Welcome to the December Network News. We are approaching the final election in what will someday be known as the “former United Kingdom”. There may be trouble ahead, but not far beyond lies an independent Scotland, an independent Wales and a healed Ireland - each in a mature relationship with its European neighbours.

While beyond Offa’s Dyke lies the very “little england” of Farage, Johnson and Prince Andrew. The heirs of empire having to learn to pick their own vegetables and wash their own hospital floors. We may be tempted to smile at this turn of events, but as our network aspires to “the way of the heart”, we will try to make the coming downfall of our once proud owners and rulers as soft as possible...

So let’s leave them a genuinely kind soul as PM! Let’s vote - directly or tactically - for Jeremy Corbyn. Jeremy is a once-in-a-generation political leader. Why? Because he never sought or expected power. His parents met while opposing tyranny and he just continued the family tradition. In his teens he was protecting foxes from hounds, Africans from apartheid, and the world from nuclear destruction.

Jeremy was only nominated by Labour members to make their leadership election look inclusive: the token socialist! However, the unintended consequence was that the long-lost idealism and compassion which had created the Labour movement suddenly awakened from its long sleep. Hundreds of thousands joined, and suddenly Labour had the biggest membership of any party in Europe; even the mystical landscape of Glastonbury echoed with his name amidst the Solstice celebrations! He has since had to face Blairite betrayal, the Brexit civil war (an Old Etonian dark ritual), the billionaire press and the BBC, but he is still standing. Let’s vote this final vote. Then, in the 2020s, we’ll transform the whole system.

Blessings to all beings
The time will come when the people of Wales will make a choice about independence. To a large extent, that choice will be made on the basis of conjectures about the future economy. YesCymru has started to prepare for these debates, exploring different aspects of economic development that are important to people’s lives. What could be achieved through independence that is unattainable otherwise?

At the first YesCymru debate at the Temple of Peace in Cardiff, on Saturday 16th November, I made a contribution to this endeavour. I proposed that an independent Wales could ditch Gross Domestic Product (GDP) growth as the core principle of economic development.

There is no prospect of such a move on the part of the UK as a whole, but this is not as unrealistic as it seems. Wales has already taken a major step towards putting wellbeing considerations into law, through the Well-Being of Future Generations Act. New Zealand has just gone the whole hog and ditched GDP altogether. And, of course, the threat of climate change absolutely requires the abandonment of GDP growth at the earliest opportunity.

GDP is a lousy measure of economic progress. Simon Kuznets, who invented national income accounting in 1934, said to the US Senate, “The welfare of a nation can scarcely be inferred from a measurement of national income.” The most eloquent tirade ever made against the measure, by Robert F Kennedy in 1968, is well worth a listen.

At our level of development, more GDP per capita does not mean people feel better off. This graph mapping life satisfaction against GDP per capita illustrates how things level off once you get to where we currently are. This matters politically, because right now, people are feeling miserable and this is generating political chaos. Increasing GDP is not going to help.

In the run-up to Brexit, whilst GDP was gradually going up, measures of life satisfaction were steadily going down. The same trends were seen before the Arab Spring and recent analysis of Trump voting shows it was greatest in those areas where people were least happy.

Economists have shown that, whilst GDP going up does not add much to happiness, GDP going down is dramatically linked to people feeling more miserable. This graph depicts the movements of GDP and life satisfaction in Greece through its recession.

If misery drives political chaos, what of happiness? It turns out that, across Europe, when people are happier, incumbent Governments are more likely to get re-elected. This correlation is stronger than the GDP growth rate and also stronger than the unemployment and inflation rates.

So I propose that an independent Wales could pursue happiness instead of GDP. This may sound a bit wacky in a society dominated by a capitalist ideology which emphasises economic growth above all else.

But this has all been worked out internationally in great detail. Since the 2008 global financial crisis, there have been some big steps forward. In Europe, the 2008 Report for European Commission by Joseph Stiglitz, Amartya Sen and Jean-Paul Fitoussi highlighted the urgent need to focus more on wellbeing.

The OECD Better Life Index sets out 11 measures that research shows time and again really matter to people – jobs, income & work-life balance; health, safety and housing; community belonging and civic engagement; environment and overall life satisfaction.

New Zealand has built on this system, adapting it to its own situation through substantial public consultation. This process added a 12th measure, cultural identity, on account of the urgent issues faced by the Maori and Pacific Islander communities. In addition, New Zealand added measures of ‘future capital’, which cover climate change.

