Welcome to the November Network News. It’s not easy to extract real “News” from the toxic swirl that pours from our screens every day. Yes, we accept that this planet and all aboard are on a destructive course - but this has been true for at least 250 years, and very recklessly for the last 75. So it’s hardly News. Indeed, NN was launched in 1992 as a little sanctuary for those in Wales who could see where humanity was headed and were acting personally, locally or globally to bring about transformative change.

An example of real news came in 2015, when - thanks especially to Dr Jane Davidson - the Wellbeing Of Future Generations Act passed into law. This made Wales the first modern government to place planetary health at the very heart of national decision-making.

In 2005, another woman of vision, Ellen Macarthur, became the fastest person to sail around the world alone. She said of the experience, “What we have on board is all we have. There is no more.” And in circumnavigating the planet she knew in the most tangible way possible that the Earth - like a boat - is finite. Yet we treat it as an inexhaustible mine for ever more stuff. How can we?! So Ellen relinquished sailing and made it her life’s mission to promote an economic system that could help humanity meet its needs without waste and within the capacity of the planet. Her Foundation is now the leading resource for what is called the “Circular Economy”.

The fruits of the work of both these pioneering spirits will be present at the Beyond Zero Waste: Building A Truly Circular Economy Conference in Cardiff on November 6/7. The event will also herald the launch of the Celyn - a “mutual credit system for Wales” based on the Sardex which so transformed the local economy of Sardinia.

There are still tickets; we hope to see you there! See Pages 7, 8 & 34

Blessings to all beings
I You We Them
Dan Gretton

“Once we accept, for a single hour or in a single exceptional case, that there can be something more important than sympathy for others, there is no crime against humanity that we cannot commit with a clear conscience… I was thinking about all those men - the superintendent, the convoy soldiers and all the others… most of them nice, kind individuals, who have turned into bad people only because of their official positions… These people… terrify me. And indeed they are terrifying people - more terrifying than any marauding gangster. He might feel some pity, but not these men: they’ve taken out insurance against pity…

“Imagine a problem in psychology: to find a way of getting people in our day and age - Christians, humanitarians, nice, kind people - to commit the most heinous crimes without any feeling of guilt. There is only one solution - doing what we do now: you make them governors, superintendents, officers or policemen, a process which, first of all… allows people to be treated like inanimate objects, precluding any humane or brotherly relationships, and, secondly, ensures that people working… must be so interdependent that responsibility for the way they treat people never devolves on any one of them individually. Without these preconditions it would be impossible in our day and age to carry out atrocities like the things I have witnessed today.”

Nekhlyudov’s reflections in Resurrection (1899), Leo Tolstoy

Preface: First Day, White Page
January 2006 Suffolk coast

Why are we drawn back to particular places?

Since I was a boy I have been returning here. To this unremarkable stretch of shingle on the Suffolk coast - vast grey skies, the sea, usually a darker shade of grey. And undulating waves of pebbles, interrupted only by tussocks of coarse grass, somehow holding on against the bullying winds. We came here to fly kites once, but the wildness of the wind defeated us, twisting the string into a dozen knots. I’ve brought many friends to this place over the years, trying not to build up expectations, wanting the peculiar force of the landscape to work on them wordlessly.

The twisting road that leads here is part of it. Arriving at night, as I did yesterday, it is like sinking into the beginning of a story, the story that captivated you as a child, that you would read again and again, because the absorption into that world was so entire that, momentarily, all else would fall away. Off the motorway. Over the estuary. Round the town that wants to be a city, with its scatterings of drive-through burger bars and superstores off the ring road. Onto a main road. The white lines finally fade. A long, straight stretch through woods of pine and silver birch. Through a last village. And then the little road, barely signed at all. The road where you never meet another vehicle. Driving in a trance now, slowing to twenty, fifteen miles per hour. A tunnel of trees. The right-angle bend sweeps round. The telegraph pole where the barn owl was. To the left, a final sway the other way, out into the open again, over a small, white bridge. Tall reeds now on both sides. And finally the road becomes a track, and the track ends at the blackness of the sea. As the engine fades the certainty of that soft roar of sea and wind. And a flickering understanding that the end and the beginning are the same.

