, he was just a Nobel Prize winner.

GRETA: They just thought it was nice!

AMY: Greta, you are protesting every Friday outside the Swedish parliament now, from every weekday to just Fridays. Why Fridays?
GRETA: Why not? Fridays are good days. Friday is a good day to strike.

@GretaThunberg
When he was recently arrested on the first Extinction Rebellion event in Parliament Square, Donnachadh McCarthy ended up giving an impromptu seminar on eco-building to his two arresting officers. For they were both, it so happened, interested in sustainable architecture and Donnachadh runs an eco-audit business and lives in a ‘carbon negative retro eco-house’. Before leaving he gave them his card, winked and said: ‘I won’t charge you if you don’t charge me!’

For ten years Donnachadh was in the thick of politics as vice-chair of the Lib Dems. He was so horrified to discover how politicians right across the board are so often under the sway of those who have money that he wrote a book about it, The Prostitute State. www.theprostitutestate.co.uk

In the book he reveals the corrupted political system, prostituted media, hijacked academia and criminal tax-haven system that he has seen first hand. It’s highly recommended.

Donnachadh, an ex-ballet dancer and dedicated environmental activist, came to Cae Mabon a couple of times this year. Each time he helped on the work at Dinas Emrys and each time we did a simple ceremony there, tapping into the wave of rising dragon energy. First we sent out prayers to more than thirty named owners of the global mass media, that they awaken to the seriousness of climate change. Second we prayed that the coming launch of Extinction Rebellion (XR) would be successful and that people would be unharmed.

Donnachadh invited Angharad and I to come to London the night before the XR launch event to meditate on those same things at the foot of Gandhi’s statue in Parliament Square. He wanted us to bring some mythic power from the mountains and the old gods and goddesses. So we went, and on the Friday night joined a group of thirty people meeting on that hallowed spot both in pregnant silence and passionate speech. It seemed we were helping to provide a spiritual underpinning to what would be a significant non-violent direct action on climate change the following day.

About six thousand people turned out and blocked the five main bridges in central London – from Southwark to Lambeth – for several hours. It was the largest such action for many decades. We started off on Westminster Bridge. It seemed a good time to bring out my ‘Climate Rap’ song, written in 2007 but not performed for many years. So for the previous 24 hours I’d kept running through the lyrics in my head to make sure I didn’t forget them. I got a turn up there with the microphone, not long after ‘Seize the Day’ had done a song. A big film camera was whirring away nearby.

Angharad was by now on Southwark Bridge. We decided to meet on Blackfriars. So after my spot under Big Ben I scooted off down river, cutting across Waterloo Bridge en route. There I ran into two good friends, Justin and Eva. When I told them I’d just done Climate Rap and Justin said, ‘that’s what we need here’. In a few minutes I was up on the soapbox speaking into a megaphone. The second ‘Climate Rap’ of the Day. Then I was off to Blackfriars Bridge. George Monbiot was speaking as I arrived. Angharad and I met up then I joined the rather long queue of people waiting to speak or perform. After all, the best things do happen in threes! This time Angharad was on hand with her camera to record doing my thing for… Facebook! (Now on YouTube: “IMG 0182”)

There’s much more that could be said on Extinction Rebellion and Climate Change, but that will have to wait for another day.

Rewilding Britain’s first project in mid-Wales aims to show there can be a different future for the land and sea, that works for both people and nature.

Summit to Sea ~ O’r Mynydd i’r Môr is an initiative to restore flourishing ecosystems and a resilient local economy, on a scale never before seen in Britain.

The project will bring together one continuous, nature-rich area, stretching from the Pumlumon massif - the highest area in mid-Wales – down through wooded valleys to the Dyfi estuary and out into Cardigan Bay. Within five years it will comprise at least 10,000 hectares of land and 28,400 hectares of sea.