In 2019, New Zealand published its first Wellbeing Budget 2019. It puts three new national priorities in top place: mental health, child wellbeing and Maori & Pacific Island communities. Then come the things one would expect in a budget, such as productivity, economy and investment. Finance laws are being changed so that annual budgeting is now organised around wellbeing outcomes – “actually what the public is asking for”, as Prime Minister Jacinda Ardern has put it.

Wales has the same kind of values as New Zealand and other small countries actively developing wellbeing economics, such as Scotland and Iceland, as evidenced by the fact that we already have the Well-Being of Future Generations Act.

Independence would give us the controls of the economy needed to follow the trail that New Zealand is blazing.

If people really believed that a new economy would improve what they really care about – jobs, health, social connections, safety and housing – then they would be more likely to vote for it.

Duncan Fisher is a campaigner for child wellbeing and for climate change.

On 27th October, Astralship hosted 'Sgwrs Cymunedol', a community Unconference, facilitating local conversations around how our region transitions to sustainability. The event was organised by four local projects: Cae Mabon, Tyddyn Teg, Pandy farm and Astralship. The former three are land based projects that have been working in the area for many years while Astralship is a collective of changemakers seeking to catalyse systemic change through art and technology interventions. The group came together through a common appreciation of the idea that while our little corner of the UK is widely overlooked in the now failing industrial economic paradigm, the qualities of community, closeness to nature and cultural resilience that have kept the Welsh language alive here for millennia, might also be what's needed to make us a global leader in embodying a regenerative-sustainable future. That is if we work together as a region.

The road may be long and the hour late, but it's a road we must walk if we are to survive. It only makes sense to protest about the current system if we can describe a viable alternative vision. Using arguments from mythology to hard economics we believe this region can be an exemplar, and if enough people get onboard we could become the first large scale area in the world to become 'fully sustainable'. We know there's much work to be done to define what this means but that shouldn't stop us getting started. We can only begin grass roots action with conversation.

The Unconference format was new to most of the 30 or so participants. A type of self-organised conference where the participants decide what the discussions will be, it can also be thought of as a facilitated conversation between a larger group.

Asked what motivated him about the event, Ali from Pandy farm said, “Community conversation allows us to tell our story, including trauma and grief as well as joy and hope. Heartfelt sharing of our personal point of view can lead to healing and creativity and the birth of new ideas and a new story. This shared experience gives us inspiration and energy and can bring us together to face the world crisis.”

We began with some short opening talks. I introduced Astralship and gave some context and vision for why the group is gathering, and touched on the need for open source community communication platforms.

Eric from Cae Mabon (www.caemabon.co.uk) then spoke about ‘Old Gwynedd’; performing a recitation of his adaptation of the traditional text of Merlin’s Prophecy. The prophecy, despite being uttered in the 5th century and first written down in the 12th century, has an uncanny resonance and relevance in our current age.

There was an inspiring presentation via video link from environmental activist Nicola Peel, who established the South East Climate Alliance (seclimatealliance.uk). After a rousing rendition of Calon Lan, we then moved into the Unconference proper. Professional facilitators Manel Heredero and Francesca Pick from the... collective Ouishare had travelled up at their own expense to facilitate the day for us.

The group was soon scribbling down topic ideas on pieces of paper and the collective negotiated where and when conversations would take place so that everyone could participate in the conversations that mattered most to them. There were conversations about local food production, mythology, regional eco-tourism and new open source electronic devices that can help us save energy. Trystan Lea, known world-wide for his work on open energy monitoring, presented the software modelling tools he’s created that demonstrate what infrastructure would be needed to make a small region around Llanberis and Deiniolen carbon free in energy.

The day was indeed filled with conversations, not only in the sessions but around lunch. At the end our facilitators brought us all back together in a single circle and we shared. It felt we were one significant step closer to being a strong community ready to take on the global challenge.

We’re planning future events on the same subject. There is so much more to talk about. The current system is largely failing due to a lack of imagination. Our only hope is we learn to engage the brain and heart power of all members of society and find sustainable regenerative solutions. Not just for our energy needs, but for our communities, economy and wellbeing.

£130 million pounds is being spent on 6 miles of road around Caernarfon, not factoring in the environmental damage. Could we have found better ideas for this money? Perhaps factories employing people to make and repair electric bicycles for all who want them and new networks of cycle tracks and charging points would have been a better spend for our budget?