I You We Them is a study of the psychology of some of the least visible perpetrators of crimes against humanity, the ‘desk killers’ who ordered and directed some of the worst atrocities of the last two hundred years.
I am sitting in the window of a small cottage that feels more like the cabin of a boat. In front of me a January sea, two upturned dinghies, a flock of birds I cannot identify flitting in crazed gusts, a red and white plastic bag cartwheeling just too fast for me to read the writing on it. Only two figures seen all day - a bearded man walking his dog, and now a distant figure, or rather a head and shoulders above the line of shingle, flying a huge, modern kite, purple and blue, that resembles a parachute. Having more success than we ever did.

And the paradox that despite the buffetting of the winds on all sides, I feel a sense of stillness for the first time in months. I always knew that the writing could only start here, and probably only at this time of year - the emptiness of January. Looking to the east, beyond the grey strip of the North Sea, which used to be known as ‘the German Ocean’. And, in that sea there still exist, in minuscule particles, the pulverised stones of Spandau prison dumped into these waters after its last prisoner died. All this time trying to understand violence, and its relationship to those who work at their desks, at their computers. Them. Us. You. Me. I reflect on the last decade of journeying and attempting to grapple with this subject. Ten years of visiting archives, walking through sites of extermination, reading interviews with survivors and perpetrators, and thousands of pages of testimony. And yet, as I begin to write, my screen is frozen. A white page. I’m rapidly trying to scan the multiplicity of images and sounds which inhabit me, searching for a way to begin. These understandings and experiences which have haunted me for years… Voices, places, walks and faces jostle for attention as I write these words on a bitingly cold January day:

- ‘It’s hard to recognise, but it was here. They burned people here.’
- Zdzislaw in his hut at Chelmno, fighting his personal battle against forgetting with the aid of handwritten pages that few will ever read.
- The minutes of the Wannsee Conference, the miraculous, single surviving document - one copy out of thirty.
- The killing of Ken Saro-Wiwa. The plumes of fire and smoke that have choked a land far away for over forty years. And we have all let this continue.
- Maria Saro-Wiwa singing the Ogoni anthem, in a broken voice, devastating, to a small crowd gathered by the Thames to remember her husband who died trying to save his land and people from being destroyed by oil.
- Saurer’s corporate communications director protesting from her comfortable office, ‘But we have nothing to do with that company now.’
- Talking to Gitta Sereny about Albert Speer, and the single line which nobody has ever investigated further: ‘I loved machines more than people.’
- Walking from Goethe’s house, out of Weimar, over the Ettersberg and into the beech forest. ‘Buchen-wald’. You can walk it in an hour and a half.
- And Walter Stier, the railway official who timetabled the trains to Treblinka, insists again, ‘I just sat at my desk… I was just a desk man.’
- Our fingers freezing in the snows of Monowice, trying to read Levi’s words in the dying light.

All of these dancing in my head, defying me to begin without them...

Dan moved to Pen Llyn five years ago to complete the 4 books which make up I You We Them. He lives within a stone's throw of RS Thomas's cottage Sarn-y-Plas, and has been inspired by the same extraordinary view over Porth Neigwl and over to the distant coast of Ceredigion.
Summit to Sea – or Mynydd i’r Môr in Welsh - aims to connect a nature-rich area stretching from the Pumlumon massif to the Dyfi estuary and into Cardigan Bay, boosting the local economy through opportunities for new and varied nature-based enterprises and forms of production. It is a five-year collaborative project which aims to restore a flourishing environment and economy across mid Wales by offering grants and support to local businesses and organisations that share the vision.

Now that the project is fully underway, we are stepping aside from Summit to Sea, to allow the project to move forward and to thrive. We hope it will be a tremendous success.

Rewilding Britain played a key role in securing £3.4 million for Summit to Sea in 2018, and we have played a short-term role leading the project’s formation. We’ve been proud to help make the project a reality and to get it up and running.

Our role is to help catalyse and support projects get off the ground. One of our key principles is that local organisations and communities should be at the heart of this process. We’ve learnt some invaluable lessons about how to do this in the most effective way, which we’re committed to putting into practice elsewhere.

Why are we stepping away now?
While it was always intended that the project should be locally-led, and that our role was only short term, the decision for Rewilding Britain to move on at this moment reflects the views of some local people and farming unions who were unhappy at our involvement.

Community views are at the heart of Summit to Sea and how we want to work at Rewilding Britain. To succeed, Summit to Sea has to be both locally led and supported by the community, as it finds ways to help both people and nature to thrive.

The project’s steering group - which is formed from representatives of all of the partner organisations involved in the project - took on board concerns raised by local people over the past year. Together we agreed it was important to make changes to how Summit to Sea is managed, and we felt the time was right for Rewilding Britain to step aside from the project. We hope those who were concerned about our involvement will now be able to support the initiative going forwards.

