Welcome to a new year, a new decade and the January Network News. Fem’s glorious “love bomb” on the cover reminds us that we have not even begun to unleash the real power of our collective humanity. We need to use it now. COP25 failed. Politics has failed (apart from New Zealand, Finland, Costa Rica and a few other fortunate spots). Only the Heart can save us. Every wise Elder who ever walked the Earth knew that love, compassion and empathy were the things that make life possible in the long term. Yet, here we are, still arguing, confronting, choosing scapegoats, accusing others of ignorance and prejudice and greed. Social media has become a sort of “Armageddon App” - making it all too easy to be cruel, and to say things we would never say to someone’s face.

How to strengthen our own hearts? How to reach those whose hearts have yet to open - or have been closed by fear? We cannot open a closed heart by shouting at it… but perhaps we can by singing to it! Here at NN HQ we have found a few songs to help us along. We recommend the video of the late Leonard Cohen’s five minute life story “Happens To The Heart”. Also the 50-year-old saga song “The Weight“, sung by street musicians and a few famous faces filmed around the world by the charity Playing For Change. We were also inspired by the documentary “Pete Seeger: The Power Of Song” (available freely online) showing how a courageous soul influenced a whole generation of songsters, and contributed to transformative change throughout the world. His credo was: “If there’s a future, it won’t be because of big organisations, the church or movements, but tens of thousands of little miracles and little efforts.”

The most important songs, of course, are the ones we learn “by heart”. Do check the listings to explore local singing groups. (Page 30)

Blessings to all beings
I did something I’d not done before on Election Day. Aberconwy is a marginal seat between the Tories and Labour. So I went down to the Llandudno Labour Club and, for a tokenistic three hours, helped ‘get the vote out’ for Emily Owen, the 25-year-old Labour candidate. She was there handing out red clipboards with maps, highlighted streets and addresses of people who’d said, during canvassing, they might vote Labour. We had to knock on their doors and ask if they’d voted yet – in the nicest possible way. In half the cases no one was home. In those who answered the response ranged from ‘Brexit, get it done’ to thumbs up, we’ve all voted Labour. I was a little concerned we were going to so few of the houses. But I was swept up in the adrenalin and optimism of the moment and went home that night hoping against hope.

By half past midnight I’d turned the radio off. I couldn’t bear to listen. And I’ve felt like that more or less ever since. There have been some positive FB postings and Guardian articles but I feel that many of us have taken a body blow and it’s going to take while to lick the wounds and pick up the pieces.

The night before the election – literally at the eleventh hour – I put out a FB post myself, perhaps trying to prepare for the worst. I concluded:

“Whatever happens tomorrow it’s important to remember that a huge reservoir of positivity, intelligence, love and creativity exists in these islands. It’s tempting to think you should all come to Wales; we’ll cast ourselves adrift from the ‘UK’ and create our own promised land! But the reality is we’re going to have to keep having conversations, not just between ourselves, but with those who see things differently: one to one, heart to heart, over and over. Might be hard. But it’s the only way to affirm our shared humanity and bridge the divisions with renewed hope.”

So conversation is part of the answer. For the last nine months a group of local friends and allies have been meeting together in what we’re simply calling ‘community conversation’. We wanted to talk about things that matter in a way we hadn’t done before. We wanted to share our passions and dreams as well as the solutions we’re forging. We wanted to join forces and raise our voices on the paths we’re making towards the ‘more beautiful world our hearts know is possible’. And we wanted to do it now. Now because our country’s politics are more threatening yet more full of potential for change than we remember. Now because a global uprising is gathering momentum to challenge the powers that propel us towards climate crisis and ecological collapse. Now because younger generations are urging us to act. Now because we’re grown up enough to take responsibility and want to do the best we can before it’s too late.

We’re glad to be living in northwest Wales. As far as London and Cardiff go, we’re an afterthought. Yet historically Gwynedd has been a centre of resistance. At our last conversation we agreed that change on the political front is now reduced for the foreseeable future. This makes what we’re doing more urgent. We feel strongly that we have to live how we want to live, not how ‘they’ want us to live. Social reliance on the state is going to get more difficult. We have to build from the ground up. This includes developing a local sustainable food system; creating a media communications platform independent of FB, Google et al; supporting the introduction of a local currency (the Celyn); working with sympathetic people in the Gwynedd Council; creating a map of all the sustainably oriented, eco-friendly initiatives in our region; facilitating the development of renewable energy; engaging with students and working with schools; promoting a positive vision of what’s possible; re-awakening and channelling the mythic power of this ancient landscape.