Overworked bureaucrats are unlikely to come up with all the answers. We need to source ideas from communities and enable them to deliver them. The current system is not going to do it for us. The existential risks we face are very real, and our chance to overcome them may be slim. Fundamentally we must ask if not now, when? If not us, who? and if not here, where?

Astralship’s mission is to facilitate positive change through art, technology and design interventions.

Anyone who has garden space to look after knows how much effort is needed if you want to feel like you are in control! So when it comes to look after our 2 acres, I could easily panic about the encroaching rosehip bushes and the grass being everywhere, without the use of various machinery and all hands on deck! The previous steward, was a genius at constructing little areas for plantlife, looking after the ponds and indeed created the stream from the spring that created the ponds and brought about an abundance of wildlife. So I want to honour this. But I’m mostly at a loss in doing so and end up pottering around, cutting this and chopping off that with a mini-strimmer in the name of order. It was during the nasty frog incident one day that I decided from now on I would only use scissors - or shears if needed. And this change definitely felt like a more harmonious way to be in nature.

Back in the 70s, mystic teacher, Ram Dass wrote a book called Be Here Now. It was about finding the jewel in the lotus through meditation, breath and yoga. It was about being only what you are. If you are what you are, then I am a tortoise at heart; naturally, happily and eternally slow. I try to go at the pace that suits me so I don’t feel anxious or stressed unnecessarily. This is not to say that now and again I don’t run around madly, letting off steam and raging.

After having buried Froggy with full honours and much repentence, so began the slow gardening. Nowadays, I sit on a mat on the ground, shuffle around on my backside and, in the process of giving the grass a haircut with my Luddite equipment, have conversations with tiny frogs (relatives?), countless insects, spiders, worms, beetles, easily miserable bright little meadow flowers, and feel the different textures of various grasses and hear the birdsong above. I experience a greater acknowledgement of what makes up the garden. My tortoise-like nature was really enjoying the pace!

What I hadn’t appreciated before was that the beautiful adult hare (we named Hoppy) which came to live with us about October last year, uses the grass to run through, seek shelter from the winds and give birth in. In turn she honoured us by spending much of the winter under a bush just outside the front window, not more than 5 feet away. The memory of spending hours watching her sleeping, washing and munching may well be the prize for allowing her - and all the other beasties - long grass to run around in, for not disturbing their garden. It’s slow gardening, in honour of Hoppy, Beetle and Froggy. It allows the grass to be the grass and for everything around it to grow at the rate that it grows, including me; the gardener becomes the garden. In the same way that a Hare becomes almost invisible to a predator’s eye if it makes like a rock.

It has given me a purpose not based on getting somewhere but in being somewhere; a genuine little community of various kingdoms. The interdependence is tangible and brings alive the ‘jewel(s) in the lotus; or Happy, Healthy and Holy, as we like to call Hoppy’s 3 leverets.

What is your vision?
The Libra Centre of Penmaenmawr
A Spiritual Meeting House.

A place to meet like minded people.
A place for study.
A place for mediation.
A place for rest and retreat.
A place for fun.
A place for solace.

Do your Spiritual beliefs leave you feeling isolated and alone? Are you seeking the love and companionship of others with similar yearnings but finding only ridicule and dismissal? The Libra Centre seeks to end that by providing a safe place to meet and talk openly with no fear of being looked on as strange but welcomed and encouraged to share your thoughts and beliefs. As we learn from each other, free from dogma, our hearts and minds can sour to the beautiful heights of spiritual fulfilment. So join us and give and receive nourishment for the soul.

Find out more by visiting www.libracentre.com/about

Anj Smith  Until 1st March. Working primarily with painting, Anj Smith is interested in reflecting on the very possibilities and limitations of the medium itself. Her work excavates often-overlooked art histories, which she combines with her lived experiences, to form the layers of her work. Exploring the very edges of representation, Smith’s intricate rendered paintings explore issues of identity, eroticism, mortality and fragility. Mostyn, Llandudno LL30 1AB. 01492 879201, mostyn.org

Neil Bottle ~ All That Remains  Until 12th January. Neil’s work is inspired by family photographs, a sense of time passing and how we remember things – in both real and false memories. The textile prints are accompanied by personal, sentimental objects that were the starting point for many of the stories Neil is telling – ‘I like the idea of objects that have history embedded in them,’ he says. Ruthin Craft Centre, LL15 1BB. 01824 704774, ruthincraftcentre.org.uk

