Welcome to the April Network News. And what a month! Fem’s cover shows our wounded planet letting out a great Cry for new management. It has usually been left to the surviving indigenous peoples to give voice to The Cry, because some have maintained their direct connection with the Earth through sacred practice. They know that ALL beings are essential to the whole.

Somehow, modern humans came to believe that their own needs were paramount, and all other beings and elements were there for their comfort and exploitation. This delusion has now climaxed. No humane being can look upon the cold, hard, daily reality of industrial logging, mining, drilling, commercial fishing or factory farming without knowing that the game is up. But what can we do? We’re all caught in an addictive spiral. We try desperately to ignore the fact that almost every shelf in every supermarket is still filled with the produce of a relentless, cruel and mindless exploitation.

50 years ago, a few pioneering souls gave voice to The Cry - and it is because of their work that words like “ecology”, “sustainability”, and “holistic” entered the mainstream. But the words did not penetrate our collective consciousness deeply enough to make the needed changes. Quite simply, almost everyone in the “developed world” is still living on materials stolen from the future.

Suddenly, a new generation is on the street, adding even bolder words to our vocabulary: “Sacred Activism”. “Citizens’ Assembly”. “Extinction”. “Rebellion”. Clearly, they have also heard The Cry. This month, this new wave of trainee planetary stewards will begin to outline how we can and must kick our addiction, and how we can begin to restore the Earth to health and balance.

Blessings to all beings
Two Welsh miracles in one March week!

First, from the Institute of Welsh Affairs (IWA) comes a plan for Wales to meet 100% of its energy needs from renewables by 2035.

Second, the Welsh Government releases a major policy-planning document for a Low-Carbon Wales.

While Westminster wrestles with its backward looking ‘brexit’, Wales is getting to grips with a 21st century future based on ecologically sustainable development.

Years of methodical study by the IWA culminated in their launch of A Plan for Wales’ Renewable Energy Future: Essential Actions to Re-energise Wales by 2035. The report distils three years work into a a ten-point plan for ‘renewable Wales’.

An earlier IWA report in 2015 asked: Are the Welsh prepared to do something bolder than merely a gradualist approach of improving the efficiency of the economy in Wales? The answer now seems to be a resounding: ‘Yes’.

Set up in April 2016, the IWA’s project Re-energising Wales consisted of six work packages, which eventually led to their final report. The project was able to draw from a wide range of expertise, including energy and socio-economic fields. Its aim was to look at how Wales could meet its energy demands sustainably by 2035, coming from a sense that Wales inherently has a lot of natural resources with significant renewable energy potential.

In September 2017, the project received a helpful strategic steer from the Welsh Cabinet Secretary for Environment, Lesley Griffiths, who announced the following ambitious targets for energy generation in Wales:

- By 2030 - renewable energy to generate 70 per cent of its electricity consumption.
- By 2030, - one Gigawatt of renewable electricity capacity in Wales to be locally owned.
- By 2020 - new renewable energy projects to have at least an element of local ownership.

The first work package gave the most detailed understanding ever about how the Welsh energy supply system should evolve to meet its projected energy demands through renewables and maximising energy efficiency.

The second work package looked at funding prospects including the potential role of pension funds in Wales and the use of innovative finance, such as through national and local ‘renewables-related’ ISAs.

A further study looked in detail at the Swansea Bay City Region as a case study exemplar of maximising renewables to meet the energy demands of 2035 (NB: the Swansea Tidal Lagoon is far from dead in the water!).

This was followed by a study on decarbonising transport and then, in November 2018, an encompassing framework for action was completed. This also outlined key regulatory and policy powers needed to realise the potential of renewables in Wales.

The penultimate study focused on achieving transition at scale within communities and the need for local ownership. It also sought to identify the socio-economic benefits and how to maximise those locally amongst the communities of Wales.

The final report is indeed timely. These outputs alone provide a compelling, informed vision for where Wales should be headed. (Free download from iwa.wales)
Then on 21st March, 2019, the Welsh Government published its 200 page document, Prosperity for All: A Low Carbon Wales, which not just confirmed Wales’ first carbon budget (2016-2020) but gave a detailed policy plan across all sectors.