None of this is particularly new. It’s been going on in the Transition Town movement for years. But there’s a swelling energy behind this that does feel new. Although at the moment we’re keeping our meetings down to about a dozen we know that there are hundreds, perhaps thousands, out there of like mind.

In 2020 we will be joining up and moving from talk to action.

Eric Maddern is a storyteller, singer-songwriter, author of “Snowdonia Folk Tales” and founder of the beloved Cae Mabon Retreat caemabon.co.uk
The Centre for Alternative Technology (CAT) in Machynlleth was founded in 1973. That’s right, 1973! 46 years ago, people from many walks of life - including engineers, architects, builders and growers - were so aware of the ecological crisis, that they chose to uproot their lives and move to an abandoned quarry in wildest Wales to explore and design sustainable ways of living. Meantime, most of the human race just kept on bingeing, burning, warring and wasting.

Now, in 2020, millions, perhaps billions, around the world are waking up to the same realities as those early pioneers - but with 46 years more ecological damage to contend with, and still no coherent rescue plan.

IMPORTANT! The good people of CAT have just summarised the fruits of their long labours and experiments into a brilliant report that describes in nitty-gritty detail how Britain, at least, can stop yabbering on about reducing their emissions - and actually DO IT!

Power down
By insulating our homes and workplaces, by improving our public transport and cycle networks, we can make it easier to live healthier lives, reduce our emissions and rise to the climate emergency!

Power up

Zero Carbon Britain uses hourly modelling to show that it is possible to meet future energy needs with clean renewable energy and innovative storage solutions.

Capture carbon

By powering up renewable energy, powering down our usage and changing how we use land we can mop up any residual emissions by restoring peatlands and by doubling the area of forests.

Healthy happy lives

Addressing climate change will have many additional benefits. We’ll eat healthier, more balanced diets, breathe cleaner air, restore biodiversity and greatly benefit from many of the changes needed to make a sustainable, thriving economy.

Hwn ydy fy nghân i’r tywyllwch.
This is my song to darkness. My world is a lit-up place, darkness more scarce than before these electric times. At these latitudes, in these darkest of dark nights, I could have sixteen hours of dark a night. I don’t: the compulsion to turn on a light, a torch, a phone, robs me of the comfort and compost of the long night.

Yn y tywyllwch, mae ‘na ofn, ac ofnus yw’r tywyllwch.
In the darkness, there is fear, and darkness is feared. I don’t think of myself as anxious, yet I am. A rustling crowd of small anxieties shuffle in as I wake up, trailing behind me, “You’re not good enough. You’re not working hard enough. This, whatever-it-is, is not enough.” They hide in the shadows: shuffling, whispering and busying in the dark. Am I prey? Do they smell me? Are they big or small or demon-shaped?

Trwy’r twyllwch dwi’n syrthio a sythrio i’r lle isaf.
Through darkness I fall and fall to the lowest place. The rock-bottom bedrock beneath the soil: no light, no hope, dark like a cow’s stomach. Perhaps I cry, my tears watering this earthen place. Perhaps I don’t. Despair seeps through the spaces between my atoms, an en-darken-ment. “Will there be a tomorrow? Will it be cold enough, warm enough, dry enough, wet enough? Will the waters of the sea wash all this away?”

Yn y tywyllwch, dwi’n gorffwys.
In darkness, I rest. I stop fighting myself; I surrender. It’s rare and precious: dark, still, quiet rest. My limbs are heavy and I do not want to move them. It’s quiet like the grave. The shrieking brightness of siren screens and stay-alert notifications fade. The doubts and questions fade. Now silent gravity anchors me to the slow soft resting heartbeat of the soil and deeper.