Folklore & Fairytales of North Wales  Until 5th January. An autumn and winter mixed exhibition by a group of artists depicting their interpretations of the Folklore and Fairytales that surround us in North Wales. Open: Tues & Thurs, 10am - 5pm, Sun 11.30am - 4.30pm. Oriel Ty Meirion, Dyffryn Ardudwy LL44 2DH. More information at tymeirion.co.uk

Kate Pasvol ~ Welsh Walks  Until 4th December. A glass artist whose roots and inspiration are in Wales. Recent work is made up of single and multiple glass blocks containing layered three dimensional images that reflect the Welsh landscapes from memories of her own walks in Wales. Glass allows Kate to experiment with light, texture and tactility in fascinating ways. Ffin y Parc, Llanrwst LL26 0PT, 01492 642070, welshart.net

Crossing Beaches ~ Croesi Traethau  Until 19th January. The Sian and Ken Owen Art Collection featuring over 80 paintings of Wales’ foremost artists. Oriel Kyffin Williams, Llangefni, Anglesey 01248 724444, oriel@ynysmon.gov.uk

Nobuko Tsuchiya: 30 Ways to Go to the Moon  Until 1st March. Working primarily with sculpture, Tsuchiya’s practice uses a wide range of materials, often including household objects, collected over time, which she assembles and casts to create amorphous, hybrid minimalist mechanical objects. Mostyn, Llandudno LL30 1AB. 01492 879201, mostyn.org

Lettering: Art & Illusion  Until 12th January. The work depicts lettering that is created by hand through calligraphy, letter cutting, painting and engraving. Ruthin Craft Centre, LL15 1BB. 01824 704774, ruthincraftcentre.org.uk

Bill Kneale ~ Viewpoints/Golygfannau  Until 9th February. “My paintings are visual journeys mostly into the mountains and coast of North Wales.” Oriel Ynys Mon, Anglesey 01248 724444, kyffinwilliams.info

Chiara Camoni  Until 1st March. Working primarily across drawing, sculpture and installation, Camoni creates spaces imbued with poetic sensibility. Mostyn, Llandudno LL30 1AB. 01492 879201, mostyn.org
Josie Russell 2nd December - 6th January. Textiles, embroidery and sewing visions of local landscapes. Oriel Ynys Mon, Llangefni 01248 724444, kyffinwilliams.info

As It Is: Man’s Footprint on the Welsh Landscape
Until 26th January. Celebrated photographer David Hurn is one of Britain’s most influential reportage photographers. Of Welsh descent, Hurn gained his early reputation with his reportage of the 1956 Hungarian revolution. He eventually turned away from coverage of current affairs, preferring to take a more personal approach to visual narration. Mostyn, Llandudno LL30 1AB. 01492 879201, mostyn.org

Cywrain: Land ~ Tir
Until 5th January. The Cywrain space will be showcasing a variety of makers from Wales, Ireland, and Scotland. Whose work is influenced by the material from the land or by its form, movement and colour from nature to our epic mountainous landscape. From traditional crafts to contemporary our ‘Cywrain’ showcases will suit a vast audience. All items for sale. Galeri, Caernarfon 01286 685222, galericaernarfon.com

Wil Rowlands ~ Erosion
Until 4th January. Wil explores the erosion of things we see and of things we feel, and considers the consequence of that change. At the heart of his way of working lies experimentation that often leads the artist and viewer to the unexpected. Open Tues - Sat, 11am - 5pm. Storiel, Bangor LL57 1DT, 01248 353368, storiel.org

North Wales Potters
Until 25th December. Fifteen members of North Wales Potters are exhibiting their work. Open 10am - 5pm daily (closed Tues) free entry. Plas Glyn y Weddw, Llanbedrog, Pwllheli LL53 7TT, 01758 740763, oriel.org.uk

Made in Chester ~ Art by Nicky Thompson
Until 15th March. the new series of 1930s-style art pieces featuring iconic Chester views. Grosvenor Museum, Chester 01244 972197.

