Welcome to the August Network News. So it’s 50 years since “we” reached the moon. It’s sad NASA chose to plant an American flag instead of, say, a UN flag, but the even sadder truth is that from now on, space will be marked by corporate logos instead of flags. Elon Musk has already sprayed his territory by launching an actual Tesla car. He has just followed this with the first 60 of his 12,000 internet satellites. Astronomers everywhere have pointed out the blight to the night sky - but who is there to stop it? No-one. Right now, there is no-one in charge. Space is the new wild west. Amazon’s Jeff Bezos is not far behind Musk. In a recent interview on NBC he accepted that Earth was now pretty messed up, so the obvious solution is factories in space. Virgin’s Richard Branson has long been pre-selling trips to “near-space” for $250,000 per person. Not to be left out, Emperor Trump has announced a new military “Spaceforce”, which - unlike most of his earthly promises - is all too feasible. No doubt Ivanka or Eric will be put in charge of hospitality. There are already 200 tons of human waste on the Moon - and 34,000 large pieces of junk orbiting the Earth - along with 128 million little pieces. A Pacific Gyre in space. Oh humanity…

We need a Planetary Council of Elders. Not to rule, just to give counsel. There is a working prototype in “The Elders” formed by Nelson Mandela in 2007 - but sadly Branson has bought his way into that as well! We need to vision and create a Planetary Council that is truly “of the people, by the people and for the people”. We might even encourage the boy billionaires to head off for Mars a.s.a.p. and leave the Earth in the care of those who truly love it. Blessings to all beings
In my time, I have marched against the bomb, and for gay rights. I have delivered Amnesty International reports to embassies to protest about torture; and dressed as a Russian bear to perform street theatre against Cruise missiles. I have sold coffee to promote fair trade; and run a soup kitchen to raise awareness of homelessness. Whilst there’s been some progress on some of these issues, I do seem to have had a strong attraction for the lost cause…that is, until now.

I am campaigning for a 20mph speed limit in Llanddaniel. I want the speed limit reduced because I don’t want our cat, Socs, to be killed on the road, as his brother was a couple of years ago. It seems as if everyone who has ever had a cat has a story about a cat they owned being run over. Socs The Wonder Cat knows all and sees all, he has never quite grasped the Green Cross Code. He is probably quick enough to get out of the way of a car moving at 20mph, but I’m less confident about him being quick enough to evade a car travelling at a legal 30mph through the village, let alone one speeding.

We worry about stranger danger and mad cow disease, but, just as we all have stories about cats being killed on the roads, so we all have stories about friends and relatives being injured or killed on the roads as well. Last year 103 people were killed on Welsh roads; and 5,656 people were injured. That’s a lot of people, and when you think that all of those dead and injured people had families, you realise their lives were harmed too.

Most vehicles are travelling at speed through our village just before 9am, and in the mid afternoon. That’s when busy parents are transporting their kids to and from school. The phenomenon of parental speeding is a bit ironic, given that the strongest argument for reducing speed limits is to protect children. We used to be concerned about boy racers, but apparently the insurance companies charge them lower premiums if they are willing to have electronic speed monitors fitted to their cars. This goes to show how apparently insurmountable problems often become readily soluble when the people with power decide enough is enough.

People with power seem to have decided it’s time to reduce the speed limit in residential areas. The Welsh Government announced in May that it would like to see a default speed limit of 20mph in residential areas, and in 2022 all new vehicles throughout the EU will have speed limiters fitted. These will temporarily disable the accelerator if you drive over the local speed limit. Socs and I think this is all very heartening news, but we also know that reducing over-hasty driving is going to require far more than reduced speed limits.
For years, cars and roads have been designed to facilitate speedy movement. Our culture promotes speed just as it promotes “more” of just about everything. Most of us buy into the idea that more is more = more money = more consumer goods = more happiness. The Cult of More has delivered more money and more consumer goods, it’s true, but beyond a fairly moderate degree of material wellbeing, more doesn’t make us any happier, it just delivers more waste and more global warming.