This consolidates and expands upon existing work and lays out 100 policies and proposals, broken down by all portfolios, to accelerate the transition to a low carbon economy in a way that maximises wider benefits for Wales, ensuring a fairer, healthier and more equal society. The plan establishes future actions that help with a low-carbon transition, including 24 proposals to explore and develop future policy actions.

The vision for a low-carbon Wales means moving from a centralised system to one more decentralised without delay, with an approach that facilitates and incentivises localised ownership. Learning from good examples already, there still remains the issue of how to scale up from a relatively low level towards major investment to achieve the transition in infrastructure. The re-directing of pension fund investment portfolios is identified as having great potential.

Both the major study from IWA and the Welsh Government’s Vision resonate strongly with the recent urgent imperative already given by the IPCC 1.5°C Special Report, issued last October. That report too implies radical societal transition towards a low-carbon economy which needs to happen within the next 10 years.

These outputs also come as the Committee on Climate Change (CCC) is in the process of reviewing the national carbon target under the 2008 Climate Change Act, which was originally set to achieve an 80% reduction for the UK, from 1990 levels, by 2050. However, the science has moved on and, with the Paris Agreement aspiration to keep to within 1.5C, the ambition has also been ramped up. The CCC is likely to report back to Government in around May of this year.

The idea of a Zero Carbon target, for 2050, has been aired already in Government circles. But that target will simply not be good enough, as was recognised by the IWA’s report. A far more stringent target is needed to accelerate the transition and focus minds in National government, local authorities and businesses about the investment and delivery that is needed. The Greater Manchester region has already grasped this too with the adoption of a Zero Carbon target for 2038.

This is why the work and ambition coming from this latest IWA report was so much welcomed by the Welsh First Minister, Mark Drakeford AM, at the launch event, which comprised a number of speaker forums and a short workshop session.

One thing that was notable was the caliber, seniority and commitment of the people involved and present on the day. These releases should give further confidence there is a feasible low-carbon future for Wales.

But conversations at the local level need to begin in earnest now if our younger generations are not to be cheated further out of the sustainable future they deserve.

Put “compare and despair” into any search engine and you will find a multitude of articles arguing against comparing yourself with others. From the philosophers of ancient times to present day pundits, pretty much everyone agrees that making comparisons like this won’t make you happy. If the comparison is to your disadvantage (“X has a nicer car than me”), you will feel dissatisfied. If it is to your advantage (“I’m the cleverest person in the room”), the thought hardly reflects well upon you and is likely to feed arrogance. Comparing encourages us to imagine we could be in someone else’s life, when that life is already taken. Better to make the best of the life we find ourselves in than generate feelings of superiority or envy by imagining ourselves in another’s.

Assessing yourself relative to a statistic is another form of comparison, and perhaps rather an insidious one because they don’t seem like comparisons, although they are, and because statistics seem scientific and therefore true. Statistics are only true in the sense that they say something about a whole group of people who were studied at some point in the past, something which might, but only might, apply to a similar large group now, but they don’t say anything about us as individuals. Nobody is a statistic. What we can infer from statistics is pretty limited. That’s good news so far as I am concerned. Just because there was a 70% five year mortality rate in the sample group diagnosed with the type of cancer I had doesn’t say anything very definite about my personal survival chances. If you cannot generalise from individual cases to whole populations, then neither can you make specific predictions for individuals based on large group statistics. Along with Patrick McGoohan, in The Prisoner, the sixties TV series filmed at Portmeirion, I say, “I am not a number. I am a free man!” Unfortunately, like so much good psychological advice, “Don’t compare” is easy to understand, but difficult to do.

Whilst it’s true that social media encourages comparing by enlarging our window on the world, before social media people were looking out of their real windows and comparing. If we are not comparing ourselves with others, we’re comparing our lives now with our lives in the past, or in the imagined future. These comparisons disengage us from our lived experience here and now. It’s difficult to stay in the here and now when so many of our habitual thinking strategies involve making comparisons. I’ve been trying to live without comparing over the past few weeks and I’ve realised that this comparing malarkey is complicated, and some comparisons are helpful. We need to compare in order to plan because planning involves comparing our desired outcome with our present situation.