Owain Fôn Williams ~ Snippets of Life / Tameidiau Bywyd
Until 4th January. Portraying everyday simple things, people at work or at leisure, within a sense of community fundamental to all. Storiel, Bangor LL57 1DT, 01248 353368, storiel.cymru

Gaeaf ~ Winter
Until 21st December. We welcome winter in, with a fabulous, eclectic array of art, showcasing work from Wales’ finest leading and emerging artists. There is a wide selection of affordable works for sale off the wall. RCA Conwy LL32 8AN, 01492 593413, rcaconwy.org

Sampler Prints / Printiau Sampler
16th December - 31st January. Documenting an exploration into quilt inspired prints, an opportunity to develop and further the practice through a variety of printmaking techniques such as collographs, wood cuts and blind embossing combining form, texture and colour with heritage and nostalgia. Galeri, Caernarfon 01286 685222, galericaernarfon.com

Bagpipes ~ Bagbibau
20th December - 31st January. Artist, musician and instrument maker Alan Ginsberg’s eclectic mix of traditional and folk instruments from Wales and Europe are on display alongside his painting and drawings. These paintings show that the instruments still form part of the lively, vibrant culture. Official opening on 20th December, 6.30pm. Galeri, Caernarfon 01286 685222, galericaernarfon.com

Dan Wood ~ Gap in the Hedge
Until 31st December. This series of photographs not only attempts to document the beauty of this iconic piece of South Wales landscape, but also explores the relationship that the people - whether locals, tourists or workers - have with the landscape and environment. And ultimately, what lies ahead for this part of South Wales following Brexit and the abolition of EU funding. Oriel Colwyn, upstairs at Theatr Colwyn, Abergele Rd., LL29 7RU, 01492 577888, orielcolwyn.org

Niall McDiarmid ~ State of Independents
A new set of portraits to shine a light on and celebrate our Independent Traders and Shopkeepers based in and around Colwyn Bay, Old Colwyn and Rhos on Sea. 24 large scale portraits displayed in the six promenade shelters between Rhos on Sea and Old Colwyn with each shelter exhibiting two portraits on either side, the project links the town together via photography. e-Petition: The Climate Emergency and a National Forest for Wales

We call on the National Assembly for Wales to urge the Welsh Government to urgently increase tree cover to help address this climate emergency & the well documented collapse of nature.

The Welsh Government’s ‘State of Natural Resources Report’ said no ecosystems in Wales are resilient.

We need more trees in urban & rural areas to address high levels of air pollution, lessen heatwaves & floods, increase wildlife & create a carbon store above & below ground.

Rivers, hedgerows & verges can provide quality habitat connectivity, these criss-cross Wales from mountains to coast. Many have biodiversity rich ancient woods, meadows & marshes alongside them, but their range & quality has massively declined in the last 50 years.

Our rivers are healthiest when bordered by wide strips of lightly grazed broadleaf woodland river banks. Trees provide some dappled shade keeping rivers cool & protecting them from pollutants, reducing unsustainable soil loss, whilst helping to keep farmers on the land.

To help nature recover we need to recreate more wildlife friendly landscapes by creating more & healthier interconnecting habitats. Placed & funded correctly, a new national forest can deliver many solutions for all future generations, a more ‘resilient Wales’.

We call for a comprehensive strategy to deliver:

- an increase of 5000 hectares per year in tree cover in urban areas, on farms, & in the uplands
- tree cover that is at least 50% native broadleaf trees, best for biodiversity, & public well-being
- sustainable management of existing trees, forests, woodland & hedges, to protect them from damage & provide a mixed mosaic of habitat for wildlife & people
- new funding for farmers for ‘Hedges & Edges’ & traditional woodland pasture - agroforestry
- funding for community tree nurseries, for people to be involved in finding sites, planting, & growing trees right across Wales
- a truly national & innovative ‘National Forest for Wales’

We provide funeral, burial and dedication services in a peaceful woodland setting.

This autumn is spectacular! Yes, the recent weather may have been dire but the colours are glorious. The beeches are particularly lovely this year, all tawny and gold. And there’s so much fruit, so many fungi, so many nuts - I’ve never known an autumn like it. Birds, squirrels and mice will all be stuffing themselves, growing fat and storing food to survive the winter.

We are lucky, here on Pen Llyn. We had a warm summer but we didn’t break any temperature records. We’ve had quite a lot of rain but nothing extraordinary. We’re not likely to get much snow or ice: we don’t get extreme weather. And that must be good for wildlife.

The wood gets so many visitors now that we don’t see many wild animals. I’m sure they’re there, but sensibly, they hide from us - apart from the robins, of course, who join us every time we work there. But ducks don’t try to hide. Where they came from, I don’t know; Julie counted twenty of them. Of those, two, sadly, perished on the road, and two stayed to quack at us in the car park. I tried to persuade them to go somewhere safer, terrified that they would also be squashed, but they refused to co-operate. We were happy to see that there were no more dead ducks on the road the next day, so we hope they have survived.