We need cars and roads designed to encourage us to drive slowly and carefully. Enforcement will help, as will traffic calming, but, since over hasty driving is just one manifestation of the Cult of More, what will help is for each of us in our own time to step back from rushing through life. For most of us, a slower life would be a better life.

When I was a student in my twenties I was a young man in a rush. I couldn’t ban the bomb, establish gay equality and fair trade, sort out the problems of poverty and homelessness, or stop torture, soon enough, but, for all the energy I expended, I’m not sure I made that much difference. In my own way, I was buying into the Cult of More.

Now, towards the end of my working life, I’m inclined to think I might achieve more by doing less. I’m going to invest a bit of time trying to reduce the speed limit. Not in the world, or Wales, or even on Anglesey, but just outside my front door. This might be the first campaign where I find myself on the winning side.

Adam is a CBT psychotherapist who lives and works much more slowly than he ever used to in Llanddaniel, on Anglesey.

While vacationing on Martha’s Vineyard, Kris Newby was bitten by an unseen tick. That one bite changed her life forever, pulling her into the abyss of a devastating illness that took ten doctors to diagnose and years to recover from: Newby had joined the ranks of the 400,000 Americans who are afflicted with Lyme disease each year.

As a science writer, she was driven to understand why this disease is so misunderstood and its patients so mistreated. This quest led her to Willy Burgdorfer, the Lyme microbe’s discoverer, who revealed that he had developed bug-borne bioweapons during the Cold War and believed that the Lyme epidemic was started by a military experiment gone wrong.

In a superb, meticulous work of narrative journalism, Bitten takes readers on a journey to investigate these claims, from tours of biological weapons facilities to interviews with biosecurity experts and microbiologists doing cutting-edge research, all the while uncovering darker truths about Burgdorfer. It also leads her to uncomfortable questions about why Lyme can be so difficult to both diagnose and treat, and why the government is so reluctant to classify chronic Lyme as a disease.

A gripping, infectious page-turner, Bitten will shed a terrifying new light on an epidemic that is exacting an incalculable toll on us, upending much of what we believe we know about it.

The story of Lyme disease in the modern world is maddeningly complex. To even begin to properly tell it, you need to give context about ticks, the infections they can carry, and how those diseases affect humans and animals.

You should discuss the inadequacies of “standard” lab testing and the workings of the human immune system.

And you must explore how the medical establishment “treats” Lyme disease, how legions of sick people are abandoned by the system, and the failure of health officials to properly address a developing epidemic.
And that’s just for starters. Mary Beth Pfeiffer’s new book, Lyme: The First Epidemic of Climate Change, does a masterful job of tackling these thorny issues - and many more. Its comprehensive look at the worldwide implications of Lyme disease fills a gaping need.

Pfeiffer started covering the Lyme disease beat while she was an investigative reporter for the Poughkeepsie Journal in New York state. Her award-winning series of articles published from 2012-2015 led to the creation of this book.

When she left the paper a few years ago to finish the project, she zeroed in on the subject matter even more. She interviewed physicians, patients and advocates on three continents, spoke to dozens of research scientists around the world, and read reams of research studies.

She adroitly weaves all that information together in a compelling narrative that leads to an inescapable conclusion: “This is an epidemic. It is global and dangerous. It is spreading to new places on earth and affecting places in the human body, the brain for one, in ways that are not fully understood. History teaches us that medicine sometimes clings fiercely to convictions that are ultimately proven wrong. Lyme disease is one such time.”

Throughout the book, she documents a variety of responses and potential solutions directed at different slices of the problem. At the end, she summarizes by listing three things that must occur, if this scourge is to be controlled:

“First, the pain of tens, maybe hundreds, of thousands of long-term tick-borne disease sufferers must be recognized. Why solve a problem that has barely been acknowledged?

Second, health issues must be addressed, including the need for better tests and treatment trials, and an acceptance that the problem is tick-borne disease, not only Lyme disease.

Finally, an organized, coordinated effort must be made to tackle the problem of ticks in the environment and the harm they do.”