O’r tywyllwch, dwi wedi fy ffurfio.
Of darkness I am now formed. With a mouth full of earth, I am among the fruits fallen to earth, and rotting. Oh the aching need to break down, to ferment, to allow the edges to fray, to allow disintegration. Let the worms in! I am welcomed by the sightless beings of the earth in a sisterhood of compost. A web of delicate fungus glows through me without light, a soft warmth of cellular interaction.

Eto o’r tywyllwch, dwi’n cael fy ngeni.
Yet of the darkness I am born. Somewhere in the deep surrendered forgetting of winter there is an impulse: something begins to push outward, to expand. A tiny seed reaches for an unimaginable dream of sun, of daylight, of arising.

Mi ddaw’r noson hir i’r ben.
The long night does end. Each year ends and begins. Through the rise and fall of empires, through the evolution and extinction of all beings, the sun rises again another day to this, or other, forms of life.

Behold, America: A History of ‘America First’ An evening with Sarah Churchwell. Join us for a fascinating insight into the history of ‘America First’, a favourite slogan of Donald Trump and his supporters. Although popular wisdom attributes the phrase to Charles Lindbergh and the isolationist ‘America First Committee’ of 1940-41, in fact the expression has a longer, darker history than that, a story of nativism and the Ku Klux Klan, of protectionism, ‘100% Americanism,’ and isolationism, and of a homegrown fascism that America continues to pretend ‘can’t happen here.’ Sarah Churchill is Professor in American Literature and Chair of Public Understanding in Humanities, Uni of London. “The Joker” has been one of the most successful movies of the year, and it couldn’t happen to a better actor… Joaquin Phoenix has been a committed vegan since he was 3 years old!

He recalls, “Really it was seeing these fish being killed when I was on a boat as a kid. I guess to stun them they were throwing them against the side of the boat. I just had a profound strong reaction. It felt like a real injustice. It wasn’t just me, it was my siblings, all of my siblings, except for the youngest, Summer, she wasn’t born. My mom was pregnant with her. I don’t know how to explain it. I think it made me distrustful, and angry, and frightened of humans, humanity. I just thought it was such a gross abuse of power in a way. I think that during that moment we knew that we were not going to eat meat anymore. We said to our parents, “Why didn’t you tell us?” It’s amazing. I remember my mom’s face, I remember her crying. She didn’t know how to answer. It became very obvious we weren’t going to eat meat anymore.”

“Then my brother, a few months later, said: ‘We shouldn’t be using dairy either. It’s not killing them, but …’ Then we became vegan and my sister Summer was born vegan.”

Joaquin has teamed up with Veganuary - a global organization encouraging people to try vegan in January and beyond - to encourage people to sign the 31-day plant-based pledge. This year, more than 250,000 people took part - with 350,000 sign-ups the goal for 2020.

"If you look at the climate crisis or the violence of our food system and feel helpless, thinking 'I wish there was something I could do' - you can. Right now. Sign up to try vegan this January,“

Toni Vernelli, Veganuary’s spokesman, added: "Each of us can help fight climate chaos with our fork. Signing up on the website is a fun and empowering way to tackle this serious global threat. All of our resources are completely free, friendly and supportive - so why not do your part for the planet and give it a go!"

Veganuary is expecting 2020 to be its biggest year yet, and as part of that, is planning to screen a pro-vegan advert on mainstream TV in the US, UK, and Germany between Christmas and New Year.

"In true Veganuary style the ad is fun, funny and non-judgmental, yet is guaranteed to make people question how comfortable they truly are with their food choices."

What is rentier capitalism today?
According to some economists it is a rigged system, supporting and extending the already unequal “market and political power of privileged individuals and businesses”. From the super-managers and technology billionaires who embody financialised capitalism, to the older money of landed elites, exercising power means leveraging excess rent into massive profits for the few, not the many, much as it always has done. In this book, Guy Standing, an emeritus professor at the University of London and founding member of the Basic Income Earth Network, examines how rentier capitalism in the UK has come to bury the idea of the commons in modern Britain, and what might be done about it.