Why were people so concerned?
There is passionate debate around what rewilding is and how it might work in practice in different parts of the UK. For some, Summit to Sea’s associations with rewilding and Rewilding Britain were felt to be incompatible with their own hopes for mid-Wales. It’s not for us to speak for those people – but it is important that we listen to and respect their views, and that we learn lessons.

Rewilding is a challenging idea for many people, and it’s up to us to work alongside communities to demonstrate that rewilding can bring multiple benefits and is not a threat. People – and their cultural and economic connections to the land – are central to that.

When people’s livelihoods and culture are tied to the land, sometimes for hundreds of years, their views on the future of the land are key. Farmers and rural communities have faced risks to their livelihoods for decades, and are understandably concerned about what the future brings.

What lessons have we learned?
There has been a lot of information in circulation, some of which was incorrect or misconstrued. There was never a plan to reintroduce bears or wolves to the area, for example. And the project is not about telling people what they should do with the land - or about buying land up. The project is simply looking for more nature, diversity, and opportunities for people. Our communication and engagement with local communities about this issue and others should have been better.

Face-to-face meetings and workshops were held over a period of 18 months to involve people locally in the project’s design. This included with farming unions, community members, local businesses, government bodies and other important stakeholders. However, we should have been more proactive in speaking to a wider range of people more generally.

We’re committed to putting these lessons into practice as we move on to focus on catalysing and supporting large-scale nature restoration projects elsewhere.

What’s happening next?
Summit to Sea now has three Welsh-speaking staff on the ground in the Dyfi Valley, and the team recently launched a 12-month community engagement process to ramp up interaction with local people as plans for the project evolve.

Feedback from community members has played a central part in how the project is being shaped and adapted. Those who work and live on the land know it best, so it’s key that they are at the centre of the project’s decisions. The Summit to Sea team is now working hard to strengthen communication, to develop a project that benefits wildlife, nature and people. The team is keen to work alongside the community to move forward together to build a sustainable future that is in the best interests of all involved.

We wish Summit to Sea every success. We know there’s huge potential for people, culture, the local economy and wildlife to thrive together in mid Wales. You can keep updated with Summit to Sea’s progress through their website: summit2sea.wales

Wales is to develop its own complementary currency which could boost the economy to the tune of an estimated £250m over the next decade.

The Welsh Government has announced that Circular Economy Wales is being awarded £100,000 from the Foundational Economy Challenge Fund to create a mutual credit system.

Based on a model in Sardinia, called the “Sardex”, the mutual credit system is targeted at Wales’ SMEs.

Eifion Williams CEO of Circular Economy Wales said: “The Sardex benefited the Sardinian SME economy to the tune of 50 million Euros last year alone. Wales is similar to Sardinia in that SMEs make up 99% of our businesses, so this has the potential to significantly boost our economy.

“If Wales had initiated a copy of the Sardex in 2008, and it had followed the same growth trajectory, Welsh SMEs would now be strengthened to the tune of £256 million in additional turnover.”

The Welsh Government funding will allow for a consultation and pilot, which is planned to take place in North Wales. It will be supported by Dr Paolo Dini, research fellow at the London School of Economics, who was a founder of the Sardex.

Dr Dini said: “The Sardex has been replicated successfully in many parts of Italy, so it’s very exciting to be able to pilot this in Wales. This will be the first replication outside of Italy.

“I think the similar economic factors bode well, our challenge will be ensuring that businesses understand the benefits, and will begin consultation shortly.”

The Welsh mutual credit system, called the Celyn, is a digital currency network that helps businesses exchange services and products without using GBP or other state currencies. Through this inter-trade of goods and services needed to operate, using no cash, helps SMEs weather economic storms and maintain local jobs. As it evolves, credit can be used by employees and customers.

The consultation on the Celyn will begin at the Circular Economy Wales Conference on November 7 in the Principality Stadium, Cardiff with an announcement by deputy minister for economy and transport Lee Waters AM.

What is the Sardex?

Set up 2008, the Sardex is a business-to-business electronic credit system.

- It allows small and medium sized enterprises to participate in a system of mutual credit and do business with other local companies without touching their cash reserves.

- Instead of using cash, bank transfer, or standard credit cards to settle transactions, the euro-denominated amount can be recorded as a debt the buyer owes the Sardex network, not the seller.