This is a groundbreaking book. It should be read by anyone who cares about the health of our planet and the people who live on it.
Blodeuwedd Botanics are based in the Dyffryn Ogwen area. We are a small group, including a qualified Social and Therapeutic Horticulturist, who develop and create Community Gardens and outdoor spaces where we offer horticultural and nature-based activities for adults, to help improve their well-being and mental health. Our activities are linked to the Five Ways of Well being: Connect, Be Active, Take Notice, Keep Learning, Give.

We hope to encourage people who are lonely or feel isolated to come to build up their social connectedness and companionship with tea, cake and gentle activities on the allotment and in the surrounding countryside. Groups will be small, no more than 6 people, with 2 Blodeuwedd Botanics members present.

We offer morning and afternoon gardening sessions. At the beginning of each session we will remind ourselves what we did last time and outline what we will be doing this week, encouraging people to connect and take notice. The natural world is a great place to observe and take notice. Has that plant grown since last week? What was that noise? A bird. What bird? This is time to be outside, and outside ourselves, giving respite from overworking minds.

Activities are set to suit individuals, to keep them comfortable while challenging them a bit, and we hope that we’ll all learn something new from each other. It could be a place for personal change, but there will be no pressure. There will always be tea and biscuits and time for a chat - a great way for people to connect, and give to each other.

Y Plot is a small allotment set in a beautiful natural location on Pandy Farm on the edge of Tregarth. It will be open on Thursdays for our Tea, Cake and Company Gardening Group. The garden will be open from 10am till 4pm. Morning activities are 10-12.30, and afternoon activities 1.30-4pm. Tea and cake will be provided in both activity sessions. If you want to come to both sessions you are welcome to stay over lunch, with your own packed lunch. There is a charge of £6 for each session, or £10 if you come to both morning and afternoon.

A Tibetan Legend:

"There comes a time when all life on Earth is in danger. Barbarian powers have arisen. Although they waste their wealth in preparations to annihilate each other, they have much in common: weapons of unfathomable devastation and technologies that lay waste the world. It is now, when the future of all beings hangs by the frailest of threads, that the kingdom of Shambhala emerges.

"You cannot go there, for it is not a place. It exists in the hearts and minds of the Shambhala warriors. But you cannot recognize a Shambhala warrior by sight, for there is no uniform or insignia, there are no banners. And there are no barricades from which to threaten the enemy, for the Shambhala warriors have no land of their own. Always they move on the terrain of the barbarians themselves.

"Now comes the time when great courage is required of the Shambhala warriors, moral and physical courage. For they must go into the very heart of the barbarian power and dismantle the weapons. To remove these weapons, in every sense of the word, they must go into the corridors of power where the decisions are made.

"The Shambhala warriors know they can do this because the weapons are manomaya, mind-made. This is very important to remember, Joanna. These weapons are made by the human mind. So they can be unmade by the human mind!

The Shambhala warriors know that the dangers that threaten life on Earth do not come from evil deities or extraterrestrial powers. They arise from our own choices and relationships. So, now, the Shambhala warriors must go into training.

"How do they train?" I asked.

"They train in the use of two weapons."

"The weapons are compassion and insight. Both are necessary. We need this first one," he said, lifting his right hand, "because it provides us the fuel, it moves us out to act on behalf of other beings. But by itself it can burn us out. So we need the second as well, which is insight into the dependent co-arising of all things. It lets us see that the battle is not between good people and bad people, for the line between good and evil runs through every human heart. We realize that we are interconnected, as in a web, and that each act with pure motivation affects the entire web, bringing consequences we cannot measure or even see.

"But insight alone," he said, "can seem too cool to keep us going. So we need as well the heat of compassion, our openness to the world's pain. Both weapons or tools are necessary to the Shambhala warrior."
Natural Climate Solutions: The Trees Have It
Richard Shirres

“Until you dig a hole, you plant a tree, you water it and make it survive, you haven’t done a thing. You are just talking”
Wangari Maathai (1940-2011) who brought about the planting of more than 50 million trees in her native Kenya

Restoration of the Earth’s forests is now confirmed as the world’s most effective solution to climate change. It has the potential to capture two thirds of man-made carbon emissions. This is from landmark research by the Crowther Lab in Switzerland, published in early July in the journal Science.