Summit to Sea will involve:

- restoring natural processes that provide the ecological functions on which we all depend
- bringing communities together to create a shared vision for the future
- supporting the local economy to diversify and establish new nature-based enterprises.

This will result in more opportunities for communities and visitors to mid-Wales to reconnect with the rich natural and cultural heritage of the area.

From shaping the founding principles of the NHS to inventing technologies that have spread across the world, Wales has a long history of leading the way with new ideas.

In the sixteenth century, mathematician Robert Recorde published a book featuring the first use of the equals (=) sign. It’s now the universal symbol of balance.

Summit to Sea is an opportunity for the communities of mid-Wales to find a new sense of balance, between human enterprise and the rest of nature. A successful bid to the Endangered Landscapes Programme means that £3.4 million of funding is secured for Summit to Sea over five years. This is new money, from outside Wales. It will support a significant, sustained effort to create new opportunities in the project area, and infrastructure to deliver change into the future.

A vision of this scale requires a coordinated effort between landowners, communities, farmers, fishers, foresters, public bodies, NGOs, businesses and relevant experts.

A locally-led Summit to Sea partnership is being established to co-manage the project with a legal entity that allows for revenue and other benefits to be shared.

Local people - stewards of the land and sea, and the wider community - will play an integral part in shaping and co-designing the project. With funding secured, we are now hiring a project director and planning a series of studies and engagement activities across the project area.

Rebecca Wrigley is the Chief Executive of Rewilding Britain

After all of the ups and downs, and the crazy energy of 2018, for 2019, we need to try to create our own stability from within. With this in mind, Selenite may not be the obvious choice, however, allow me to explain…

2019 is a number 3 year – 2+0+1+9 = 12 = 3. This is a number of CREATION, the Holy Trinity, and also the number I associate with the Ascended Masters. We are being supported and held by our Divine Guides in 2019, as we begin to create our new reality from within. Gone are the times where we must simply “get what we are given”. The 3D paradigm is giving way for the 5D consciousness, where we gain more and more freedom to create from our soul. And as we create from our soul, we are literally changing our physical reality.

This is no mean feat, and we can use all the help we can get! We are balancing mind, body, emotions and soul in a new dimensional reality - something which has never been done on this planet before. And we are creating it from the inside out. We are putting everything we have learned in 2018 into practice for 2019.

For all of this, Selenite is the perfect choice. Selenite connects us with those new, higher vibrations, and keeps us connected, as we travel into 2019. Selenite helps us to keep our eye on the prize, and not get distracted by any 3D stuff which inevitably will come up from time to time. Selenite has such a pure and steady vibration, which will help us get really clear on what we need and want to manifest.

Selenite also helps us communicate with our Guides and Ascended Masters in these times of great change. These amazing beings are here to help us through these wondrous times of unprecedented change. They will be of great support as we journey through 2019.

The denseness of our physical world can be stubborn to change, but change it must in 2019, as our physical reality shifts to match the new 5D vibration with which we are aligning. In my crystal healing work, I work with Selenite a lot to help rebuild and re-align the physical body, and to ease physical pain. Working with Selenite over the coming year can help facilitate these physical changes to our reality, and ease any “growing pains” we may experience.

In summary, we are creating something magnificent, and Selenite is a fabulous all-rounder that can help us in this plan. Have you got your Selenite ready?

Does this article resonate with you? If so, you may like to check out my website and Facebook pages. I also run accredited courses in Crystal Healing. The next one starts in February, and is taking place in Wrexham.

The birth of agriculture...

Echo-nomics was a lovely idea of 30 years ago. The belief that what you put out is what you get back. When we commit we reap rewards. The tomato plant you tend brings you tomatoes. A friend grows potatoes. You swap. Trade has begun. You trade in pounds, you know the lb kind, you trade in weight. Now the woman who grows courgettes in the next village can trade because you have a constant. You all have more than you need of what you are good at, and your rate of exchange is a given. So began the history of the world. 12,000 years ago someone started herding goats and sowing grain. This freed others to do other things; and hence to trade.