- The seller, in turn, records a credit to their Sardex account. This credit is, in effect, a debt owed by Sardex to the seller.

- Participants are expected to keep their Sardex account level within individually agreed maximum credit or debt levels - usually a few thousand euros.

- Members must buy as well as sell, and the net amount of credit or debt on purchases and sales made on their Sardex account should net to zero over the course of a year.

Exhibitions

Jamie Barnes ~ Sea Structures Until 26th January. Inspired by his explorations of coastal paths around Wales, Anglesey, Northumberland, Cumbria and Scotland. A curious set of accompanying sea structures started to appear in Jamie’s work, not only the obvious structures such as lighthouses, but also more unusual, such as orientation beacons, transmitters and glowing power stations. Open Tues - Sun 10.30am - 4pm; Mostyn, Llandudno LL30 1AB. 01492 879201, mostyn.org

Llonau-U / U-Boat Until 5th January. The U-boat project 1914 - 18 is using the latest underwater imaging techniques to reveal wrecks from the Great War and support communities to seek out previously untold stories about their ancestor’s experiences. Some community stories are displayed alongside the underwater exploration results. Oriel Ynys Mon, Anglesey 01248 724444, kyffinwilliams.info

In-sight 18 ~ Helfa Gelf artists in the Cafe. Until 26th January. A new collection of work by artists from North Wales upstairs at MOSTYN, in partnership with Helfa Gelf Art Trail. Artists are: Deborah Albrow / Mark Albrow / Louise Edwards / Helen Howlett / Wini Jones Lewis / Verity Pulford. Open Tues - Sun 10.30am - 4pm; Mostyn, Llandudno LL30 1AB. 01492 879201, mostyn.org

Neil Bottle ~ All That Remains Until 12th January. Neil’s work is inspired by family photographs, a sense of time passing and how we remember things – in both real and false memories. The textile prints are accompanied by personal, sentimental objects that were the starting point for many of the stories Neil is telling – ‘I like the idea of objects that have history embedded in them,’ he says. Ruthin Craft Centre, LL15 1BB. 01824 704774, ruthinraftcentre.org.uk

Anj Smith 9th November - 1st March. Working primarily with painting, Anj Smith is interested in reflecting on the very possibilities and limitations of the medium itself. Her work excavates often-overlooked art histories, which she combines with her lived experiences, to form the layers of her work. Exploring the very edges of representation, Smith’s intricately rendered paintings explore issues of identity, eroticism, mortality and fragility. Mostyn, Llandudno LL30 1AB. 01492 879201, mostyn.org

Crossing Beaches ~ Croesi Traethau Until 19th January. The Sian and Ken Owen Art Collection featuring over 80 paintings of Wales’ foremost artists. Oriel Kyffin Williams, Llangefni, Anglesey 01248 724444, oriel@ynysmon.gov.uk

Brink ~ Ar Drothwy Until 3rd November. Exploring the evolving relationship between art and modern technology, artists Jess Bugler, Ruth Cousins, Sarah Holyfield and Matthew Day, embrace this digital context within their work to question the nature of our modern world. Art Gallery, Oriel Gelf, Llangefni LL77 7TQ. 01248 724444, oriel@ynysmon.gov.uk

Nobuko Tsuchiya: 30 Ways to Go to the Moon 9th November - 1st March. Working primarily with sculpture, Tsuchiya’s practice uses a wide range of materials, often including household objects, collected over time, which she assembles and casts to create amorphous, hybrid minimalist mechanical objects. Mostyn, Llandudno LL30 1AB. 01492 879201, mostyn.org

Lettering: Art & Illusion Until 12th January. The work depicts lettering that is created by hand through calligraphy, letter cutting, painting and engraving. Ruthin Craft Centre, LL15 1BB. 01824 704774, ruthinraftcentre.org.uk

Autumn Season Exhibition Until 24th December. New exhibitors are: Gwyn Roberts, Daniel Robertson, Teresa Jenellen, Billy Bailhole, NW Potters; plus Gallery artists. Plas Glyn Y Weddw, Llanbedrog, Pwllheli 01758 740763, oriel.org.uk

Dylan Arnol Cymru Gudd ~ Hidden Wales Until 16th November. “The idea for my Hidden Wales project grew from my lifelong fascination and love of exploring off-the-beaten-track places. Like many, I’ve always been drawn to the mysteries within hidden and derelict places. The stories that I imagined, contained within their silent, crumbling walls always fired my imagination. Someone once said there is beauty in decay. This saying has always resonated with me.” Storiel, Bangor 01248 353368, storiel.cymru