Pheasants, too, seek sanctuary in the wood. They won’t get shot there, though they may well get eaten by foxes; but foxes, too, are entitled to eat. Personally, I’d rather a pheasant provided a meal for a fox than got shot.

How often have I said in these newsletters that we have been busy? It’s become a cliche. But now we are busy as never before: more people know we exist so more are booking plots for themselves, their dogs, their loved ones… We’ve been doing a lot of burials over the last few weeks and I have a feeling that this is how it’s going to continue. But as I get older and less energetic, younger people arrive, people who are attracted to the vision of the Eternal Forest and who want to work for us. This is wonderful. It means I can delegate, and that we have backup for essential jobs such as grave-digging. So while you may see the people who’ve worked for years in the wood, like Julie or Dave or me, you are increasingly likely to meet new people: Phil, Liam, Julia. I am particularly happy to welcome people a generation or two younger than myself, for they are the future.

Soon we shall be calling for volunteers. The winter felling season is almost here and we have Plans. With the ever-increasing demand for burial plots, we are working hard to open up new areas and there will be tree-felling and brashing days to which we shall invite all those who feel able to join in with physical work on rough ground. The dates aren’t fixed yet but we’ll let you know as soon as they are.

In the meantime, our regular calendar continues. I shall be in the wood for the afternoon of Sunday November 24th, hoping I’ll have company to clean out nest boxes. On the following Sunday, 1st December, Billy Bodger will be doing green woodworking. And on the first Sunday in January, which will be the 5th, we shall celebrate the New Year. Do come and join us!

Economists, for obvious reasons, can’t be completely oblivious to the role of banks, but they have spent much of the twentieth century arguing about what actually happens when someone applies for a loan. One school insists that banks transfer existing funds from their reserves, another that they produce new money, but only on the basis of a multiplier effect (so that your car loan can still be seen as ultimately rooted in some retired grandmother’s pension fund).

Only a minority - mostly heterodox economists, post-Keynesians, and modern money theorists - uphold what is called the “credit creation theory of banking”: that bankers simply wave a magic wand and make the money appear, secure in the confidence that even if they hand a client a credit for $1 million, ultimately the recipient will put it back in the bank again, so that, across the system as a whole, credits and debts will cancel out. Rather than loans being based in deposits, in this view, deposits themselves were the result of loans.

The one thing it never seemed to occur to anyone to do was to get a job at a bank, and find out what actually happens when someone asks to borrow money. In 2014 a German economist named Richard Werner did exactly that, and discovered that, in fact, loan officers do not check their existing funds, reserves, or anything else. They simply create money out of thin air, or, as he preferred to put it, “fairy dust.”

That year also appears to have been when elements in Britain’s notoriously independent civil service decided that enough was enough. The question of money creation became a critical bone of contention. The overwhelming majority of even mainstream economists in the UK had long since rejected austerity as counterproductive (which, predictably, had almost no impact on public debate). But at a certain point, demanding that the technocrats charged with running the system base all policy decisions on false assumptions about something as elementary as the nature of money becomes a little like demanding that architects proceed on the understanding that the square root of 47 is actually π. Architects are aware that buildings would start falling down. People would die.

Before long, the Bank of England (the British equivalent of the Federal Reserve, whose economists are most free to speak their minds since they are not formally part of the government) rolled out an elaborate official report called “Money Creation in the Modern Economy,” replete with videos and animations, making the same point: existing economics textbooks, and particularly the reigning monetarist orthodoxy, are wrong. The heterodox economists are right. Private banks create money. Central banks like the Bank of England create money as well, but monetarists are entirely wrong to insist that their proper function is to control the money supply. In fact, central banks do not in any sense control the money supply; their main function is to set the interest rate - to determine how much private banks can charge for the money they create. Almost all public debate on these subjects is therefore based on false premises. For example, if what the Bank of England was saying were true, government borrowing didn’t divert funds from the private sector; it created entirely new money that had not existed before.
One might have imagined that such an admission would create something of a splash, and in certain restricted circles, it did. Central banks in Norway, Switzerland, and Germany quickly put out similar papers. Back in the UK, the immediate media response was simply silence. The Bank of England report has never, to my knowledge, been so much as mentioned on the BBC or any other TV news outlet. Newspaper columnists continued to write as if monetarism was self-evidently correct. Politicians continued to be grilled about where they would find the cash for social programs. It was as if a kind of entente cordiale had been established, in which the technocrats would be allowed to live in one theoretical universe, while politicians and news commentators would continue to exist in an entirely different one.