In the beginning was surplus - and the surplus was agriculture.

and the end of economics...

But the financial world has lost sight of the most fundamental truth: that all comes from mother earth. The concept is finite. Banking has gone infinite. Money is the only thing mankind has ever invented that is infinite. It is completely out of sync with the world we live in. This disparity between finite and infinite, between the real world and banking, is the cause of the ever more frequent - and totally unnecessary - economic failures. The planet has no more hidden corners to which this tendency can run. It can only crash back upon itself - that means you and me. What was wrong with lbs, pints and inches? Why is our single greatest value system totally devoid of value, endlessly expanding towards its own demise?

Money is a bubble. 97% of it is debt!

through continuous collapse... until the Worgl.

The great crash before the 2007/8 was the 1929 stock market collapse that caused the Great Depression. The silver lining of that moment was a solution that was tried, succeeded and remains a beautiful example of where we now need to head. It would end these ridiculous cycles forever. The solution came about in a hundred different places, but Worgl, a small town in Austria, is the best recorded.

Silvio Gesell had written a book in 1904 called The Natural Economic Order advising on monetary, land and tax reform. Hundreds of towns and communities across Europe and the States jumped to it. Austria, France, Spain, Switzerland and German all joined in the ‘free economy’ movement and across the Atlantic the same, though more likely influenced by Henry George who had written similarly decades before.

A World Class Experiment

By 1932 the Mayor of Worgl had convinced his council to print their own notes. They issued 5000 Free Schillings (backed in the bank by 5000 Austrian Schillings). These were used to pay both wages and materials on council projects. The money passed on to butcher and baker throughout the town. Each month the person holding the note had to buy a 1% stamp, also local issue, to glue to the back. Each year the note would be repealed having raised 12% in “use-fee”. They built a new bridge and repaired roads and in doing so brought down unemployment by 25% in 1 year! Because of the use-fee people were encouraged to spend, even paying their taxes early!
The currency therefore circulated twice as fast: 463 times while ordinary schillings circulated 213 times. 463 x 5000 = 2.3 million completely new schillings created within the town. The council generated 12% on their 5000, or 600 schillings. Phenomenal prosperity in the midst of recession.

Monetary Reform

No interest was charged, only the fee. This went back into the community not to the bank or the rich.

This in essence is monetary reform. To dispense with interest for ever. Even economists refer to interest as ‘the wrecking machine of the economy.’ It is the source of the unnatural ‘growth’ in money. Nor does economics seem to understand that growth comes in three varieties; natural, arithmetic and exponential. Natural, grows to a predetermined limit - as does a tree - then stops. Arithmetic is a constant ratio, more input more output. But exponential growth doesn’t know when to stop. This is the path of compound interest and we have to tell the system when to ease up - and we don’t. But we could dispense with it altogether, just by replacing interest on borrowing with a use-fee.

Banks Are Unique... Why?

It is not the only anomaly in banking:

1. They make money out of fresh air. This is what central banks do. They don’t have gold reserves any more. They don’t use fiduciary balance. They just print more, recently in vast amounts, calling it ‘quantitive easing’.
2. It is illegal if you do it. They do and they own it. And now they are going to charge you for this invention that cost nobody anything. Every religion calls this usury, but in 1833 a law was passed “scrapping usury”!
3. On the strength of the loan to you - money now has ‘value’ which they can now lend ‘against’. When they have run out of things to lend against, they will bet on the outcomes of those loans ... then bet on the outcome of those bets, and on.

They have created a virtual surplus - and treat it as if it were real!