Chiara Camoni 9th November - 1st March. Working primarily across drawing, sculpture and installation, Camoni creates spaces imbued with poetic sensibility. Mostyn, Llandudno LL30 1AB. 01492 879201, mostyn.org

NW Potters ~ Maker of the Month In November is Ceramicist Pea Restall. 1 High St., Conwy LL32 8DB, 01492 593590, northwalespotters.org

Bill Kneale ~ Viewpoints/ Golygfannau Until 9th February. “My paintings are visual journeys mostly into the mountains and coast of North Wales.” Oriel Ynys Mon, Anglesey 01248 724444, kyffinwilliams.info

Pea Restall
Creative Textiles Exhibition 1st & 2nd November. NW Embroiderers' Guild members will be showcasing over 200 items highlighting a diverse range of techniques. These items will not have been in any of our previous exhibitions. 10.30am - 5pm on 1st; until 4pm on 2nd, £2. United Reformed Church, Colwyn Avenue, Rhos on Sea, Conwy, LL28 4RA. 01492 585310, Facebook of same name

Kim Atkinson & Ian Phillips ~ Bardsey Until 2nd November. The rugged coast, wildlife and people at work portrayed in limited edition relief prints by these two well-respected artists. Storiel, Bangor 01248 353368, storiel.cymru

Folklore & Fairytales of North Wales Until 5th January. An autumn and winter mixed exhibition by a group of artists depicting their interpretations of the Folklore and Fairytales that surround us in North Wales. Open: Tues & Thurs, 10am - 5pm, Sun 11.30am - 4.30pm. Oriel Ty Meirion, Dyffryn Ardudwy LL44 2DH. More information at tymeirion.co.uk

As It Is: Man’s Footprint on the Welsh Landscape Until 26th January. Celebrated Magnum photographer David Hurn is one of Britain’s most influential reportage photographers. Of Welsh descent, Hurn gained his early reputation with his reportage of the 1956 Hungarian revolution. He eventually turned away from coverage of current affairs, preferring to take a more personal approach to visual narration. Mostyn, Llandudno LL30 1AB. 01492 879201, mostyn.org

Elemental Connections: Liz Ellis November. An exhibition in two parts but similarly connected:- Walking the Littoral (a celebration of the wonderful diversity of life and of the commonality and connectivity of all living things) & In the Company of Ravens - The Gathering (Ravens gather to socialise and grow strong. They, like the other beachcombers, are foraging for food along the shoreline before flying off to continue their search in the adjoining countryside). Ruthin Craft Centre 01824 704774, ruthincraftcentre.org.uk

Chloe Holt Until 6th November. A day on Ynys Llanddwyn, an island off an island off an island...The end of the line. A place of escape, and rest, and secrets! Ffin y Parc, Llanrwst LL26 0PT, 01492 642070, welshart.net

The Welsh Group at 70/ Y Grwp Cymreig yn 70 Until 16th November. an artists' collective, with the purpose of exhibiting and "giving a voice" to the visual arts in Wales. Open 11am - 5pm. RCA Conwy, LL32 8AN. 01492 593413, rcaconwy.org

Chris Neale Until 6th November. His economical palette, clean simple lines and stylized shapes may suggest his background and training as a graphic artist, but he uses them to great effect. His selective, observant eye is able to capture the rhythm of the landscape, and the way our buildings and roads fit and fold into it. Ffin y Parc, Llanrwst LL26 0PT, 01492 642070, welshart.net

Robert Pitwell Until 6th November. Often inspired by a poem or phrase, a picture or event, the landscape sliding into dusk or a brief moment of weather and light, they are at once instinctive and refined. Here is revealed the sudden flash of inspiration and the slow flow of the journey. Ffin y Parc, Llanrwst LL26 0PT, 01492 642070, welshart.net

Wil Rowlands ~ Erosion Until 4th January. Wil explores the erosion of things we see and things we feel, and considers the consequence of that change. At the heart of his way of working lies experimentation that often leads the artist and viewer to the unexpected. Open Tues - Sat, 11am - 5pm. Storiel, Bangor LL57 1DT, 01248 353368, storiel.org

Ann Catrin Evans Until 16th November. An internationally renowned sculptor and jeweller, a black, silver and goldsmith. Ann Catrin’s work enhances the narratives of our everyday lives and landscapes. Open 11am - 5pm. RCA Conwy, LL32 8AN. 01492 593413, rcaconwy.org

One Leaf

One leaf left on a branch and not a sound of sadness or despair. One leaf left on a branch and no unhappiness. One leaf left all by itself in the air and it does not speak of loneliness or death. One leaf and it spends itself in swaying mildly in the breeze.