Still, there are signs that this arrangement is temporary. England—and the Bank of England in particular—prides itself on being a bellwether for global economic trends. Monetarism itself got its launch into intellectual respectability in the 1970s after having been embraced by Bank of England economists. From there it was ultimately adopted by the insurgent Thatcher regime, and only after that by Ronald Reagan in the United States, and it was subsequently exported almost everywhere else.

It is possible that a similar pattern is reproducing itself today. In 2015, a year after the appearance of the Bank of England report, the Labour Party for the first time allowed open elections for its leadership, and the left wing of the party, under Jeremy Corbyn and now shadow chancellor of the exchequer John McDonnell, took hold of the reins of power. At the time, the Labour left were considered even more marginal extremists than was Thatcher’s wing of the Conservative Party in 1975; it is also (despite the media’s constant efforts to paint them as unreconstructed 1970s socialists) the only major political group in the UK that has been open to new economic ideas. While pretty much the entire political establishment has been spending most of its time these last few years screaming at one another about Brexit, McDonnell’s office - and Labour youth support groups - have been holding workshops and floating policy initiatives on everything from a four-day workweek and universal basic income to a Green Industrial Revolution and “Fully Automated Luxury Communism,” and inviting heterodox economists to take part in popular education initiatives aimed at transforming conceptions of how the economy really works. Corbynism has faced near-histrionic opposition from virtually all sectors of the political establishment, but it would be unwise to ignore the possibility that something historic is afoot.

The Universal Declaration of Human Rights

Article 25: 1) Everyone has the right to a standard of living adequate for... health and well-being... including food, clothing, housing and medical care and necessary social services, and the right to security in the event of unemployment, sickness, disability, widowhood, old age or other lack of livelihood in circumstances beyond his control...

The whole thought-form about the global ecological crisis is becoming more and more crystallised now, because its spiritual counterpart is hardly mentioned in most activist circles and popular debates. I argue that climate change is the only teacher we currently have that is slowly uniting humanity together on a single issue, at least in a global and symbolic sense. But if we are to realise and truly demonstrate that humanity is one interdependent family, we cannot continue to ignore Article 25 as our foremost and dual priority in the fight to save our planet. It should be increasingly obvious to any engaged citizen or politician that the rapid safeguarding of Article 25 - which inherently calls for a massive redistribution of global resources and a wholesale restructuring of the international economic architecture - is absolutely linked to the solutions for climate change. For if there was even a modicum of social justice in this world through a fairer sharing of resources, if no person on earth continues to die of hunger or other poverty-related causes, then the weather would not be in such an imbalanced and chaotic state as today.

We can understand this logically and deductively in outer or policy-related terms, as per our reflections on civil society proposals for how governments should address the climate crisis through an equitable effort-sharing framework. But for a real and heartfelt understanding of the world's environmental problems we are called upon to engage with our inner awareness, our intuition, our compassion and our common sense, that is if we want to perceive for ourselves the significance of the great link between the hidden elements of nature and the aggregated thoughts and actions of humanity as a whole. Perhaps there is no other way to resolve the world's problems unless a major proportion of humanity first of all succeeds in engaging with the heart by heralding Article 25, which may be the only route to escaping the systemic impasse brought about by the current growth-based economic paradigm, one that we are all complicit in sustaining by our adherence to the forces of materiality and commercialisation.

So I believe it is of the utmost importance that we contemplate and heed the inner significance of implementing the principle of sharing into world affairs, which does indeed present a certain paradoxical difficulty as this requires us to examine these issues through the awareness of the heart, when the heart per se cannot be intellectualised. It therefore behoves us to reflect again with renewed attention, inwardly and quietly by ourselves, on how we need to integrate the principle of sharing into our global economic arrangements so that we can gain trust between the peoples of different nations, which will enable us to release the attributes of the heart much easier and faster in the time ahead.

Naturally, the forces of commercialisation stand opposed to the manifestation of love and wisdom in this world. But when the attributes of the heart are released on an unprecedented scale, then a new phenomenon will arise in our societies whereby the creativity of individuals will be tremendously enhanced; the tensions and stress in the world will dramatically decrease; the joy of living will become a palpable and universal reality; even the healing of diseases will take a new and more rapid course of advancement, due to the lessening of depression and psychological suffering in all its forms.