But before going on let’s row back a bit for some context. The 2015 Paris climate agreement was remarkable in that it included the aspiration to limit global temperature increase to 1.5C whilst keeping temperature below 2C. Yet this posed the question: what is the difference in impacts at these two limits? The answer came in October 2018, with publication of the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change (IPCC) Special Report on 1.5C. It reported a robust and significant difference in impacts from those at 2C compared to a 1.5C global temperature rise. But last year’s Special Report also stressed the urgency for effective action.

The IPCC Special Report examined four de-carbonising pathways that might limit 21st century temperature rise to 1.5C. Unfortunately, three of the four solutions depend upon the technology of sucking carbon out of the atmosphere on a massive industrial scale, essentially: carbon capture and storage (CCS). Latest research suggests that, if enacted at anything like the scale needed, it means building tens of thousands of major CCS installations that would consume a quarter of global energy demand by 2100. Then there’s the carbon footprint of creating such infrastructure. The feasibility of CCS to make a dint in our GHG emissions can be dismissed this side of mid-century. We have already passed 1°C global temperature rise with a warming at more than 0.2°C per decade. That IPCC Special Report suggested that even for a one-in-two chance of keeping global warming... below 1.5°C, emissions need to be reduced to around half their present level by 2030. This is a mighty challenge and one that needs proven effective solutions capable of being implemented now. But there was one other de-carbonising pathway in that IPCC report that did just that and relied greatly on natural climate solutions – using the carbon sequestration potential of nature. For climate adaptation, restoration of mangroves, saltmarsh and peat lands also yield valuable carbon sequestration. But research cited by the IPCC report showed reforestation to have by far the greatest global potential for carbon sequestration.

So getting back to this important study, what we did not understand until now, is the actual potential for global tree restoration. This study is the first to quantify how many trees the Earth can really support, where they could exist and how much carbon they could store. It finds that there is potential to increase the world’s forest land by a third (circa 9 billion hectares or 90 million sq.km.) without affecting existing urban areas or agriculture.

Such new forestation, as it matured, could store 205 billion tonnes of carbon (Currently, global man-made emissions are injecting almost 10 billion tonnes every year). This offers a plausible prospect of returning to 350 parts per million of atmospheric CO2, last seen in the 1980s, and which many scientists believe is a sustainable level for the climate to safeguard humankind’s future.

Professor Tom Crowther, senior author of the study said: "We all knew restoring forests could play a part in tackling climate change, but we had no scientific understanding of what impact this could make. Our study shows clearly that forest restoration is the best climate change solution available today and it provides hard evidence to justify investment."

For the study, researchers analysed tree cover in protected forest areas largely unaffected by human activity across the Earth’s ecosystems, from Arctic tundra to equatorial rainforest, studying nearly 80,000 high resolution satellite photographs. This derived the natural level of tree cover in each ecosystem.

Then, using soil and climate variables across those ecosystems, a computer model was developed to map potential tree cover worldwide under current environmental conditions in areas with minimal human activity. How potential climate change by 2050 could affect viability of tree cover was considered.

Ms. Christiana Figueres, Founding Partner, Global Optimism and Former Executive Secretary, UN Climate Convention, responded to the work: "Finally an authoritative assessment of how much land we can and should cover with trees without impinging on food production or living areas. A hugely important blueprint for governments and the private sector".

This extensive study is good news. Many of us already knew of the herculean challenge before us but this study proves we have the tangible natural means to help meet that challenge. It is a solution that can also restore some of our degraded biosphere, including here in Wales.

Esoteric science understands the most basic duality of Spirit and Matter, and the process of White Magic is defined as the spiritualisation of matter in accordance with the evolutionary will and Divine Law. The “Monad” of Theosophy is pure spirit, the personality is form or matter, and the human soul is a blend of the two. So, by our definition of White Magic, the quest in the Age of Aquarius is to mediate between the polarities by expressing spiritual values, including goodwill, right human relationships and the defending of the animal kingdom, as the soul becomes the jewel in the crown of human consciousness, and mankind begins the transition from out of the Kingdom of Humanity, dominated by personality desires, into the Kingdom of Souls, expressing spiritual aspiration.