We also need to compare in order to benchmark ourselves relative to others.
It does help to know how we compare to our peers, whether we end up striving to be normal or decide to set our faces against convention. It helps because we can only have a sense of where we stand by knowing where we stand in relation to others.

So, making comparisons: good or bad? Hmmm. It depends. Just as being phobic is healthy, fearful avoidance of dangerous things gone overboard, and OCD is sensible checking gone over the top, so comparing and despairing is healthy comparing gone over the top. Maybe the safest thing when making comparisons is that you make a little comparing go a long way.

“Jump from the well trodden path and find a new way. Push through the thorns and let the rocks bite at your feet, but may you stride on, knowing that every step is a learning that takes you closer to freedom…” Nomad

Imagine yourself stood barefoot on a mountainside, feel the cool earth beneath you, feel the curls of moss between your toes - all you can see are hills and forests and the glow of the sea in the distance. You feel the breeze on your face, you hear the birds and the insects at their work. In the sky you can see the eagles and the clouds and know that the stars will fill the dark sky at night. You are connected, you feel part of nature once more.

This is part of the Nomad experience. This is one tiny glimpse of what we attempt.

Nomad was born out of a desire to do something different with outdoor education. We have developed a unique style which works on re-establishing a connection with nature, with ourselves and with others. We visit ancient ways and story, journey in a humble and beautiful way, and dive deep within ourselves to unlock something special.

There is so much beeping and buzzing in our life these days. We are apparently more connected with the rest of the world now, as we have ever been, through the internet and numerous social media platforms – though it feels like there is mass disconnection as a result of these very same technologies. With the reported increases in anxiety, low self esteem, stress and poor sleep due to todays tech, it is time to return to nature to reconnect for real. With mud, and grass, and smoke, and streams. With birdsong, ancient story, hearty grub, old ways and new ways. With challenges, with the deep dive, with moments of contemplation, with companionship.

The amazing Nomad crew create a safe and nourishing environment for internal reflection through a series of fun and challenging processes, testing out ideas and theories and having a wonderful journeying time! On foot we pass through the beautiful wild fringes of Snowdonia, held between the mighty ocean and the majestic mountains. Together our Nomads rediscover the undeniable joy of adventuring simply and in good company.

In October 2018 we ran a pilot of the Nomad 3 journey program. Participants from all over the UK bravely turned up, not fully knowing what they had signed up for, and not fully understanding why they had come. They just knew that from the brief description they had read, that a mysterious, wild and powerful journey was just what they needed – and they were right! Some left us having experienced the most profound few days of their life, some walked away with new ideas and dreams, some left us simply relaxed.

Between May and October a Nomad journey will be taking place each month. Visit our website if you are ready to take the next step on your journey.

Sui Generis: The Possibilities of a House A project of Julie Upmeyer, an artist and initiator. 66 projects from 62 creatives fill the entirety of Plas Bodfa, a currently empty manor house on the Isle of Anglesey in Wales. This remarkably multi-disciplinary group art exhibition explores the idea of ‘sui generis’, a Latin phrase meaning "of its (his, her, their) own kind; in a class by itself; unique". With performance and painting, collage and ceramics, skateboarding and singing, poetry and polyrhythmic drumming, fairytales and photography, games and gramophones, sculpture and storytelling, re-enactments and a retrospective, this exhibition is a one-time opportunity to fill the currently vacant 36 room / 1,000 sqm space with creative acts, before complete renovation begins. 11am - 5pm daily, Plas Bodfa, Llanegod, Beaumaris LL58 8ND. Contact Julie 07480 811535, julie@plasbodfa.com, plasbodfa.com/suigeneris or Facebook: of event name See page 33.