In short, the implementation of the principle of sharing among nations is our greatest hope and augur of a better world, not least with respect to the environmental crisis, as it will guide humanity to go in a different direction from the inner to the outer, from the spiritual heart centre to the consecrated mind, from our interior awareness of Life to the exterior balance of the world around us.

There is every reason for hope. Many people lost hope during the Second World War, and yet the allied powers won over the forces of darkness as manifested in the totalitarian regimes of Germany, Italy and Japan. Now we have to win over another dark and formidable power - and that is the forces of commercialisation which have increasingly gripped every society through an extreme market-oriented ideology that is leading our civilisation to destruction. It may seem as if we need divine intervention in order to transcend the coercive influence of these forces in every aspect of our lives, but we have defeated those materialistic forces once before, and we can defeat them twice. If need be, we can defeat them 10 times. Because if there are forces of darkness on this earth, there must surely be forces of Light. And we shall stand by those forces of Light once again, for the purpose of our existence is to spiritually evolve with dignity, equality and in freedom.

So my response to those people who doubt we will make it is: there is hope, great hope, that humanity can overcome this epochal crisis of our civilisation. We have not yet witnessed the power of sharing as a global phenomenon when it is expressed among millions upon millions of people through the heart with its attributes of love. And when the principle of sharing is genuinely incorporated into the policies of the world’s governments, then dramatic changes will begin to take place in our political and economic structures with a rapidity that may startle all of us. Thus we may finally understand that the greatest curse for nature, throughout all these centuries of exploitation and destruction, is that humanity has always refused to come together and act on behalf of the common good of all. For life is One, and man is Life itself; there is nothing more to say.

The Great Invocation

From the point of Light within the Mind of God
Let light stream forth into the minds of men.
Let Light descend on Earth.

From the point of Love within the Heart of God
Let love stream forth into the hearts of men.
May Christ return to Earth.

From the centre where the Will of God is known
Let purpose guide the little wills of men –
The purpose which the Masters know and serve.

From the centre which we call the race of men
Let the Plan of Love and Light work out
And may it seal the door where evil dwells.

Let Light and Love and Power restore the Plan on Earth.

UP TO US

Our democracy is precious. But right now, it's in a mess.

Thursday, 5 December 2019, 18:30 – 20:30, People's History Museum, New Court Street, Manchester, M3 3ER

The problems are there for all to see: in the chaos over Brexit, in our inability to respond to the climate crisis and in an economic system that keeps failing. These are all symptoms of the same disorder: the way we make decisions isn't working. Our democratic system is in urgent need of renewal.

That's why we've launched Up To Us, to make our democracy fit for the 21st Century. The campaign is already getting traction. Over 70 civil society organisations have signed the Up to Us statement, as well as a host of academics, writers, activists and social entrepreneurs.

Join us at the People's History Museum in Manchester - the national museum of democracy. We'll be joined by speakers from different backgrounds, united by their belief in the need to act now to renew our democracy: Eve Holt, DivaManc; Neil McInroy, CLES; Hazel Blears, Co-operative Group.

The event is free to attend and open to all - hope you can be part of it!

Join Rebels Beyond Borders on tour for COP25 climate conference in Madrid! #TiempoDeActuar

XR groups from 19 countries will make their way across Europe to join XR Spain in an international effort to bear witness to COP25 (United Nations Climate Conference), being held in Madrid on 2-13th December 2019.

At COP25, delegates will come together from all over the world to make commitments on how to implement the Paris Climate Agreement and accelerate the global response to the Climate and Ecological Emergency.

Rebels will raise the alarm with non-violent direct action to reach the hearts of those with the power to make systemic change on an international scale.

Expect a series of beautiful creative actions, including 'The Dead Sea March' and some lively ‘Civil Disco-bedience’. XR will also take part in the 'Social Summit for Climate', where 150 grassroots organisations will join together to prove that the people have the power!

If you can't make it to Madrid, that's okay! You can help by organising solidarity actions to draw attention to the Emergency and to discussions at COP25, wherever you are in the world. COP25 was set to take place in Chile, but due to the mass civil unrest it has been relocated to Europe at very short notice. This is a chance to show international solidarity for both our Chilense and Spanish rebels by coming together as citizens of the Earth during a critical moment in history.

Next year, COP26 will be hosted in Glasgow. Make no mistake, world leaders and corporations: we will continue to escalate our actions globally over the next 12 months until we see our international demands met.