A potted history of transformative moments takes off with the little-known Charter of the Forests (1217), as a model of public lands defended by right against the powerful. He then jumps to the mid-17th century and the evolution of arguments for private property and land enclosures. A whistle-stop tour through further enclosures in the 18th and 19th centuries follows, with a nod to the importance of the census of land ownership in 1873, which showed just how very much land in Britain was owned by so very few. Plus ça change. We see a slight reorientation in thinking about public land after the first world war, embodied in the Forestry Commission of 1919 and the evolution of bodies such as the National Trust, but this is all by way of introduction to showing how radical the implications of privatising and enclosing of the commons have been since the Reagan-Thatcher era.

The rest of the book puts forward arguments about how different ideas of the commons might inject some strength into the tatty fabric of our shared public lives. To see that requires a rolling back of the policies of privatisation, reviving older ideas about the commons as a shared set of resources whose use really can be structured for public benefit. It also means avoiding the intellectual shibboleth (paraded in Garrett Hardin’s 1968 essay The Tragedy of the Commons) that collective management schemes for common-pool resources are destined to fail. Standing not only wants to remind us how much common land in Britain has been enclosed by the wealthy few.

His vision of the commons is extremely capacious. From a defence of the BBC to individual ownership of personal data, he thinks the need to recapture the commons is existentially urgent. Our world is severely skewed, he argues, when tech moguls find the biggest threat to their continued harvesting of data for profit is human “sleep”; where the climate crisis offers exciting opportunities to those seeking to capture global intellectual property rights for blue growth from the... oceans, and our universities have become big commercial enterprises. This is the backdrop against which Standing presents his case for how we might revalue the commons against the meritocratic bromides of rentier capitalism.

All forms of rentier income arising from private ownership of physical, financial and intellectual property should be subject to a discrete levy, held in a commons fund, from where it should be shared. Readers may question the viability of his claims, and like most examples of the genre, the manifesto paints in broad brushstrokes. But unlike most, Standing provides some intellectual under-armour, backing things up for several hundred pages before you get to the 44 articles of his manifesto.

These propose taking back control of what once were natural commons in land, with compulsory land registration and a new census detailing ownership. His social vision prioritises the basic right to a home, funds for shared housing for the homeless, a rolling back of privatisation and a revival of local co-operatives. This flows into the civil, where access to legal aid and probation services are enshrined, while the knowledge commons guarantees individual control over the use of personal data.

The commons fund provides universal basic income as an economic right. Standing’s idea of the commons doesn’t mean a public free-for all. It needs political imagination to defend such ideas, and practical will to make them into realistic options. His provocation could hardly be timelier.

I’m Off To Heaven
Passing on when my time has come.
when i love Nature, when i love the Weather when i have a passion for Meteorology and Geography a passion for Astronomy and Photography a passion for Science, Technology, History and Philosophy a passion for Computer Synthesizer Sounds, CGI Animation and Poetry when i love the wild Animals and the Marine and Avian species from Dolphins to Robins, all the Insects, the Birds and the Bees when i love the beauty of Planet Earth the Oceans, the Mountains, the Plants, the Flowers, the Trees when i love the spectacle of the Aurora Borealis and the Milky Way in some ways, in many ways i can’t wait to become part of the Whole that is Universal Life with the awe and wonder of the Cosmic Questions of the mystery of Fractals, the Atom, the Body and the Brain the enigma of the Pineal Gland... the all seeing Eye taking a moment to take it all in... to slowly breath in... and out again... to respect the consistency and stability of this Ball in the Sky i’m off to Heaven to explore the Solar System looking forward to passing on when my time has come take a last breath to this Life of trials and tribulations to Bills and more Bills, Dentists, Doctors, Surgery’s and Hospitals to Global Warming, Nuclear Radiation, Smart Motorways and Vehicle Pollution to CCTV Surveillance, Smart Phones, and Social Media but a sad farewell to Family and Friends, Love and Hugs and Smiles and Conversation to Work and Business and Song and Dance, Food, Drink and Celebration to the joy of Nature, the Sky and the Countryside wonderful... beautiful... i can turn to my Sacred One with a High Five i been blessed with this Adventure and Experience no need for fear, or panic, no need to be shy when i’m obviously part of something so much bigger than this Body and Brain, this Heart and Soul
i been blessed not to worry that my physical body will eventually die i been blessed to have a good Life on this Earth with the chance to become older and wiser, some say old and wise wise enough to know when it’s time to go i can smile and chill and take a sigh that this is the one journey i don’t have to pack for when i can spread my wings... and fly

Though ruled by the same planet as the last solar month, Capricorn, Aquarius has a tinge of boredom with things as they are, and wants to see things differently. There is a spark of promise in the air, for the light is increasing: yet it is too early, and winter is still here.