Exhibitions

Under Your Feet ~ The Contemporary Rug
6th April - 14th July. A celebration of rugs designed in the British Isles. 19 of the best rug makers today are represented in this exhibition. Their rugs will be spread out in a colourful, textured and timely reminder that underfoot, or on a wall, rugs remain as vibrant and relevant as any other craft medium. Ruthin Craft Centre 01824 704774, ruthincraftcentre.org.uk

Grayson Perry ~ Julie Cope’s Grand Tour: The Story of a Life
Until 15th April. Julie Cope is a fictional character created by Grayson Perry - an Essex everywoman whose story he has told through two large scale tapestries and an extended ballad presented in the exhibition. The tapestries are shown alongside a graphic installation, and specially commissioned audio recording of The Ballad of Julie Cope, a 3000 word narrative written and read by Perry himself that illuminates Julie’s hopes and fears. Opens 10am. Ty Pawb, Market St., Wrexham LL13 8BB. Facebook: of event name

Helfa Gelf Artists
Until 20th April. Helfa Gelf, the open studios network, is now in its 14th year and has over 200 members spread across North Wales. This curated exhibition includes painting, sculpture, printmaking, photography, jewellery, ceramics and textiles by selected members and provides a great opportunity to appreciate their artistic talent in a gallery setting. Oriel Gallery, Theatr Clwyd, Mold 01352 701521, theatrclywd.com

Drawn From The Collection / O’r Casgliad
Until 7th July. Previously unexhibited broad range of works on paper. Includes work by Williams, Tunnicliffe, Leslie Jones, TG Walker, Keith Andrew, Iola Spafford and others. Oriel Ynys Mon, Llangefni, Anglesey LL77 7TQ, 01248 724444, kyffinwilliams.info

NW Potters ~ April Maker of the Month is Nichola Naylon.
Throughout April. NWP Gallery Shop, 1 High St., Conwy. Visit: northwalespotters.org

Balaclafa CARN
Until 6th April. Exhibition opens; the work relates to Bangor and District Women’s Aid; and all proceeds will go to the Centre. Opens 7pm. Balaclafa CARN, Ffordd Balaclafa, Caernarfon LL55 1TG. 07472 531813.

Agoriad Arddangosfa Gan / Opening Exhibition by Swci Delic
Until 12th April. The number 7 is a holy number in many beliefs and religions - a symbol of good luck. Certainly the number is lucky to the artist Swci Delic. When she was struck by brain cancer in 2010 the prognosis was she’d live for another two years. Opening night is 1st at 6.30pm; discussion on 2nd at 12pm, £5. Galeri, Caernarfon 01286 685222, galericaernarfon.com

Cywrain: Tide
Until 30th April. ‘Cywrain’ is a project for applied arts and contemporary craft and design, celebrating makers and artists from the Celtic regions at Galeri since 2013. The theme for this opening season is Llanw (Tide) – with 10 makers presenting work influenced by this special theme – the light, colour, energy of the waves, seascapes and the life of the shoreline. Includes Katy Mai Ceramics, Callie Jones Illustrations, Karen Williams, Irene + Edith, Rachel Stowe and others. Galeri, Caernarfon 01286 685222, galericaernarfon.com

Primmy Chorley
6th April - 14th July. This is the lived everyday, depicted with a purity of intent that borders on innocence. It is the wonder of the commonplace made manifest in simple forms and humble materials. Home, family, the surrounding land and beloved dogs. Ruthin Craft Centre 01824 704774, ruthincraftcentre.org.uk Workshops: 11th & 12th May.

Ros Hornbuckle ~ Weaving the Coast / Gwehyddu'r Arfordir
Until 9th June. “These tapestries celebrate the beauty of the coast of Wales. Mountains, sea, beach, rocks, birds and sky, and the ever changing effect of weather and light, are all my inspiration. The many hours spent weaving the coast enhances my affection for and relationship with this country”. Long Gallery, Oriel Ynys Mon, Llangefni, Anglesey LL77 7TQ, 01248 724444, kyffinwilliams.info