2007/8

And that is what happened in the last great crash. The mortgage you bought, was bet on at 20 times its value, so that bankers could make 5% on every round. Once they realised that it was all going to crash they sold every layer they could, including your mortgage, to other banks around the world. Then they bet against all those bets which they already knew would fail, and that is known as the Big Short. Goldman Sachs not only bet against their own previous products, making $4 billion in one go, but they also reregistered themselves as an investment bank to get inside the law for government bailout! Fraudulent in the extreme - except that it is all legal. It did not matter who owned which bet, the American banks alone claimed a $700,000,000,000 bailout and got it. Then they payed themselves bonuses .... then they started doing it again, as they are right now.

What Now?

So. We have reached a position where fraud is not only legal, it is supported by government. Those who should have gone to prison received enormous payouts. Yet we all subscribe to this system with flaws. The banking process charges interest which is the same as inflation, which devalues your money. You own less value today than yesterday because currency has increased.

And the good news... ?

So what ever happened to the Free Schilling in Worgl? It solved all these problems and it created prosperity, equality and stability through a ‘natural growth’ economic mechanism. 300 other communities in Austria alone were geared up to start in 1933. The Austrian central bank saw its monopoly of printing money (and wealth) threatened and tried to shut it down, which it finally succeeded through the high court. In America the same. No one anywhere to date has achieved a use-fee currency, because this was an attempt to reform national currency. In that sense top-down. What about starting from the bottom up?

Local Exchange Trading System (LETS)

This is precisely what happened in Vancouver in 1983. Residents on the outskirts were told that the school bus would cease running and parents would have to drive their children to school. A group was formed which took over the bus. Some agreed to drive, some to repair, some to paint, and so on. All contributions were recorded by time or dollar value. What you gained in service on the bus could be ‘spent’ in the community, and recorded. Everyone had a debit and credit column and anyone could join.

‘Tabulated Barter’ attracts no costs, no interest and allows anyone to enter the marketplace by simply opening an account. Soon it spread to industry and the local authority. A trainee dentist got his surgery build in its entirety against future dental treatment. There are no limits to such a free currency because in effect it does not exist, it’s more like a diary. Thousands of LETS schemes now operate around the world but many have come up against governments requiring tax against ‘income’. The first notable exception was in Blue Mountain Australia where the government recognised the enormous value of LETS to generate employment, wealth and self-belief across the community, and gave it tax free status.

The Euro

At the other end of the spectrum the Euro was actually brought about by government. Bernard Lieter from the Bank of Belgium, was commissioned with the structuring of the Euro to ease cross European trade. What he proposed was a floating layer that the corporations could use, with national currencies below and perhaps regional currency below that. The Commission and others took one look, said ‘too complicated’ and took it as a one size fits all. That’s what they got.

Leiter resigned and now lectures around the world on setting up systems more like Worgl and LETS. If the Euro collapses it will be because the bureaucrats did not recognise countries’ particular monetary needs. Greece’s problems were caused by the loss of their own central bank. Italy’s current position is the same: wanting to borrow beyond European guidelines. They have been told they can’t and Italy have replied by saying that they will form their own currency... watch this space.

New Layers of Currency

If we take Bernard Lieter’s point that layers serve different things for different people then let us leave the Euro as a top layer. Then Gesell’s idea that whatever currency we use for every day purposes must not be beholden to bankers, to interest, to inflation and especially to the endless growth and devaluation that is caused by these other aspects. A use-fee cures all that.

Local exchange mechanisms bring people into the economy rather than keep them out. LETS allows every unemployed person the means to do what they have dreamed of doing but for which there was no ‘bank loan’. In LETS you sign off your own loan. Beyond this - and beyond Lieter - is the pure “gift economy”.
Rings of Value

Now I want you to lay this out across the landscape. Start with yourself at home with all your ideas, needs and dreams. ‘Shall I have coffee or go for a walk?’ Most of what we do every day is self determined and free. The Inca people had no money at all, they had no conception of why the Spanish wanted silver. Ancient peoples had none and the extended Italian family still uses none: that’s gift economy.