While our eyes are looking afar, our feet haven’t moved. Aquarius seeks to change convention with ideas of a new social contract, of future possibilities. A restlessness grows: Aquarius seeks to encourage everyone to do their own thing, together, for then it can do its own thing too.

A heady time, where collective values can override individual ones, Aquarius is a time for concerted action, aimed toward an ideal goal. But it does have some difficulty accepting the isnesses of life: they ought to be different!

Inevitably whenever one begins any project there are going to be unforeseen difficulties and problems ahead - no matter how good the planning. The time of Aquarius represents the period in any project when new ideas of how to do things come to us. It is the time when necessity demands invention. Usually it is just when a project is floundering that we suddenly get new inspiration and fresh insights. The pressures of necessity and contingency are required to galvanize the deeper levels of creativity within us. Often this will only happen when things are at their darkest, at their lowest ebb.

The time of Aquarius is in the middle of winter, during the cold months of late January and early February. Used wisely this can be the most inventive time of the year and give rise to something quite new that will manifest in the following spring and summer. It is also the time when we are most prone to depression, hence the high suicide rate at this time of year.

Its purpose is for us to take a fresh look at life and seek new and inventive ways of solving whatever problems we have become aware of in the last months inspection.

I find it interesting that these months of Saturn, Capricorn and Aquarius are actually the greatest progenitors of change. If we look at the Tree of Life we find Saturn as Binah, the Great Mother. Necessity (Saturn) is the Mother (Binah) of Invention (Aquarius).

The Project
The Gwynedd community electric car share project is managed by Arloesi Gwynedd Wledig and has two main aims: 1. To trial a community car share model in rural communities and see if it helps people who are currently isolated through lack of public transport to access local services and facilities. 2. To raise awareness of electric cars and promote sustainable transport options for locals and visitors.

The Cars
The cars “Carwen” and “Carwyn” are 40kWh Nissan LEAFs. They are 5 door, 5 seater cars with a good amount of boot space. They have an average range of 110-150 miles per charge, depending on driving style and conditions (e.g. cold/wet/windy weather). Drivers that stay light on the accelerator and keep the power gauge in eco mode will get the upper end of that range spectrum – or more!

The Communities
For the first year of the project “Carwen” is based in Bethesda, with its own dedicated parking place and charger at the Lyfrgell/Library. It is managed for the community by local social enterprise Partneriath Ogwen. For more information about them, “Carwen” or getting involved as a volunteer community driver contact Huw Davies on huw@ogwen.org.

For the first year of the project “Carwyn” is based in Abergynolwyn, with its own dedicated parking place and charger at the Canolfan/Community centre. It is managed for the community by Egni Abergynolwyn Energy, a registered Community Benefit Society. For more information about them, “Carwyn” or getting involved as a volunteer community driver visit abergynolwynccarclub.wales or contact Steve Beech abergynolwynccarclub@gmail.com

For the second year of the project the cars will go to two new communities. If you are part of a community group in Gwynedd and are interested in applying to have “Carwen” or “Carwyn” autumn 2020 to 2021, please get in touch with Arloesi Gwynedd Wledig for more details

The Libra Centre of Penmaenmawr
A Spiritual Meeting House.

A place to meet like minded people.
A place for study.
A place for mediation.
A place for rest and retreat.
A place for fun.
A place for solace.

Do your Spiritual beliefs leave you feeling isolated and alone? Are you seeking the love and companionship of others with similar yearnings but finding only ridicule and dismissal? The Libra Centre seeks to end that by providing a safe place to meet and talk openly with no fear of being looked on as strange but welcomed and encouraged to share your thoughts and beliefs. As we learn from each other, free from dogma, our hearts and minds can sour to the beautiful heights of spiritual fulfilment. So join us and give and receive nourishment for the soul.