Spring Show
Until 20th April. Artists include: Anglesey Sea and Landscapes by Nathan Jones; Welsh Landscapes by Shirley Sykes and Capricious Art by Sam Ridyard. Open 12 - 4pm, Tues - Sat. Bangor Arts Initiative Gallery, Deiniol Shopping Centre, Bangor. 01248 351358. Facebook: Bangor Arts Initiative

Charles Tunnicliffe - The Commercial Artist
Until 1st September. Showcasing the artist's role as a creator of timeless and evocative images, and presents original artwork from both public and private collections. Oriel Ynys Mon, Llangefni, Anglesey LL77 7TQ, 01248 724444, kyffinwilliams.info

Lisa Eurgain Taylor ~ Between Il Lights
Until 6th April. A series of paintings that exist somewhere between reality and fantasy. They are imaginary, otherworldly and mystic places, but have been inspired by the striking mountains of Snowdonia. Storiel, Bangor LL57 1DT, 01248 353368, storiel.cymru

A Jewish History of Bangor Until 26th April. Remarkably, we can begin to trace the history of the Jews in the city of Bangor to the time of the English invasion of Wales under Edward I and follow the story through the centuries to the Russian Tsarist Pogroms of the late 19th century and to the Diamond cutting factories of the Second World War. The influence of Jewish families like the Wartski's, the Pollecoff's, The Aronson's, The Hymans and the Bolloten's to name but a few on the development of the city as we know it today is in no doubt but their stories are also full of tragedies, of remarkable achievements and a certain amount of humour. Women, War & Peace Until 27th April. A moving exhibition by world renowned photojournalist Lee Karen Stow with the Welsh Centre for International Affairs (WCIA). This exhibition explores the impact of war on the lives of women in Wales and across the world, through their personal portraits and stories - whilst also considering how women have inspired the search for peace in the 100 years since WW1 ended. Storiel, Fford Gwynedd, Bangor LL57 1DT, 01248 353368, storiel.cymru

Victor Cirefice ~ Aspects Around the Coastal Path Until 28th April. “A retrospective revisiting subjects from my formative years on Anglesey where I worked exclusively from life, cycling around the island.” Oriel Mon, Llangefni, Ynys Mon LL77 1TQ, 01248 724444, orellynysmon.info

John & Marilyn Davies 31st March - 24th April. Carving of birds and their perches, texturing with pyrography and painting of the birds. Ffin y Parc, Llanrwst LL26 0PT, 01492 642070, welshart.net

Derek Boshier: It’s Only When The Tide Goes Out Until 30th June. Selected works and ephemera presented by English pop artist Derek Boshier who first came to prominence as part of the British Pop Art movement in the early 1960s. Boshier is also known for his work with cultural icons such as The Clash and David Bowie. Mostyn, Llandudno LL30 1AB, 01492 879201, mostyn.org

Malcolm Edwards ~ Dreams and Realities 31st March - 24th April. There is a dialogue between visions of permanence and decay, a sense of the stoic acceptance of the passing of time, and a yearning melancholy. There are hawks in his big open skies scanning the landscape, riding the currents, contemplating departure. And there are empty patches, literal expressions of absence giving a glimpse, or hint or hope perhaps, of some kind of transcendence. Ffin y Parc, Llanrwst LL26 0PT, 01492 642070, welshart.net

S. Mark Gubb: The Last Judgement Until 30th June. Taking Michelangelo’s Sistine Chapel painting of the same name as a starting point and reference, the exhibition includes a range of new and existing sculptural works exhibited as an installation. 66 projects from 62 creatives fill the entirety of Plas Bodfa, a currently empty manor house in Llangoed on the Isle of Anglesey.

This remarkably multi-disciplinary group art exhibition explores the idea of ‘sui generis’, a Latin phrase meaning "of its (his, her, their) own kind; in a class by itself; unique”. It has been adopted by the legal profession for unusual buildings, properties that fall outside normal designation.

What are the possibilities of a house? With performance and painting, collage and ceramics, skateboarding and singing, poetry and polyrhythmic drumming, fairytale and photography, games and gramophones, sculpture and storytelling, re-enactments and a retroscope, this exhibition is a one-time opportunity to fill the currently vacant 36 room / 1,000 sqm space with creative acts, before complete renovation begins.