To understand our individual personality role in this, we have first to consider the role of the planet Saturn in our lives. Saturn limits, confines and restricts our personality actions until our lessons are learned and our individual karma resolved. This process, of climbing the mountain of our karma, stretching back over innumerable past lives, takes us eventually to the mountain top, and what the Masters call the Third Initiation or Transfiguration. At this point, the human soul, Mercury, meets its devic counterpart, Venus, the Solar Angel, and the two combine to form what is called esoterically the "divine hermaphrodite".

The individual consciousness, having passed the doorkeeper of the lower synthesiser, Saturn, is then passed into the jurisdiction of the higher synthesiser, Uranus, which is symbolised as the lightning flash. This represents the First Aspect of Divinity, the Ray or Energy of Will and Power, directing the Purpose of the Divine Plan for Humanity. At the summit, the mountain that was Karma, becomes the mountain top of Initiation. It is here that the initiate receives the "fire" of the First Ray through the rod wielded by three Masters, and he is flooded with Uranian energy giving him/her more "life" and more "consciousness".

Now the mountain has been symbolised by Saturn, which is a Third Ray Source, of Active Intelligence, and is the energy most easily expressed by humanity today. At the mountain top, the initiate is transfigured, symbolised by the Cross, and relating to the Second Aspect, by the quality of Love-Wisdom, the true nature of the Soul. As the consciousness is now fully aligned with the Soul, with no desires for the lower self, the human personality, he can experience the lightning flash, as the personality will is transformed into the Divine Will, which is now the object of the initiate's service work for all time.

Madame Blavatsky, co-founder of the Theosophical movement, often referred to the "mystery of electricity". To take an electrical analogy of our cyclic evolution, out of the Age of Pisces and into the Age of Aquarius, we look to arrangements of electrical circuits in elementary physics. Consider two electrical resistors connected to a power source which lights a lamp, also in the circuit. The resistors can be connected either in SERIES or in PARALLEL. If they are connected in series, if one resistor breaks down, the current is stopped and the light fails. But if the resistors are connected in parallel, and one resistor fails, the light remains on.

The two resistors placed in SERIES represents the Age of PISCES, where, in order to gain illumination (light from the lamp) and connection with God (the power source) one (the first resistor) had to go through another agency, e.g. a priest (the second resistor).

The two resistors placed in PARALLEL represents the Age of AQUARIUS, where one can (just one resistor) go straight to the source of Godhead for illumination by their own efforts and inner knowledge, as an intermediate/other (human) agency is not now required; this is analogous in moving from Piscean FAITH to Aquarian KNOWLEDGE. It is not a co-incidence that the astrological or glyph for Aquarius is precisely the schematic symbol for two electrical resistors in parallel!

If we consider the symbol of the Ouroboros, the snake with its tail in its mouth, and we number the seven rays along the snake, starting with Ray 1 (Will and Power) at the head, we find that Ray 7 (Magic - the spiritualisation of matter) will be at the tail, right next to the first ray. This illustrates the close affinities that these two Rays have between them, and furthermore demonstrates as the action of Spiritual Fire (Ray 1) spiritualising matter (Ray 7) in a process that esotericism understands as "magic."

This is further underlined by the fact that the hierarchical ruler of Uranus is Aries, ruling electric Fire, and the orthodox ruler of Uranus is Aquarius, ruling the brotherhood of man, emphasising the understanding that the application of a spiritual impetus - Fire - to matter, in order to raise its vibration, is a key feature in the Age in which we are now entering.

But the work of Pluto in transforming all that is obstructive to the realisation of this New Age is currently ongoing and can be expected to continue to cause conflict and crisis as its redemptive mission on the planet continues until 2024/25.

The Great Invocation

From the point of Light within the Mind of God
Let light stream forth into the minds of men.
Let Light descend on Earth.

From the point of Love within the Heart of God
Let love stream forth into the hearts of men.
May Christ return to Earth.

From the centre where the Will of God is known
Let purpose guide the little wills of men –
The purpose which the Masters know and serve.

From the centre which we call the race of men
Let the Plan of Love and Light work out
And may it seal the door where evil dwells.

Let Light and Love and Power restore the Plan on Earth.