Perhaps ten years ago I was invited, by a fellow professor of architecture to be a critic in the final review of his master’s class. His students were in their last year, and they had spent the year working on a project for an office building.

As I studied the buildings, I began to think - then came to something near a conviction - that there had been very little love or affection for these buildings in the students’ hearts while they were working on the project. So, I cleared my throat, and said that I wanted to make an observation. I felt, I said, that the students did not really like their buildings.

There was a minor stunned silence when I said this. One of the students asked me, in an acid voice, what I meant by it. So I went on to say this. “I realise that you have done your best, done work that on some level you like; but it is not real liking, you do not really like what you have done in the same ordinary sense that you like a good meal, or a rose. That is what I mean. I am convinced,” I said more emphatically, “that you do not genuinely like your own work, which is hanging on the walls here, in this ordinary sense.”

Something like pandemonium broke out. The students were angry with me, they were up in arms, how dare I make such a statement; they had been working on these projects all year, they said, what did I know about it, how could I come in from the outside and suggest they didn’t like what they had been doing.

I explained, then, that I felt the conditions of contemporary architecture were such that one was supposed to follow certain norms, but that none of this had anything to do with pleasing oneself.

My discussion with the students lasted about half an hour. Gradually, by the end, I had led them to admit that, in the sense that I meant it, in the ordinary sense, they really did not like what they had done, or what they had been doing - that indeed, the conditions of their work had never emphasised this point at all, had made no provision for it, and that it had never been suggested to them, while students, that they should like, or might like, what they were doing. That was just not part of the professional discipline being taught to them.

And yet, I said to them, “How terrible! This means you can expect to live your life making buildings that you do not really like.” And, even worse, that the others in society, who live with the buildings, made in this loveless spirit, will spend hours, days, years, living with these products of an unliked and unlikable architecture, done only because it was the thing to do, the way to get jobs, the way to impress one’s fellow architects.

I think, by the end of that afternoon, some of the students had begun to wonder very deeply about what they were doing. One or two, perhaps, had resolved that they must find a way of making buildings where they could, afterwards, stand up and say, honestly, “I like what I did. I truly like what I have done. It pleases me.”

The current response to the global climate crisis represents an incomplete picture. This paper argues that putting in place a circular economy is a fundamental step towards achieving climate targets. Such a shift moves us beyond efforts to minimise emissions in our extractive linear system. It offers a systematic response to the crisis by both reducing emissions and increasing resilience to its effects. The benefits encompass meeting other goals such as creating more liveable cities, distributing value more widely in the economy, and spurring innovation. These attributes make the circular economy a potent contributor to achieving zero-carbon prosperity.

The world has woken up to the climate crisis, the effects of which are already being felt. The greenhouse gas emissions causing climate change are a product of our ‘take-make-waste’ extractive economy, which relies on fossil fuels and does not manage resources for the long-term. A step-change is needed to put the world on track to achieve zero emissions by 2050 to meet the 1.5C target set out in the Paris Agreement. Even if this target is met, costs to the global economy relating to climate change are projected to reach USD 54 trillion by 2100 and rise steeply with every further temperature increase. The incentive to meet the challenge is unquestionable.

To date, efforts to tackle the crisis have focused on a transition to renewable energy, complemented by energy efficiency. Though crucial and wholly consistent with a circular economy, these measures can only address 55% of emissions. The remaining 45% comes from producing the cars, clothes, food, and other products we use every day. These cannot be overlooked. The circular economy can contribute to completing the picture of emissions reduction by transforming the way we make and use products.

To illustrate this potential, this paper demonstrates how applying circular economy strategies in just five key areas (cement, aluminium, steel, plastics, and food) can eliminate almost half of the remaining emissions from the production of goods – 9.3 billion tonnes of CO2e in 2050 – equivalent to cutting current emissions from all transport to zero.

In industry, this transformation can be achieved by substantially increasing the use rates of assets, such as buildings and vehicles, and recycling the materials used to make them. This reduces the demand for virgin steel, aluminium, cement, and plastics, and the emissions associated with their production. In the food system, using regenerative agriculture practices and designing out waste along the whole value chain serve to sequester carbon in the soil and avoid emissions related to uneaten food and unused by-products.