Plas Bodfa will eventually be home to art studios, an artist residency programme, holiday-lets, events, retreats, a family home, and cultural projects of all kinds.

Julie Upmeyer is an artist and initiator who creates sculptures and objects, performances and installations. Her artworks, projects, and exhibitions have taken her all over the world.

From April 20th, one of the most extraordinary gatherings of “trainee planetary stewards” will take place at the Findhorn Foundation in Scotland. This is the Climate Change & Consciousness Conference.

Conference Convener, Stephanie Mines, explains its origins:

“As I watched the US election late into the night of November 8, 2016 I was riveted by a certainty and clarity of direction. I knew without a sliver of doubt that there was one issue that I was to focus on now: climate change. I also knew, in what felt like a head-to-toe sweep of guidance, that I was to convene a major conference to develop resilient, sustainable communities and that it was to be at the Findhorn Foundation.

“In retrospect, I would call this experience a quickening. Quickening is the moment during pregnancy when fetal movements are first perceived by the mother. It is a numinous experience... This quickening sparked the birth of the conference.

“A ten-year-old girl named Aika Tsubota said ‘I think of the Earth as a gentle cradle that watches over all of the lives in it.’ The time has come to cherish this cradle of life with unremitting passion so that it continues to be the cradle of humanity for generations to come.”

Findhorn resident Graham Meltzer is in charge of the logistics. He says: “The conference has truly ‘landed’ in the community and been embraced by it. Many new projects catalysed by the coming event have recently sprung into being, boosting our already well established sustainability practices to a new level. There is a high level of anticipation of what’s undoubtedly going to be a momentous, perhaps a landmark, event.

“The conference has been fully subscribed for many months. We have to limit the number of onsite participants to about 300 (and even that is stretching our capacity). So we are now putting energy into live-streaming the event to enable many more people to participate.

“We are encouraging the formation of live streaming hubs, which are organised groups, NGOs, businesses and institutions that will self-organise an event of their own, based around the live streaming.

“We have striven to attract diverse viewpoints, backgrounds and interests. And we have succeeded. The 300 ‘voices in the room’ comprise roughly equal numbers of representatives from 15 different sectors, including business, government, law and innovation. They will join with the more likely voices from science, education, health, spirituality, farming, community and the arts. Climate and social justice activists will of course also be present, as well as representatives from indigenous cultures from all parts of the world. And most significantly of all, the voices of children and youth will be loud, up front and centre at this conference.

“We hope you will be able to join us in April, one way or another.”

The journey of my work and of my inner understanding has led me to the vision that will now occupy the rest of my life: That of Sacred Activism. I have founded the Institute for Sacred Activism to implement this vision and we are in the process of co-creating a global curriculum which will be disseminated in various forms through the mass media.

I invite you to join me in creating a new world founded in universal compassion and sacred passion for all life.

Everyone whose eyes are open knows the world is in a terrifying crisis. As many of us as possible need to undergo a massive transformation of consciousness and to find the sacred passion to act from this consciousness in every arena and on every level of reality. It is my deepest belief that only Sacred Activism – the fusion of the deepest mystical knowledge, peace, strength, and stamina with calm focused and radical action – can possibly be of use now. A mysticism that is only private and self-absorbed leaves the evils of the world intact and does little to halt the suicidal juggernaut of history; an activism that is not purified by a profound spiritual vision and psychological self-awareness and rooted in divine truth, wisdom, and compassion will only perpetuate the problem it is trying to solve, whatever it’s righteous intentions. When, however, the deepest and most grounded mystical vision is married to a practical and pragmatic drive to transform all existing political, economic, and social institutions, a holy force and power of wisdom in action is born, a force and power that can re-fashion all things in and under God, and bring humanity, even at this late desperate hour, into harmony with its self and original nature. This force of Sacred Activism I believe will be the source of the birthing power that humanity will need to create a new world from the smoking ashes of the one that is now passing away.