So how far can you imagine your world of family and friends, extending in a ring around you - without money. I would suggest that it is a good 40% of all your imaginable needs. If you grow your own, cook your own, make your own, it just gets bigger and bigger. The next ring is further out from you (perhaps 30% of all your ‘trade’ activity). This includes that lady in the next village with an abundance of courgettes. In today’s/tomorrow’s economy you place your trade with her in the LETS computer file. All local transactions - from water rates to house building - can be tabulated with no loans and no fees.

The third ring covers things not made in the region that need a national/regional currency of the ‘Free schilling’ kind, with a use-fee (maybe 20% of your expenditure). White goods and computers may be in this category to begin with but such a localised and localising process could change that. Way beyond all of this, the fourth ring: a holiday, luxuries, one-offs. These come at whatever price they happen to be, but this last 10% is now your only dealing in Pounds and Euros!

From the parasitic global economy you are now completely free.

A World That Works

We have turned the whole process of globalisation on its head. Our awareness of the world is greater because we have more time and more communication. We are more able to respond to world problems. But our involvement in creating those problems has fallen to zero. Recognising that most of our transactions are local and dealing with them as such, disengages us from the world in which we have no choice, no control, no say. At the same time, it reestablishes those qualities and options in our own world, as it does for every other citizen on the planet. There is nothing complicated about seeing the world as four diminishing rings leading out from yourself. Nor is it difficult to imagine not engaging in the finance of world affairs. Currently you have no choice.

Wall Street is a casino.
But they gamble with your money.
The next collapse is anticipated for 2020.
Now you’ll know what to do: get together with your friends and start a LETS scheme.

The Great Invocation

From the point of Light within the Mind of God
Let light stream forth into the minds of men.
Let Light descend on Earth.

From the point of Love within the Heart of God
Let love stream forth into the hearts of men.
May Christ return to Earth.

From the centre where the Will of God is known
Let purpose guide the little wills of men –
The purpose which the Masters know and serve.

From the centre which we call the race of men
Let the Plan of Love and Light work out
And may it seal the door where evil dwells.

Let Light and Love and Power restore the Plan on Earth.

A Network of Goodwill

In every neighbourhood we can find kindred spirits who share a vision of a beautiful and humane world, and who share a commitment to making it a reality.

They might be found planting organically - food, herbs, flowers, forests; or simplifying their lives, using less fossil fuels, recycling and repairing, going by bus and by bicycle, pouring less poison down the sink and less waste into the landfill. They might be working to restore the soul in science; or creating artefacts that are sustainable and beautiful; or sharing their craft in sound, colour or form.

Others are reaching out to those that society has abandoned; or reminding big organisations to respect life at human scale; or challenging “expert” opinions. They may be choosing a more compassionate diet, moving their money to a more ethical bank or credit union, raising their children without force or fear. They may be pioneering new ways to exchange ideas, skills and resources; experimenting with different kinds of household or community; or simply remembering how to play, sing and dance together without dependence on drugs or alcohol.

Some are learning to heal - bringing together wisdom and skills from different ages, cultures and dimensions. Then there are those who are advocates for the voiceless kingdoms - animal, vegetable and mineral - that depend on human beings for their welfare and survival.

Others are struggling to uproot violence - in the nation, the community, the home and the heart - learning to think, to speak and to act without cruelty.

Most are politically engaged, but each with their own unique mix of causes and ideals. Many prefer to "follow the money" rather than a party line - aware that every donation and purchase they make every day is a powerful vote for good or ill.

Most are spiritually active, but without a conventional creed. They may practice meditation or mindfulness, and use the insights and strength from their inner work to inform their service in the world.

Some are reclaiming the great seasonal rituals, aligning themselves with the cycles of Earth, Sun, Moon and Stars; or reinventing those essential rites of passage: the initiations of birth, coming of age, marriage, death and spiritual unfoldment.

Many sense that the world will need a vast outpouring of goodwill if it is to make it through the next few decades intact. Some found their deeper purpose through personal crisis - perhaps global crisis is humanity's great opportunity?