This paper further finds that the circular economy has the potential to increase resilience to the physical effects of climate change. For example, in keeping materials in use, businesses can decouple economic activity from the consumption of raw materials vulnerable to climate risks, and therefore build greater flexibility. In the food system, regenerative agriculture improves the health of soil leading, for instance, to its greater capacity to absorb and retain water, increasing resilience against both intense rainfall and drought. More research on the size and nature of the opportunities in this area could reveal even greater potential.

As well as tackling both the causes and effects of climate change, the circular economy can help meet other UN Sustainable Development Goals, chief among them SDG12 (responsible consumption and production). It has been shown that the circular economy framework can improve air quality, reduce water contamination, and protect biodiversity. Its principles offer businesses a raft of innovation opportunities that reduce materials costs, increase asset utilisation, and respond to changing customer demands. Together, these attributes make a compelling case for seeing the circular economy not just as one option to consider in the quest to meet climate targets, but as a powerful solutions framework for a prosperous future.

Achieving the transformation will require concerted effort: no organisation can go about it alone. International institutions can put the circular economy squarely on the climate agenda, and give it the prominence afforded other important emissions-reduction activities such as energy efficiency and reforestation. Governments and cities can weave circular economy principles into their climate strategies. Businesses can scale opportunities that simultaneously create value in new ways and respond to climate change. Investors can mobilise capital towards businesses that actively reduce climate risk in their portfolios.

A complete picture of a thriving, zero-emissions economy is coming into focus: the mission now is to make it a reality.

Today’s efforts to combat climate change have focused mainly on the critical role of renewable energy and energy-efficiency measures. However, meeting climate targets will also require tackling the remaining 45% of emissions associated with making products. A circular economy offers a systemic and cost effective approach to tackling this challenge. This paper shows that when applied to four key industrial materials (cement, steel, plastic and aluminium) circular economy strategies could help reduce emissions by 40% in 2050. When applied to the food system the reduction could amount to 49% in the same year. Overall such reductions could bring emissions from these areas 45% closer to their net-zero emission targets.
What, and when, is Advent?

Today, it is the period of time covered by the last four Sundays before Christmas Day, which means that it begins around the end of November or very beginning of December. (This year the first Sunday of Advent actually falls on the 1st December.) However, originally there was no particular connection between Advent and Christmas. It was simply another forty-day period (similar to Lent before Easter) of fasting and repentance during which Christian converts studied in preparation for being baptized.

The observation of Advent taking place directly before Christmas seems to have begun in Gaul (modern-day France) in the Fourth Century A.D. This Gallic fast began at sundown after the Feast of Martin of Tours on the 11th November. Interestingly, this was also the date when herds of animals were traditionally culled before the worst of the winter weather set in and there might not be enough grazing or fodder to feed them all. In pre-Christian times, this would have signalled the start of a protracted period of feasting, rather than fasting, while there was abundant fresh food.

Even more interestingly, if we count forty days from the 11th November, it brings us, not to the 24th December and Christmas Eve, but to the 20th December and the eve of the Winter Solstice, a solar event which has been celebrated as a sacred festival of prime importance within the cycle of the year all around the globe for many thousands of years. Rome eventually realised its mistake and later began their forty-day period of Advent at sunset on the 14th November so that it bypassed the solar celebration and did indeed end on Christmas Eve. All this is very well, but it still doesn’t tell us what it might mean to us now? The meaning of the word ‘advent’ comes from the Latin word adventus which means ‘coming’ or ‘arrival’, and it is now more commonly associated with the anticipation of the anniversary of Jesus’ birth on the 25th December – and as such it should be a time of spiritual reflection and preparation, a season of waiting.

But this, again, only reflects the more ancient beliefs that from the end of October until the symbolic rebirth of the Sun at the Winter Solstice, we should take this time to rest after all the heightened activity of the long spring and summer days and all the hard work of bringing in the harvest. These weeks were once devoted to recuperation and assessment of what had just gone before and a time for dreaming and planning what we might wish to bring about next in the coming new year.

Our Twenty-first Century Advent couldn’t be more different. As we attempt to prepare for ‘The Big Day’, we also insist on simultaneously holding all our festivities! By the time Christmas Day rolls around, we have held all our parties, carol services, nativity plays and festive parties, dances, lunches, dinners and general seasonal get-togethers. By Boxing Day – no, sadly, often by Christmas Day afternoon, there is nothing left to look forward to and we are, (not surprisingly), resentfully disappointed, wondering what it was all about, and already turning our attention to the transient psychological quick-fix of Boxing Day sales and even more inappropriate and unnecessary retail therapy.