Hildegard of Bingen, a great Sacred Activist of her time, wrote; “Humanity, full of creative possibilities, is God’s work. Humanity is called upon to assist God. Humanity is called to co-create with God.” These words by the great 12th century Christian woman saint challenge us all, whatever our religious or spiritual belief, to do three linked things: to uncover our own divine nature through prayer and meditation, to attune our hearts and will to the will of God for the transformation of the earth, and to devote and pour out all our God-given life energies in creativity, service, and justice-making so that divine reality can be increasingly embodied in the world.

And let all of us who see the seriousness of our contemporary situation, and also the extraordinary possibilities of a new order join together as Sacred Activists to do all we can with all we are and have to transform the crisis and the world.

Andrew Harvey is Founder Director of the Institute of Sacred Activism.

The Great Invocation was written down by Alice Bailey in 1945, as a culminating act in her collaboration with the Tibetan teacher, Djwhal Khul. Her husband, Foster, wrote some years later:

“We may well marvel at the significance involved, and as we ponder these things we may perhaps understand a little of the tremendous responsibility accepted by the Tibetan, in his effort to put into the English language any sort of expression of this Great Invocation. The preparation which he underwent for this task involved capacities and tensions of which we can hardly guess. Through nearly thirty years of active association Mrs. Bailey qualified to assist him in writing it down. ... “I well remember the strain of the days before the morning when, as the sun rose, Mrs. Bailey brought me the words of this Invocation as she had written them to the exact dictation of the Tibetan. It was an occasion of the most complete at-one-ment with him that she had probably ever achieved.”

Since the Great Invocation was given out in April 1945, it has been translated into over 80 languages and dialects, and its distribution is now worldwide.

The Great Invocation voices the destiny and Plan for humanity for the new Aquarian age. It is a prayer, an invocation, and a means of alignment which provides a spiritual inflow right to the very heart of humanity and from the highest sources. In the apparent simplicity of the Great Invocation is outlined the crucial role in the divine Plan which humanity is intended to play. It is a role into which humanity will enter when it has achieved its destined position as a fully functioning member of the planetary Triangle which also includes Shamballa, the centre where the Will of God is known, and Hierarchy, the planetary heart centre and the focal point or inlet for divine Love.

At the heart of this great Triangle stands the Coming One expected by people of all faiths and known by many names.

No one can work with this Invocation or prayer for illumination and for love without causing powerful changes in one’s own attitudes, one’s life intention, character and goals, we are told.

Such is the power of this great mantram that, when it is used regularly and with persistent effort to penetrate to its deeper meaning and purpose, one’s life becomes altered and made spiritually useful.

The spirit of cooperation with the divine Plan for our world becomes engendered in the mind and heart of one who works intelligently with, and on behalf of, the Great Invocation.

The Great Invocation

From the point of Light within the Mind of God
Let light stream forth into the minds of men.
Let Light descend on Earth.

From the point of Love within the Heart of God
Let love stream forth into the hearts of men.
May Christ return to Earth.

From the centre where the Will of God is known
Let purpose guide the little wills of men –
The purpose which the Masters know and serve.

From the centre which we call the race of men
Let the Plan of Love and Light work out
And may it seal the door where evil dwells.

Let Light and Love and Power restore the Plan on Earth.

Sister, do you see me?

Lowri Hedd

A call for women to unite in reconnecting with their wild nature, supporting one another in doing so.

Sister, do you see me?
Can you feel the soul we share?
Has this life of greed and envy
Left you too burnt out to care?

Sister, do you see me
and the stars that gave us life?
Can you rise above the narrow path of worker, spender, wife?

Sister, do you remember when we laughed and sang and played?
Breathing flames of divine purpose,
ever dreaming we’d be swayed.

Sister do you need me?
Can we sit and breathe a while?
Forget the lists and image shit
that eat away your smile

I’m not your competition
We’re not just gossip bait
I’ve got your back
I’ll wipe your tears
'Til you awake, I'll wait

This earth needs all its women
To love, care and create
Let’s turn the tides of shame filled tears and build our heaven state.

Lowri Hedd is mother to three gentle warrior sons, a passionate creatrix seeking balance, unity and justice both within and without.