This year, why not return to a more traditional way of keeping Advent? Make your Advent wreath from fresh evergreens yourself and light one candle each week to represent the promise of the return of the Light. Open the doors on your Advent calendar and feel the true joy of anticipation. Leave the festivities and celebrations of the Midwinter season to much nearer the 21st – 25th December and those now forgotten days between Christmas Day and New Year, and use our now much shorter Advent to truly prepare.

If we want to get away from all the glitz and razamataz of a commercial Christmas, we need time to think, to plan, to make and get ready. In this age of hyper-abundance, we need to choose quality over quantity. To create a celebration which is authentically satisfying we need to do more ourselves so that decorations, activities, gifts and food are more personal and individual. Some of our time should be occupied in coming together and making our celebrations ourselves… as a family or group; not maxing out on the credit cards, paying for mass-produced (and largely inferior and unsatisfactory goods) and then sitting back wondering why we are bored, dissatisfied and stressed.

This year, take a different approach and discover just how different your Midwinter celebrations can be… A very happy Advent to you all!

The Great Invocation
From the point of Light within the Mind of God
Let light stream forth into the minds of men.
Let Light descend on Earth.

From the point of Love within the Heart of God
Let love stream forth into the hearts of men.
May Christ return to Earth.

From the centre where the Will of God is known
Let purpose guide the little wills of men –
The purpose which the Masters know and serve.

From the centre which we call the race of men
Let the Plan of Love and Light work out
And may it seal the door where evil dwells.

Let Light and Love and Power restore the Plan on Earth.

“Some of my most precious sculptures have been to respect and celebrate people who have passed on. Headstones, grave marker stones, and in this case, a funeral urn for a much loved grandmother. The carving has a chamber to hold the ashes. It is carved from a Yew tree, suitably the ancient memorial tree of the druids. She is now on her way to Paris and then all the way to a family shrine Madagascar.” Peter Boyd

A Network of Goodwill

In every neighbourhood we can find kindred spirits who share a vision of a beautiful and humane world, and who share a commitment to making it a reality.

They might be found planting organically - food, herbs, flowers, forests; or simplifying their lives, using less fossil fuels, recycling and repairing, going by bus and by bicycle, pouring less poison down the sink and less waste into the landfill. They might be working to restore the soul in science; or creating artefacts that are sustainable and beautiful; or sharing their craft in sound, colour or form.

Others are reaching out to those that society has abandoned; or reminding big organisations to respect life at human scale; or challenging “expert” opinions. They may be choosing a more compassionate diet, moving their money to a more ethical bank or credit union, raising their children without force or fear. They may be pioneering new ways to exchange ideas, skills and resources; experimenting with different kinds of household or community; or simply remembering how to play, sing and dance together without dependence on drugs or alcohol.

Some are learning to heal - bringing together wisdom and skills from different ages, cultures and dimensions. Then there are those who are advocates for the voiceless kingdoms - animal, vegetable and mineral - that depend on human beings for their welfare and survival.

Others are struggling to uproot violence - in the nation, the community, the home and the heart - learning to think, to speak and to act without cruelty.

Most are politically engaged, but each with their own unique mix of causes and ideals. Many prefer to "follow the money" rather than a party line - aware that every donation and purchase they make every day is a powerful vote for good or ill.

Most are spiritually active, but without a conventional creed. They may practice meditation or mindfulness, and use the insights and strength from their inner work to inform their service in the world.

Some are reclaiming the great seasonal rituals, aligning themselves with the cycles of Earth, Sun, Moon and Stars; or reinventing those essential rites of passage: the initiations of birth, coming of age, marriage, death and spiritual unfoldment.

Many sense that the world will need a vast outpouring of goodwill if it is to make it through the next few decades intact. Some found their deeper purpose through personal crisis - perhaps global crisis is humanity's great opportunity?

Do you recognise yourself here? Are you a member of this extraordinary group? Are you among those building little altars and centres and refuges of hope for a more compassionate world? If so, you need support! Network News exists to reach, encourage and support all members of this “network of goodwill”. A space where members can meet, share their gifts and celebrate their unity and their diversity. A place to vision, to collaborate, and to affirm that, truly, “another world is possible”.
